Winterson's Seed Store is keeping up a fair degree of activity handling plants, principally ferns.

George Reinberg's orchids are giving eminently satisfactory results to date.

The downtown retailers are nearly all closing at 7 p. m.

The Market.

Despite the fact that we are right in the midst of summer, business has been quite brisk with most of the florists. Of course there are some dull days, but on the whole indications are that July will foot up better than for some years.

Roses are still of pretty fair quality and the supply is about equal to the demand. Carnations seem to be on their last notch; those still on the market are small and have weak stems. Sweet peas were somewhat of a glut last week. Some fine outdoor peas are on the market. The first asters of the season put in their appearance Saturday, July 13. The outlook is bad for the aster supply. Many growers report serious loss of crops. Peonies are over for this season; the last were taken out of cold storage July 19. There seemed to be little demand for peonies this year, compared with former years. Smilax is plentiful; ferns are also coming in large quantities.

Club Meeting.

The last meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club, held Wednesday, July 17, was well attended, considering the hot weather. The names of Albert A. Frey, of Highland Park, and Frank Walling, of Greenfield, were proposed for membership. Convention matters were discussed. It was left to Wm. Dilger to look up rates. A program was arranged for the club's annual outing, to take place August 9, at Bois Blanc island. R. C. Whitehill, of the Hammond Paint Works, was a visitor at the meeting. He donated a 5-gallon pail of either paint or putty for the club's outing. A liberal sum was also allowed the entertainment committee out of the club's funds, to be expended for prizes. Mr. Scribner made a motion to close the stores on the day of the outing, but this did not meet with the approval of the rest of the members.

Every member should attend the next meeting, August 7. The election of officers will be the main thing on the program and we want the voice of every member.

outing will be held Friday, August 9, at Bois Blanc island. Besides the usual program of games and dancing, the entertainment committee has arranged for a ball game between the east siders and west siders. The west siders will be captained by ex-President Ed Beard, against Captain W. B. Brown, of the east siders. Take the steamer Columbia at the foot of Bates street. It leaves at 8:45 a. m. and 3 p. m. devote all his time to the florists' business. It is Mr. Rosser's intention to put up some more glass at his present place, 270 Maybury avenue.

Alfred Roegner, of Troy, Mich., is sending in a fine lot of sweet peas in white, pale pink and pale lavender colors.

Frank De Beul has opened a retail store at the corner of Canfield and Russell streets, where he hopes to do a nice business.

The Detroit Cut Flower Supply House is handling some unusually fine Brides and Maids—at least unusually fine for this time of the year.

Indications are that Detroit will be well represented at Philadelphia. Much interest is being taken in this year's convention by the Detroit florists and about twenty-five people—florists and their wives—are already sure of attending.

The Michigan Funeral Directors' & Embalmers' Association held its twenty-ninth annual convention in Detroit July 16-18. Officers were elected as follows: President, C. E. Stringer, Hinsdale; vice-presidents, J. T. Caldwell, Battle Creek, and A. H. Haiste, Sault Ste. Marie; secretary, J. H. McIntyre, Grand Rapids; treasurer, Fred G. Marshall, Detroit.

PHILADELPHIA.The Rising Eastern Market.

The current week, July 18 to 24 inclusive, opened with a holiday that was neither on the church or state calendar. It was, nevertheless, almost universally observed in honor of the Elks' parade, and its observance completely upset the light business that prevailed during the preceding days. Monday opened well, conditions being reversed from those of the two preceding business days. The heat and deluge of Saturday had their effect.

Sweet peas were extremely scarce, stock of quality being eagerly sought, with but little success. Asters are becoming more plentiful; some fairly good shipments from distant points have arrived. The cry in early July is for asters, in late July for Semple asters, the retailers recognizing that it takes quality to create demand. Carnations have been scarce, really good flowers being sought. Roses, when they have any substance, are selling, but a great many of them have no substance whatever.

Speaking generally, the demand is fair for the season. When it is possible to get good flowers to market in good condition they are apt to sell. But the "ifs" in both places are large "ifs" indeed.

Peonies from cold storage are still an important factor. They can be had in quantity; that is, the colored sorts. White are less abundant. There is some demand for them. Prices rule low.

The Coming Convention.

Preparations for the August convention are more active on every side. William J. Stewart, president of the S. A. F., paid a flying visit to this city last Saturday to attend the meeting in connection therewith. The finance and executive committees held meetings on Tuesday, while the vacancies in the entertainment committee have been filled and the members are hard at work perfecting plans.

Jos. Heacock, chairman of the hotel committee, has prepared a neat little map of Philadelphia, showing all the principal points in the central part of the city, which will be printed in the trade papers and distributed among the members on their arrival.

It has been learned that the court of honor will remain for another convention to be held the last week in August, and the street is confident that if President Samuel S. Pennock, supported by a good delegation, will call on Mayor John E. Reyburn, the court of honor will be lit on the opening night of our convention.

Unnamed but Not Unknown.

Benjamin Hammond, secretary of the American Rose Society, has stored away in his official desk a certificate of merit for a certain cheerful pink rose that scored eighty-one points at Washington last March. This certificate will be forthcoming when the rose for which it is intended has been named. This rose is the property of Myers & Samtman, of Wyndmoor, and is this season being planted in quantity. One buyer engaged the entire stock last week, proving that the public is eager for roses of merit. The rose, as REVIEW readers know, is a cross of P. H. Meehan's, made when he was foreman for Myers & Samtman. The parents are, I think, American Beauty and Safrano and the color is a cheerful pink about the shade of Bon Silene. It is beautiful as a bud and perfect as a full blown rose.

Five thousand plants will be benched, the old plants being lifted and replanted, while the young stock, which has been planted out in benches close together during the last month, has just been lifted and set in its winter quarters. It is probable that the E. G. Hill Co. will catalogue this promising variety next season.

The Elks' Parade.

The wonderful parade of the Elks was of interest to florists in two of the displays, which proved the hold that plants and flowers have secured in the hearts of our people. One was a number of large flower pots, the flower in each pot being represented by a lovely lady. This represented Pottstown. The other was a collection of American Beauties—the drug store kind were needed to withstand the torrid heat—and with them many girlish

Corrections.

It might have been said most truly last week that the mighty have fallen under the fair hand that makes it possible to read my notes, for were not Dreer's hydrangeas covered with a miscellaneous lot of "trash," a thing never dreamed of in that neat place, whereas it should be sash?

And, were not the vast plantings of American Beauties at the Florex Gardens reduced by a cipher, a mere nothing, so that 45,000 became a paltry 4,500?

Forgive her, kind reader, as I do, for without her aid the easy task of recording the weekly doings in the floral world of the city of brotherly love would soon become wearisome drudgery.

Various Notes.

The supplementary list of florists who attended the Elks' convention is furnished from the register of H. Bayersdorfer & Co. They are C. Warnicke, Detroit, Mich.; Phil. Hauswirth and Mrs. Hauswirth, Chicago; D. E. Gorman, Williamsport, Pa.; W. Tillon and Miss Tillon, Baltimore, Md.; Steven Quimer and Mrs. Quimer, Brookline, Mass.; Steven Moore, Mrs. Moore and their son, New Haven, Conn.; C. B. Bratton, Lewistown, Pa.; G. W. Smith and Miss Smith, Baltimore, Md.; Chas. Schmidt, Harrisburg, Pa.; Fred Bester, Hagerstown, Md.; Mrs. Masser, Reading, Pa.; Lloyd Blick, Norfolk, Va.; Miss Edith Campbell, Shamokin, Pa.; Wm. Yeager, Norristown, Pa.; Geo. Huseroft, Steubenville, Ohio; Geo. Siddons, Baltimore, Md.; Wm. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.; Jack Delay, Boston, Mass., and Mr. Baur, of Baur Floral Co., Erie, Pa.

Edward Reid says come to the convention if you want to have a good time, and it may be a hot time. Every Elk will testify to the truth of this assertion.

Frank Salter died a few days ago. He was buried at 10 o'clock on Thursday from his late residence, 218 Franklin street, Quakertown, Bucks county, Pa. Mr. Salter shipped his flowers to Berger Bros.

The Henry F. Michell Co. is contemplating an addition in the shape of a gallery which will cover the entire shipping department on the first floor, giving considerable extra space. Fred J. Michell, treasurer of the company, states that a souvenir for the convention delegates is being prepared.

M. Rice & Co. are working overtime shipping orders. July business is already certain to be larger than for the corresponding month of any previous year.

The illustration in this issue gives an excellent view of H. Bayersdorfer's fine new building at 1129 Arch street, Philadelphia. Both partners may be seen in front, Mr. Bayersdorfer on the right of the picture, Mr. Berkowitz with several near him. Sidney Bayersdorfer, Mr. Reukauf and Mr. McKeefery are also present. On the top of the building is the famous paint shop and drying room, where it is proposed to hold roof garden receptions during the convention.

A letter from Bar Harbor, Me., dated July 18, states that the peonies grown there for market are in full bloom.

George Rausch, whose quickness and taste have captivated the 400, is enjoying his vacation by the sea.

Henry Holland has acted as manager of the Century Flower Shop during the illness of Frank Gaul. Mr. Holland has put his heart into his work.

Victor Groshens, of Roslyn, has his new houses planted with Bride, Bridesmaid and Richmond. His place is a model.

Thomas Best is manager for J. J. Habermehl's Sons at the Bellevue-Stratford.

W. E. McKissick has early pink and white cosmos. Just think of it.

The bunting decorations in honor of the Elks have been general among our stores, which vied with each other in the richness of the effects. Some even added electrical displays.

When a man gets his offer into the classified department of the REVIEW he wants to be careful or his stock will all be sold and he will have nothing left but empty houses to take care of. CARE OF VEGETABLE HOUSES.

The Three Essential Elements.

Taking it for granted that the houses are good and the soil properly prepared, the next important task for the grower is to produce the atmospherical conditions most conducive to the growing of the different crops. This is the most important because it is why we build greenhouses—to create a condition of the atmosphere more favorable than the outside. We call ourselves growers, but in reality we are not. No man can make plants grow; nature does that. All we can do is to keep away their enemies and surround the plants with conditions most favorable to their growth.

The three things that go to make up the proper atmosphere are heat, ventilation and moisture, furnished by the heating pipes, the ventilators, and the hose. It may look simple to the beginner, but the old, experienced grower knows well the disaster that may occur by the misuse of any one of the three. This is where the man shows his ability as a grower, as it requires the most careful study of any part of the business. To be a successful grower one must have endless patience and untiring energy, and be always willing to sacrifice personal pleasures where they conflict with attention to the welfare of the plants.

I often think that we know much less than we think we know about what are the secrets of success in gardening, as we are continually advancing new theories that explode those on record and believed for many years by all members of the craft. We must all admit that we certainly do not know it all as yet, when we read that Thomas Edison, the inventor, who probably has studied deeper into his trade than any other living man, is quoted as saying that he estimates that we know about one-billionth of one per cent about anything.

But, to go back to the greenhouses again, I only mentioned the above to impress upon you that I think there are others who differ in opinion on the care of plants who may be right in their ideas, but by expressing our ideas for comparison, and weighing each carefully, we may come to conclusions that will be of benefit to all.

Next week we will give our experience on the matter of temperatures, air and moisture.

TOMATO BLIGHT.

We are sending some tomato leaves showing a fungus which is blighting our plants. Will you please inform us as to the best method of treating it and when to start with the treatment? A. B.

The leaves are badly affected by tomato blight, a disease not thoroughly understood and therefore difficult to handle. Spraying with Bordeaux mixture will check its spreading. The fact that it never causes any serious damage to outdoor tomatoes leads us to believe that it is caused by improper care inside. Watering should be done in such a way as not to wet the foliage, and ventilation should be attended to as carefully in late spring as in winter. In May and June, when the days get longer, the sun rises

RAWSON'S HOTHOUSE CUCUMBER

As a forcing Cucumber is one of the largest and most profitable crops of the Market Gardener, it is essential that the very best possible strain should be sown. With this idea in view we have made selections for the past few years from our Rawson's White Spine, which have resulted in a strain about two inches longer and a darker green in color, with a few light spines showing at blossom end. This new strain we confidently believe to be superior to any other on the market. The results we have had at our own greenhouses with the stock conclusively prove the above to be true. 1/2 oz., 35c; oz., 60c; 4 oz., $1.50; lb., $5.00.

STRIPED CUCUMBER BEETLE.

We are sending you by today's mail some specimen cucumber leaves that seem to be diseased. The trouble first starts on leaves towards the top of the vine and then the other leaves keep going, until the plant dies. This trouble is not serious, only a few vines having died from it. If you can tell us what the trouble is, we would thank you very much.

C. W. Z.

The cucumber leaves sent as sample do not seem to be diseased, simply dried up, and I think by the way the vines are affected, as described in the letter, that the striped cucumber beetle is responsible for the trouble, not by what the insect does when in the winged state, but when in the form of a tiny worm. The mature insect lays its eggs at the root of the vine, and when the eggs are hatched into the form of a worm, they penetrate, and follow up the root to the stalk and branches, causing the leaves to wilt and burn and the branches to die. All the fruit on the vine usually gets soft and the entire vine soon dies. When a crop once commences to go, there is no hope or remedy. The vines not killed usually seem affected and cease to do well. This ailment was formerly mis-

HEAT SOIL FROM BELOW.

Dr. Mehner, a German, is responsible for the latest idea, which is now the subject of experiment in Germany and France—that of artificially heating the soil from below for the purpose of pushing the growth of vegetables. It is said to promise remarkable results.

The method consists in burying at a depth of twenty to forty inches under the field to be treated, conduits of earthenware, through which steam pipes about an inch in diameter are laid. Steam at a temperature of about 300 degrees is forced through the pipes; it heats the air in the conduit and the heat slowly radiates through the clay conduit, warming the earth.

Leakage of heat is very slow. Experiment is said to show that when the surface of the ground is about freezing point the soil at a depth of twelve to twenty inches has a temperature of 42 degrees.

Assuming that the artificial heating were begun early in March, when this condition existed, a very small expenditure of heat would be needed to cause the desired stimulation, and the radiation into the air would be exceedingly gradual.

Of course the plan does not contemplate heating the soil in the dead of winter, when atmospheric cold would kill any plants that might be artificially caused to germinate. The idea is simply to aid nature when the spring sets in.

Asparagus, lettuce, young onions, radishes and other early spring crops are the ones on which it is expected to use the system with most effect. Later, in combination with frames, it may be used on strawberries. The method is likely to be applied to floriculture and the growth of plants for seed purposes also.

It is calculated that the expense of in-

Some of them try to sift the good from the bad by asking a small cash payment, to be credited on the first order, before the book is sent.

weather has been too dry. Pods are few and small and the crop is, in his opinion, destined to be a short one. "Later on we shall know better, of course, but today (July 22) the outlook is not favorable for an average yield."

The Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., is a large grower of peas and it is about the only seed crop at the present time that is far enough along to form a correct opinion of. Mr. Rice says the crop of sweet corn is coming along nicely, but is very late. Much depends upon how the frost holds off in the fall as to whether the crop will ripen sufficiently for seed. Beans have a fair stand and present indications are favorable.

"While our asters, of which we are growing from forty to fifty acres, are somewhat later than last season, we expect, with the encouraging weather of the last few weeks, that we will have a bountiful crop."

CORN IN OHIO.

C. S. Clark, Wakeman, O., sends the following report of conditions as of July 23:

"Our contracted crops of corn growing for seed are from three weeks to one month late. The early varieties and second earlies should get ripe and make a fair to good crop. But all the late sorts of sweet corn must have a very late, favorable autumn to mature sufficiently for seed, and we shall be very short in case this late corn does get ripe, for the cold, wet spring caused so much replanting that many growers canceled their contracts and planted other crops. The weather for the last three weeks has been fine for corn and, while it is very backward, it is now growing fast and is of fair to good color and clean."

quite as many of the hyacinths are still to be lifted and little can as yet be said as to the results. So far the tulips that have been lifted are satisfactory, and such of the hyacinths as are out of the ground look fine and healthy.

The consequences of such an unusually backward season are sure to be felt all through the season, as the time lost now cannot be made up, and shipments will have to be delayed quite as much as the lifting of the crops. The continued rains are also seriously interfering with the drying and curing of the bulbs lifted and causing more delay.

THE WOOD, STUBBS & CO. FIRE.

At 2 a. m. July 18 the building occupied by Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky., was destroyed by fire which originated in an Italian's banana-ripening shed near by. Other buildings in the vicinity were damaged and the total loss is put at $30,000. The building occupied by the seedsmen was owned by Mrs. G. H. Webb. The following statement is made by the firm:

"Wood, Stubbs & Co., seedsmen, Louisville, Ky., suffered almost a total loss of stock, fixtures, etc., from a fire which occurred at 2 o'clock on the morning of buildings next to Wood, Stubbs & Co. The fire got such a complete headway that the place was completely gutted.

BEDDING TULIPS.

White Hawk, previously referred to in the REVIEW as a grand all-round tulip for any and every purpose, can hardly be overpraised, according to a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine. It has a good and long stalk, while its purity of color and lovely bold shape make it not only a grand bedder to associate with the reds and crimsons flowering from the middle to the end of April, but a most delightful flower for cutting. Nothing could be more superb than a bed of Couleur de Cardinal edged with a broad band of White Hawk.

Jacoba van Beijeren is a fine tulip, pure in color, and so stiff and strong that it stands bad weather better than any other white, except perhaps Queen of the Whites and La Triomphante. The latter, however, hardly can be described as pure white, as it is flushed slightly on the outside of the petals with rose. Jacoba van Beijeren, however, rarely grows over fourteen inches high. Maas is a grand bedder, but so early that its huge blooms are liable to become frosted. Vesuvius is the best first-early tulip among the scarlet shades; its fine pointed flowers on stiff and long stalks make it a grand bedder, and as a companion either Prince de Ligny or Queen of the Whites is good.

If I had to select the best dozen flowers for cutting, Tulipa retroflexa would certainly be one of them. Its long, slender stems make a somewhat sheltered spot a necessity for it. jects being contributed by non-commercial government experts.

"As a matter of fact, modern seedsmen do not produce seeds. They are merchants only, and replenish their stocks through elaborate systems of contracts with growers and dealers throughout the world. While meeting at conventions on the common ground of the advancement of their business, they are chary of giving out details of their operations.

"American seedsmen are, with rare exceptions, highly intelligent, energetic and honorable men, engaged in a difficult but necessary and interesting occupation. The successful seedsmen is usually an individual of varied attainments and keen discrimination, in touch with growers and planters of seeds in every imaginable locality, near and distant, and watchful of the effects of all conceivable variations of soil and climate as they affect the production and quality of the commodities in which he deals. He must plan far ahead and be able to meet all contingencies of seed shortage as well as overproduction.

"That the American seed business is, on the whole, exceedingly well managed is evident by its enormous expansion and the confidence it retains among planters to whom reliable seeds are almost the first necessity of existence."

and alfalfa are not generally grown in this section and the maintenance of profitable agriculture is very largely dependent on cowpeas.

During the autumn of 1906 the rainfall was so heavy over most of this region that the saving of seed was difficult and much that was saved of poor quality. In response to a circular letter sent out from the seed laboratory of the Bureau of Plant Industry, 3,706 samples of cowpea seed were received from the states of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and Tennessee.

Four varieties only showed an average germination of over sixty per cent—Iron, Taylor, Whippoorwill, and New Era. The seed from four states also showed an average germination of over sixty per cent—Arkansas, Tennessee, Louisiana,

Serious results are sure to follow when the seed of a staple crop like cowpeas is of such low vitality as it is this year, many lots being so poor that they are worthless for seeding purposes. In years when the seed is of poor quality and at the same time when the price is high, as is usually the case, it is especially important to know the percentage of germination. When this is known, seed of low vitality can be used by sowing enough to secure a good stand.

LILY OF THE VALLEY.

I have a piece of ground 100x150 feet, in a first-class condition, in which I wish to plant valley for outdoor culture. When should the pips be planted? How far apart? What size pips? What treatment should the plants receive during the time they are not blooming?

H. C. C.

For outdoor culture of lily of the valley purchase the best single pips, what are usually termed Berlin or Russian being both good. A special strain of Berlin known as Fortin's costs about $1.50 to $2 per thousand pips additional, but is well worth the extra money. Valley prefers land which has been deeply dug and well manured. Plant in rows two feet apart and place the single pips six inches apart. Cultivate freely during summer to keep weeds down and

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

What we need just now is rain, and lots of it. Lawns are burning up for want of water and everything in the gardens is looking limpy. Carnations will not last much longer; a week or so will see the end of them. They are now selling at low prices. Saturday is bargain day, and they go at 20 cents per dozen, retail, in some stores, while the fakers sell them at 10 cents a dozen.

Sweet peas are abundant, but the dry weather is not favorable to their growth. They are selling all the way from 10 cents to 20 cents per hundred, retail.

Davenport & Son is the sign on the window of the store formerly run by H. A. Jahn in the Five-cent Savings Bank building. Mr. Jahn will devote all his time to greenhouses on Clark's Point, selling direct to his customers.

Carnations in the field are looking well, although not quite as large as usual at this time of the year.

Most of the uptown stores close early evenings now, as there is not much business.

Wm. Livesey is building a greenhouse 22x65 and is putting a new roof on his lean-to sixty-five feet long on the south side of his greenhouse. Geraniums are all planted out in the field. This has been a good year for the sale of bedding stock.

Aster Queen of the Market will soon be in bloom to take the place of carnations.

Old home week comes in the last week of August. All mills and factories are to shut down. This will be a big carnival week here. There will be a flower show in Odd Fellows' hall during the week.

Current Comment.

Hot weather and hard work are the order of the day now. All are busy emptying and refilling benches, and when that job is on hand the sun puts in his best licks also.

A daughter has arrived at the home of Clarence Green. Congratulations.

Ed Bertermann is recovering from an attack of rheumatism.

Chris Rodenbeck, formerly in partnership with his brothers, has sold his interest to them and will try his luck in the northwestern states.

Messrs. Hartje and Billingsley are on an extended tour westward, looking for a location.

R. F. Harritt has disposed of his valuable real estate on Meridian street and has invested in seven acres of timber land to add to Willowmere. "More land, more work."

Through the decision of the court, Tomlinson Market will be left about as it was. Some minor alterations are planned that will improve the flower section.

ALLENTOWN, PA.—F. S. Lewis, manager for H. H. Battles, in Philadelphia, is here with his wife, visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn Brauss.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

THE prairie farmers are buying shrubs as well as fruit trees.

THE nursery business in the southwest is going forward at an amazingly rapid rate.

NORTHROP, KING & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., are in the market for a list of peonies for starting a plantation for stock.

SEND your latest catalogue to the REVIEW and see that it is on your regular mailing list. All catalogues are filed for reference.

D. W. BABCOCK is foreman for J. C. Harrison & Sons, Berlin, Md., and is now running a budding gang of over sixty men. They already have in over half a million peach buds.

In closing his address to the American Association of Nurserymen at the Detroit meeting President Orlando Harrison said: "My last and most important recommendation to you is, that we as nurserymen should increase the price of our trees and plants in proportion to the increased price in labor and other necessities for growing high-grade nursery stock." It is worth remembering.

THE new inspection law in Wisconsin is now in operation and all nurseries must be inspected before the next planting season, or sale will be proscribed by the absence of a certificate. Nurserymen are required to make application for inspection to J. G. Moore, Madison, Wis. Cost of inspection is to be defrayed by the nurserymen and is less if done on the regular rounds than if the inspector make a special trip.

PLANTING EVERGREENS.

August and September planting of evergreens ought to be encouraged, for at this season of the year planters are not so busy with other work. Evergreens, especially the spruce family, make a new root growth during the latter part of August or the early part of September. They establish themselves in the ground when the weather is favorable, and make new roots within four to six days after planting, and they make a much better growth the following spring, than do spring planted trees.

"In August, 1903," says D. Hill, of Dundee, Ill., "I planted out in nursery rows 200,000 Norway spruce seedlings six to ten inches in height. The following spring I walked over the patch for over an hour, and failed to find a single dead tree. In August, 1905, I planted out a large amount of white pine, Norway spruce and white spruce seedlings, with a loss of eighty-five per cent. The weather has much to do with early fall planting. With mild weather and a little rain success is assured. If I had watered the 1905 planting, I could have saved every tree."

his experience with the rather heavy clay soils of Indiana. He said that they rely mainly on the two-horse tongueless walking cultivator, which, with a high arch, enables them to cultivate two and three-year stock. In dry weather they follow the cultivator with a drag well weighted, thoroughly pulverizing the surface. This process is kept up about every ten days through the season. The best method for keeping stock clean in the rows, is either with the disc plow set to throw the earth from the row, or mould-boards attached to the inside feet of the two-horse cultivator, or in larger stock to use the pony bar plow, running the bar as close to the row as possible, leaving as narrow a ridge as can be obtained between the plants. This plowing is immediately followed by a gang of boys with sharp, triangular steel scratchers with convenient handles. These boys are paid from 50 to 75 cents per day, and will do more work in a day than men with hoes at double the wages.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Current Comment.

Newport is just entering upon the gayeties of the season, with the promise of one of the busiest and most profitable seasons on record for florists. There is an unusually large demand for decorative plants for the decoration of dwellings; perhaps the general scarcity of large plants may make the demand more pronounced and consequently more felt in the local market than if it was caused solely by an increase of local uses for such plants. There are a great many people here now and the number includes everyone of that exclusive set in whose circle the most lavish entertainments are always given. Although the florist who is fortunate enough to secure during the season an extra share of the gets one or several elaborate decorations to execute. In the cut flower business there is simply a fair margin of profit, whereas in the case of the large decoration, especially if there is no close competitor, there is made out of it quite a goodly sum. In decorations of the character referred to, although they entail a huge amount of work, the material is very often obtained in Newport for little or nothing and consists in many instances of outdoor flowers and foliage, and of course the choice features connected with these decorations, and sometimes the material used, or a great part of it, is used again on the following evening for a like purpose. Peonies are all past, but during the time they lasted they played a prominent part in several house decorations.

J. Warren Spaulding is hustling in an endeavor to regain the ground lost on account of his long delayed opening this season. The firm of which he is the executive head is advertising palms and other decorative foliage plants in the local papers; the stated purpose of this move is to realize quickly and to reduce stock. We are having a spell of extremely dry weather; this spell began about five weeks ago, with but little rain since, in consequence of which many things outdoors are already suffering severely.

The demand for cut flowers has increased greatly in the last few days, chiefly because outdoor roses suddenly gave out. Roses are not of very good quality, as generally seen just at present. Carnations are not, as a rule, extra good, either. Orchids, especially Cattleya gigas, are selling quickly at good prices. Sweet peas are selling now at fairly good prices, but in a week or so the market will be glutted with them. There is always a good demand here during the summer for lily of the valley, most of which is supplied by Carl Jurgens and his nephew, William Jurgens. I regret to state that Carl Jurgens is reported ill at the Newport hospital.

Looking through the greenhouses at By the Sea, where John Marshall is in charge, I noticed an old lean-to house enclosing a good crop of melons nearly ready for market. Mr. Marshall had nothing he cared to fill this old low house with some time ago, so he thought of melons. These melons will sell in a few days for at least 50 cents each at wholesale, in the local market, which will be much better than allowing the house to stand empty. MAX REILLY.

PACIFIC COAST.

THE nursery and seed trade both report a heavy demand for eucalyptus the past season and the outlook for the next one is still better.

ALDEN ANDERSON, manager of the California Fruit Distributors, proposes that every nurseryman doing business in California be required to take out a license.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Howard & Smith have planted another five acres to palms and dracenas at Montebello and will soon begin another five acres of lath house.

THE Yakima Valley Nursery, of North Yakima, Wash., has been incorporated, with $60,000 authorized capital stock. The incorporators are William D. Ingalls and Inga J. Ingalls.

SPOKANE, WASH.—Articles of incorporation of the Spokane Nursery Co. have been drawn, with a capitalization of $50,000. The trustees are H. C. Rice, J. H. Munn, J. M. Harris and E. L. Rice. The company intends to erect several greenhouses near Spokane.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business continues to be quiet; in fact, it has never been known to be at a lower ebb than it is at present. In any line of trade there is much complaining by the merchants, and the florists' business suffers with the rest. The first two days of last week found considerable funeral work at the stores, but since that time things have lapsed into a profound slumber. There is no great surplus of flowers, however, both roses and carnations being used up well for the growers. With outside stock there is a good surplus on hand, and dahlias, gladioli, sweet peas, coreopsis, gaillardia and material of that nature are of very slow sale.

The weather has been favorable thus far this summer. The thermometer does not usually rise higher than 70 degrees in the warmest part of the day, and the influence of such favorable conditions continues to be noticeable in the quality of the stock produced. Roses and carnations, especially, show much better stems and foliage than is customary during June and July and there is a noticeable absence of thrips and mildew.

Over in Oakland, a tour among the retailers shows like conditions prevailing, although there has been a fair sprinkling of funeral orders, which seem to be well divided up among the various retailers. From present indications it will be some time before affairs brighten up much, and the floral fraternity will have to exercise considerable patience.

Various Notes.

The regular monthly meeting of the California State Floral Society was held last week at the residence of Henry Tricon, on Hayes street. Quite a lot of seasonable flowers were displayed and a very fair attendance made a pleasant meeting.

SULPHUR IN DRIED FRUITS.

A matter of great importance to the fruit industry of California was discussed very thoroughly at a meeting of the Fruit Growers' Protective Association, which met at San Francisco last week. The combined members are voicing the indignation of the growers and shippers against the action of the Washington authorities in the Department of Agriculture ignoring the requests that an increased amount of sulphur may be used in the preservation of dried fruits, over and above the amount prescribed by the recent pure food act. Despite indignant complaints, the only answer obtainable from Washington is that Secretary Wilson is out of town and no action can be taken.

The complaint of the association is that the pure food act allows the use of but .070 of one per cent in the drying and preservation of fruit. The growers claim that .250 is necessary to obtain the best product and that the use of sulphur fumes has worked no injury to consumers in the past and could not possibly do so in the future.

One week ago the association organized in the offices of the California Promotion Committee, where the campaign to have a reconsideration of the ruling by the Washington department originated. At the meeting it was suggested that the association invite every grower in California to wire Washington for instructions as to a way in which they may dry their fruit properly and yet conform to the law. There are more than 8,000 fruit growers in the state interested in the matter, and the association considered the advisability of asking them to wire Washington as individuals or as affiliated associations. Another method was suggested by H. C. Rowley, temporary secretary. He argued that the association should hire counsel to take up the matter at Washington, or to suggest a way whereby the interests of California's fruit growers might not be affected disastrously. It was decided, however, to await answer from Washing-

Twenty-five florists from this city went to Eicholtz park July 15, where they held their annual outing. Part of the party started for the park at 7:40 o'clock in the morning over the Springfield, Troy & Piqua interurban line, and the rest followed at 8:40 o'clock.

C. W. Schmidt and John M. Good were among those who had the arrangements for the picnic in charge. They took along plenty of provisions for a big dinner and supper. All kinds of games, including baseball, were on the program. The return trip was made at 8 o'clock in the evening, after a long and pleasant day.

MOLINE, ILL.—A transient customer July 16 left a purse containing $45. It was returned through an advertisement in a local paper.

KANKAKEE, ILL.—George Faber was married July 17, at St. Mary's church, to Miss Apolonia Wink, of Milwaukee. The couple will reside on Washington avenue, where Mr. Faber has just completed a handsome home.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Some of our retailers last week only smiled when I asked "How is business?" and finally remarked, "Only fair." However, our florists here always have a pleasant smile; business conditions seldom reverse their natural way of conducting their business. Funeral work is still to be had, but of no large amount.

Carnations and sweet peas are still abundant. Roses are not so plentiful, except with the street boys. Pot plants seem to be a thing of the past. Our common field blooms find ready sale. Greens of all kinds are enough to meet the demands.

Various Notes.

Kerr & Green, of Hampden, are erecting a new house, 28x75 feet, for pot plants. The walls will be made of concrete.

George Mehl, of Fullerton, will erect a new house for carnations, 50x200 feet, and has installed a twenty-five horsepower steam boiler.

John Severon, who was employed at the Fernery Greenhouses by M. Thau, has left and taken a position with F. C. Bauer. The Fernery Greenhouses have a fine lot of Daybreak asters coming in, with 24-inch stems.

N. Q. Straud, of Waverly, has a fine lot of mums and is making his second tie.

Albert Beckman, of Raspeburg, will tear down his old houses and erect new ones in their place.

There is an encouraging outlook for a large attendance at the club meeting, to hear Richard Vincent, Jr., on the labor question. The date has not been set yet.

John P. Willheim, of Gardenville, will grow his carnations in a solid bed and many others are doing likewise.

Thursday, July 18, Charles Cook spent the day down the bay with his employees.
J. L. T.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—Miss Edna Birn filed a petition in bankruptcy, July 10. Her liabilities were listed at $1,320.55.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—Burglars entered the home of Mark Aitken, 62 Osgood street, early in the morning of July 10, and stole $60 in money from Mr. Aitken's trousers, which were on a chair close to the bed on which Mr. Aitken was asleep.

COLUMBUS, O.—The members of the Columbus Florists' Club, with the wives, children and friends, went to Buckeye lake July 17 for a big basket picnic. Everyone had a good time. James McKellar was chairman of the committee on arrangements.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Hot weather has been the cry of everybody for the last week. The result of such weather was little business and consequently lots of stock going to waste. Sweet peas have been especially plentiful and the result was low prices or few sold. That is the view that some of the florists took, and they placed signs in their windows offering peas at 2 cents per bunch. However, we did not all agree on this and some held the price up. It may be policy and also denote shrewdness in making the price cheap when a drug comes, but such a reduction as this only tends to hurt the business.

Asters are now in evidence, but only short stems. Each day, however, finds better stock, and very shortly we should be receiving first-class flowers.

Dennis O'Connell, the mid-town florist of Buffalo, is about to sail for Europe with his wife. Mr. O'Connell is a shrewd man, and by hard work has been able to make a small business a good money-maker.

Various Notes.

Mr. Lee, of the staff of Rachel M. Rebstock's store, quietly strolled off to some small western town and was married last week. Mr. Higgins, of the same store, was on the sick list for a few days, but expects to be strong enough to attend the convention next month.

Most of the stores in town close at 6:30 on week days this year, which we think a mighty good move. Still, there are one or two who think they must be there, and so the move is only half and half. If the Buffalo Florists' Club were in existence, it might take the matter up, but at the next yearly meeting the picnic will have to be discussed, so there will be no time for other business.

We are sorry to report that William Scott, while doing nicely, will not be able to attend the convention. R. A. S.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

George Saltford is contemplating a canoe trip through the Adirondacks.

The Saltford Flower Shop has added 10,000 feet of glass to its capacity.

J. T. Cokely, of Scranton, Pa., was a recent caller.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—The fire department was called July 19 to extinguish a blaze at Lockhart's flower store, which proved to be an upholstered chair set afire by a cigar stub dropped on it.

The Market.

This is the season when many of our best customers leave for their country homes, and thereby we naturally lose quite a little valuable trade. But, considering this and also the scarcity of design work, business during the last few weeks has been quite fair for this season of the year. A statement made by Mr. Skidelsky, which appeared in the columns of this paper some time ago, is being demonstrated over and over again. How true it is that "products of superior quality are sure to find a market."

Beauties have been exceptionally fine, both in flower and length of stem. So have Mme. Abel Chatenay, Killarney and Richmond. Good stuff has not gone begging yet. Sweet peas move along nicely, but there is not much demand for other outdoor stock. Carnations, fair in quality, still remain a staple. Liliun speciosum is coming in and attracts the usual amount of admiration in the windows.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, are spending a few weeks in this city.

G. H. Baur, of the Baur Floral Co., is at present enjoying a leisurely trip, on which he intends to visit New York, Philadelphia, Washington, and also the Jamestown exposition. W. B.

DAYTON, OHIO.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Miami Floral Co. was held July 12. The report of the year's business was satisfactory and a dividend of ten per cent was declared, after which the following officers were chosen for the coming year: Charles E. Pease, president; William Kiefaber, Sr., vice-president; Edward A. Deem, secretary; William Kiefaber, Jr., treasurer. The directors of the company are the officers and Edward B. Weston.

The company was organized five years ago, with a capital stock of $5,000. The plant was small, but the product found a ready market and within a short time the capital was increased, as was also the plant. The growth has been remarkable within the last three years. In that time the capital stock has been increased to $35,000 and within a short time another increase will be made to $50,000. At the present time the company has over 100,000 square feet of glass. The plant is under the supervision of George W. Bartholomew, who was formerly with Peter Reinberg, of Chicago.

WESTERVILLE, O.—J. F. Sked is spending two or three weeks at Frankfort, Mich., with his headquarters at Park hotel.

TWEMLOW'S

Old English

Liquid and Glazing Putty

Elastic

For Bedding Glass in Sash or for Filling Cracks or Seams

In Roof Joints or Frames of Greenhouses or Hotbeds.

It is used in Machine or Bulb. If too thick for bulb, thin with a little Pure Linseed Oil, boiled. So thinned, it can be brushed into any crack or leak, making a solid filling. It makes a solid bed, impervious to moisture, and holds glass in its place, and will stop any crevice or fault. When once set on dry wood it does not heave. As regards the goods, the article is no new invention, but simply an article of the very best class, to do thoroughly good work, like old-time gentlemen expected when sashes were made with lead, and small panes of glass used that caught the water and leaked unless set with an elastic putty which once set by a mechanic was expected to remain, and did remain in good shape. This Twemlow's Old English Glazing Putty does; nothing more, nothing less. SOLD BY THE FLORISTS' SUPPLY HOUSES.

Greenhouse Heating.

GALVANIZED PIPE.

What are the advantages or disadvantages of using galvanized pipe instead of black pipe for steam heating in greenhouses? E. N.

The chief objection to galvanized pipe is its extra cost, and, in the second place, it is not as good a radiator as black pipe. It might last a little longer, but the difference would not justify the additional cost, were it as good as black pipe as a radiator. L. C. C.

TO PACK HOT WATER PIPES.

What is the best method of packing 4-inch hot water pipes? SUBSCRIBER.

The joints of 4-inch pipe can be packed with oakum and red lead, or with a cement made as follows: Sal ammoniac, two ounces; sulphur, one ounce; clean iron filings or borings, reduced to a powder, twelve pounds, and water enough to form a paste. L. C. C.

HOT WATER FOR ONE HOUSE.

I have an even-span greenhouse, 26x125 feet; height from top of bed to ridge, ten feet; height from bottom of walk to plate, four feet; height of beds, two feet. The whole of the end walls and the upper half of the side walls are glass. The house runs east and west. What size of boiler would I require, and what size of main pipe? How many flows and returns would I require, and where would you place them? I should want to heat the house to 65 degrees in zero weather in Massachusetts.

The boiler-house will be at the north-east corner, about thirty-six feet from the entrance of the present greenhouse. I shall have another house close to the boiler-house, so I shall want a large enough main pipe to supply both houses. I shall use hot water, with a boiler for each house. Or would you advise me to have one boiler for the two houses? G. B. W.

The boiler to heat your house should have a rated capacity for at least 1,500 square feet of radiation. I should prefer one boiler large enough to heat both houses, rather than one for each. You can use pipe from 1½-inch up to 4-inch, as you wish. I like 2-inch pipe for hot water and have figured the requirements of your house accordingly. A 3½-inch flow pipe and fifteen 2-inch returns will do the work. If you wish to use two flows instead of one, substitute two 2½-inch pipes for the 3½-inch. L. C. C.

FROM STEAM TO HOT WATER?

We have three houses, which, however, are cut through crosswise by a shed, so they may be treated as six houses. On one side of the shed they are each seventy feet long; on the other side of the shed they are sixty feet, fifty-five feet and thirty-five feet long, respectively. We have been heating them with steam, supplied by a twelve horse-power tubular boiler, but as it is too small to do the work, a change of some kind is necessary. I have been thinking of putting in hot water heat. Would you think it advisable to do so? What size of hot water boiler would I want? The houses are eighteen feet wide; ten feet to ridge. The outside temperature at times goes down to 20 degrees or 25 degrees below zero here in Michigan. How many lines of 2-inch pipe would be required? How many would you use for flows and how many for returns? I should want to heat the 35-foot house to 60 degrees; the 55-foot house and the 60-foot house should both be heated to 50 degrees. Of the 70-foot houses, one will require a temperature of 50 degrees, another of 60 degrees and another of 55 degrees. We also have a shed running across the ends of the houses, about forty feet long and not over five feet high in the high-est place.

Do you think it would pay to make the change, considering the difference-in cost? If we continue to heat with steam we shall have to employ a night fireman, while if we use hot water we can do our own firing. Do you consider it cheaper to heat with hot water than with steam—I mean considering the fuel alone? R. A. M.

You do not state the location of your boiler, but if the greatest distance from the boiler to the end of any house does not exceed 100 or 110 feet, then you can use hot water to advantage without artificial circulation, and with less labor, probably, than if you used steam. There is little, if any, difference in cost of fuel for either system, when properly installed. Each house should have a 2½-inch riser and thirteen 2-inch returns, to provide the necessary heat with hot water. For steam a 2-inch riser and twelve 1¼-inch returns will do the work, with an adequate boiler. L. C. C.

RUST IN BOILERS.

A boiler-maker answers the inquiry as to how to prevent an unused boiler rusting in summer, as follows: "If the heater be left full of water during the summer there will be small likelihood of any rust forming, as oxidation takes place slowly when the surfaces are covered with water. We have always advised the filling up of steam or hot water heaters with water during the summer to prevent rust. This will cause more or less sweating of the boiler during this time, but if a small fire is kindled occasionally it will have a tendency to keep the boiler in excellent condition. We know of no preparation to put on the inside of a boiler for stopping of rust."

The Standard Steam Trap

is acknowledged the best for the florist because it is durable, and does its work without trouble and annoyance, saving its cost by the economy in coal bills.

The Market.

Little can be said of business, except that it is running along as it usually does at this time of year. Now and then there is a spurt, but it does not last long and everything soon assumes the usual quietness. So far as the demand is concerned, we have no kick coming, but the supply has dropped until it is next to nothing and the quality is of the genuine summer variety. While some fair roses are coming in, still they are so small, and they last such a short time, that they do not amount to much. Carnations are almost a thing of the past. Of course a few are to be had, but they are almost past recognition. The light colored ones sell quickly, but the dark ones find their way into the ash barrel. Asters are slow in making their appearance. They ought to be with us in force before long, though. Sweet peas, which were in such a glut just a little over a week ago, now

The firm of Max Rudolph & Co. has been dissolved and Mr. Rudolph is the sole owner of the business.

D. Rusconi, as the outing committee, has made his report and he has announced that the outing this year will be held Thursday, August 1, at Highland Grove. Highland Grove is a beautiful place, with plenty of water and fine shade. It is located about thirty minutes' ride from Cincinnati, on the C., L. & N. R. R. Quite a program of events is being planned. There will be bowling, baseball, dancing and all sorts of races. The prizes given in every event will be of extra value and well worth the winning. It is the intention to make this an old-fashioned basket picnic and everyone is expected to come with a well-stocked basket. Trains will leave the C., L. & N. depot, at the corner of Court street and Broadway, at 9:30 a. m. and 2 p. m., and, returning, will leave the picnic grounds at 9 p. m. Tickets for adults, 25 cents, and for children, 15 cents. The grounds have been reserved exclusively for the florists and their friends. That everyone who comes will have a fine time goes without question, so we are looking forward to the greatest picnic we have ever held.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS

PROPOSED CHANGE IN NAME.

At the meeting of the S. A. F. executive committee at Philadelphia in March, J. K. M. L. Farquhar offered the suggestion that the name of the society be changed to the Society of American Horticulture, arguing that it would be a broader and more comprehensive title. On motion the president was instructed to appoint a committee of five to consider the matter and present it to the convention at Philadelphia for action, if approved, authorizing the executive board to take the necessary legal steps. The president appointed the committee as follows: J. K. M. L. Farquhar, W. R. Smith, Robert Craig, Sam Murray, Patrick O'Mara.

This committee doubtless will be heard from at the convention with a report giving the society an opportunity to change the name, if the majority are in favor of it. It does not follow that a majority of the committee members are individually in favor of the change, and it is doubtful if any considerable proportion of the membership will endorse any change in the present title. At any rate, opportunity for deliberate consideration should be given.

At the Dayton convention the proposition was made to change the date of the convention to November, beginning with 1908, when it is proposed to hold the national flower show at Chicago. Opinion so far as expressed since the Dayton convention has been almost unanimously against abandoning the August meeting, and the executive board appears to have recognized this fact in a resolution adopted in Philadelphia in March, providing for a two days' session during the national show.

The national show originally was planned as a spring exhibition and the idea of a spring show has not yet been abandoned by those who originated the idea.

CONVENTION PROGRAM.

Business Sessions.

At the meeting of the executive board of the S. A. F. it was proposed to gain time by opening the Philadelphia convention in the morning, but this was found impracticable and the call to order will be at 2 p. m., Tuesday, August 20, at Broad Street theater. The members will be welcomed on behalf of the state by Governor Edwin S. Stuart, and on behalf of the city by Mayor John E. Reyburn. W. W. Castle, of Boston, will respond to the welcoming addresses. The annual address of the president of the society, and the reports of the secretary, treasurer, state vice-presidents, committees, and other officials will be presented.

Wednesday morning the society will convene at 9:30 a. m. The judges of trade exhibits, which will be staged in Horticultural hall, will present reports.

Addresses will be presented on the following subjects: "Hardy Shrubs—How to Plant and Treat Them," by S. C. Moon; "The Effective Arrangement of Hardy Perennial Plants," by Ernest Hemming; "Hardy Bulbous and Tuberous Rooted Perennials," by E. V. Hallock; "Bedding Plants—Where and How to Use Them," by A. Frey.

The selection of the location of the next meeting (polls open one hour), nomination of officers and roll-call of states for nominations for state vice-presidents for next year will take place at this session.

Wednesday evening the president's address will be up for discussion, also reports of special committees.

Thursday morning, at 9:30, "Horticultural Education" will be up for dis-one hour, and until all legal voters in line at that time shall have an opportunity to cast their votes.

Thursday evening at 7:30 the society will take up the subject of the proposed national flower show.

Saturday the executive board will convene at 10 a. m.

Entertainment Features.

The president of the society will receive the members at 8 p. m. Tuesday, in the Broad Street theater, under the auspices of the Philadelphia Florists' Club. Music and refreshments.

On invitation of H. A. Dreer, the society will board the excursion boat leaving Arch street wharf at 1 p. m. Wednesday, for a trip up the Delaware river to Riverton, N. J.

Luncheon will be given at the roof garden of Bayersdorfer & Co. Thursday afternoon, 12 to 4 o'clock.

The fourth day, Friday, is "Philadelphia day." The program is as follows: 10 a. m.—The society will be the fer the Lawson and pink varieties to others. We have found them an inch and a half long. Can you tell me what they are, where they come from, and what is a safe and sure means of exterminating them? R. A. M.

The worm is one of the cutworms, of which there are many forms and all of which are destructive. We have seen many of them in the greenhouses, especially in the chrysanthemum houses. The best method of extermination we know of is to keep a sharp lookout for them and catch them by hand. They are not usually so numerous as one would think by the amount of damage done, as they are voracious feeders and one of them will destroy much stock in a short time. Their feeding time is at night, and unless you look for them early in the morning you may not see many of them, but if you see a freshly eaten bloom or shoot you will likely find Mr. Cutworm buried somewhere near, just below the surface of the soil. They are fond of any young, succulent growth. Poisoning is sometimes resorted to, but we do not like to use strong poisons too freely on stock for cutting, and unless you can find some bait of which they are much fonder than carnation blooms the chances of reaching them with poison will be quite remote. A. F. J. B.

INSECTICIDES IN WATER SUPPLY.

In using insecticides for red spider, greenfly, etc., on carnations, would it do to put the insecticides in the water supply tank, to be used whenever I water the plants? My tank has a capacity of nine barrels. M. W. W.

It would not be wise to use insecticides as you suggest. If applied with the hose you would be likely to use too much, which would not only be wasteful, but in some cases perhaps injurious to the plants. The most modern way of applying liquid insecticides is with the automatic spray pump. You can not invest a few dollars more profitably than in purchasing one of these. Formerly we used the ordinary brass hand syringe, but the spray pump saves much time and does the work better. A. F. J. B.

TEMPERATURE FOR BOUNTIFUL.

In what temperature does Lady Bountiful do best? Would it do well with Lawson? R. A. M.

Lady Bountiful will do finely in 52 degrees, which is a trifle low for Mrs. Lawson. In a higher temperature the stems will come weak and the blooms will not keep as well. In a lower temperature the blooms will come considerably mottled with pink. A. F. J. B.

OUR CARNATIONS IN SWABIA.

The cultivation of the American varieties of the carnation is being taken up in Germany with all earnestness, and with much success. The newest competitor in the field of commercial gardening is Hrn. G. Staehle, court purveyor in Ludwigsburg, who has erected several ranges of span-roofed houses in which the cultivation of the plants will be carried on according to American methods.

GRUBWORMS FROM MANURE.

Last spring I sowed a piece of ground in oats, turning them under after they were ten inches high. Before sowing I gave the land a liberal coating of horse and cow manure. The soil is now in splendid shape, but on taking up only one shovelful of dirt I will find at least a dozen small grubworms. Can you tell me how to do away with this pest, as I intend to use this soil for growing my carnations, which will be planted on solid benches? I have no arrangements for heating or steaming the soil before using it, and I am afraid to use it with all these worms in it. C. C. W.

I do not think the small grubworms you mention would do your carnations any harm whatever. I would not hesitate to use the soil on the benches. There are many forms of grubworms, but only a few of them are really destructive, like the large white grub which does so much damage in the rose benches. This one is usually found under sod, while those you mention were likely introduced with the manure and are a harmless kind. If, however, you should find later that they are the harmful kind, you can rid the soil of them by drenching the soil with lime-water or by using bi-sulphide of carbon. You can also get rid of thousands of them by plowing the soil and letting your neighbor's chickens at them. A. F. J. B.

CUTWORMS ON CARNATIONS.

I am sending, under separate cover, a few carnations containing specimens of worms that are attacking our carnations. They eat the blossom and seem to pre-

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

THE RETAILER'S DISPLAY CASE.

Every retail florist should have as good a display case as his capital will permit. And nowadays the manufacturers of refrigerators have come to a realization of the large amount of business to be done with florists, so that they carry in stock quite large assortments of florists' refrigerators and it is no longer necessary to have a cut flower box built to order, as was the one illustrated, unless it is designed to fit in where all the fixtures are specially planned, in which case it will of course be required that a special case be built.

The case illustrated stands against the wall and is accessible only from the front. The ice chamber is above and is filled from the end. In planning a store it is often possible to divide it across the middle, the front section to be the salesroom and the other portion the work room, all the mechanical part of the business being kept behind the scenes, as it were. Where such an arrangement is possible it is desirable to have an ice-box which opens both front and rear. It gives both the salesman and the make-up a chance to get at the stocks without extra steps. In such a case, too, the ice should go in from the rear, so that unnecessary dirt may be avoided in the sales-room. If there is any one thing the retail florist should be particular about it is that his store is scrupulously clean.

SCOTCH HEATHER BLOOM.

There have been a number of instances when cut flowers have been shipped from New York to London for various reasons, but the first attempt to put transatlantic business in cut flowers upon a commercial basis is being made this season by James Smith & Sons, of the Darley Dale Nurseries, near Matlock, England.

This firm is said to be the largest grower of hardy heaths in the United Kingdom, having upwards of 500,000 plants in stock. They do a large business in supplying quantities of cut white heather bloom to England and continental florists during the months of August, September and October. This year they propose to extend the field of their operations to include America, both Canada and the United States. The heather bloom carries well and they feel that there is no question that the stock can be shipped to arrive in good order. They will pack it in boxes containing one to three pounds and ship by parcels post to the nearest port of entry. As practically every city where there are leading retail florists is a port of entry, admission through the customs houses should be accomplished without delay. August is not the season of largest demand except in a few of the summer resort communities in this country, but there is always a demand for novelties, and the success of Smith & Sons will be watched with interest.

In a recent issue of a British trade paper there is the following account of the Smiths' heather industry, which will be of special interest on account of their present undertaking:

"There are about a dozen establishments around Matlock, the proprietors in nearly all cases belonging to the Smith family, the prevalence of this surname being somewhat bewildering to the stranger, but our notes on the present occasion relate only to the historic nurseries of Messrs. James Smith & Sons, at Darley Dale. As the ground actually under nursery stock covers some 230 acres, it is of course impossible to give a detailed description of the enormous stock, and we shall therefore merely mention a few of the salient points which struck us particularly in the course of our tour around the various departments.

"First and foremost of these is, without doubt, the magnificent stocks of hardy heaths which flourish here in a way which shows that the soil and climate suit them to perfection. The white varieties now so popular for cutting purposes are seen in broad flats, running into tens of thousands, the stocks of the E. albinos being, we believe, unequalled in the kingdom. Bicolor especially took our fancy, as it carries white, purple and pink flowers on the same plant, so that a flat had the effect of a very harmonious mixture of bedding plants. The rare Erica Mawana, with rich purple blooms, also made a good display, as did the golden Ling, while Mediterranea and other varieties are only just in bud, and will, weather permitting, be making a brave show in December. The collection is a fine one, and the proprietors may be excused a little pardonable pride in this branch.

"A feature which strikes all strangers

The Retailer's Display Case.

is the grand stock of Gentiana acaulis, but this must be seen earlier in the year, when bands of blue running up the hillside remind one of Alpine glories. A nice batch has now been worked up of the new white variety, which, though it did not appeal to us like the glorious blue of the type, will no doubt find a demand with the specialist. Two other plants not often seen in first-rate condition are Lithospermum prostratum, a rival to the gentians in color, and Daphne cneorum, with its unrivaled perfume; both looked perfectly at home and happy, with apparently no special care or trouble. Another flowering plant grown in immense quantity is the ordinary tritoma, or torch-flower, as it is sometimes called."

BLIGHT ON DELPHINIUMS.

Does anyone know a cure for a blight that attacks the blooms of the hybrid delphiniums? The petals become black and somewhat curled. Sometimes the entire spike is affected, crippling it entirely, and in other instances only a portion seems troubled. W. C. E.

The choice named hybrid delphiniums sent out by such noted hybridists as Kelway and Lemoine seem to be peculiarly susceptible to the attacks of the blight spoken of. With American raised seedlings there is little trouble, unless the plants have been allowed to remain in one location without transplanting for a number of years. Beautiful as are these European hybrids, we find extreme difficulty in keeping them longer than three or four years. It is otherwise with home saved seedlings, which seem to possess far greater vigor. I have tried spraying with Bordeaux mixture for the disease, with only partial success. I do not know of any collection where these hybrids are successfully grown for more than four or five years before they run out. Transplanting into fresh soil every third season is good for all delphiniums and careful division of the roots in September may help to keep them clean, but we have had but indifferent success in retaining the choice double sorts.

DRACAENAS.

Dracæna Godseffiana is at first, or when it is young, a rather slow grower, but when it gets large enough for a 6-inch pot it goes ahead with amazing rapidity, considering its previous stubbornness. This dracæna makes a splendid specimen for the decoration of conservatories or even for dwellings. Its spotted green foliage is in striking contrast to all other dracænas.

Dracæna Sanderiana is another variety with characteristics so distinct as to mark it from all other dracænas. This variety is much used by florists in made-up pans for decorative work. It is easily rooted from cuttings made of the tops of old or useless plants. I mean useless for any other purpose. Pans of this dracæna sell readily at any time.

fer the Lawson and pink varieties to others. We have found them an inch and a half long. Can you tell me what they are, where they come from, and what is a safe and sure means of exterminating them? R. A. M.

The worm is one of the cutworms, of which there are many forms and all of which are destructive. We have seen many of them in the greenhouses, especially in the chrysanthemum houses. The best method of extermination we know of is to keep a sharp lookout for them and catch them by hand. They are not usually so numerous as one would think by the amount of damage done, as they are voracious feeders and one of them will destroy much stock in a short time. Their feeding time is at night, and unless you look for them early in the morning you may not see many of them, but if you see a freshly eaten bloom or shoot you will likely find Mr. Cutworm buried somewhere near, just below the surface of the soil. They are fond of any young, succulent growth. Poisoning is sometimes resorted to, but we do not like to use strong poisons too freely on stock for cutting, and unless you can find some bait of which they are much fonder than carnation blooms the chances of reaching them with poison will be quite remote. A. F. J. B.

INSECTICIDES IN WATER SUPPLY.

In using insecticides for red spider, greenfly, etc., on carnations, would it do to put the insecticides in the water supply tank, to be used whenever I water the plants? My tank has a capacity of nine barrels. M. W. W.

It would not be wise to use insecticides as you suggest. If applied with the hose you would be likely to use too much, which would not only be wasteful, but in some cases perhaps injurious to the plants. The most modern way of applying liquid insecticides is with the automatic spray pump. You can not invest a few dollars more profitably than in purchasing one of these. Formerly we used the ordinary brass hand syringe, but the spray pump saves much time and does the work better. A. F. J. B.

TEMPERATURE FOR BOUNTIFUL.

In what temperature does Lady Bountiful do best? Would it do well with Lawson? R. A. M.

Lady Bountiful will do finely in 52 degrees, which is a trifle low for Mrs. Lawson. In a higher temperature the stems will come weak and the blooms will not keep as well. In a lower temperature the blooms will come considerably mottled with pink. A. F. J. B.

OUR CARNATIONS IN SWABIA.

The cultivation of the American varieties of the carnation is being taken up in Germany with all earnestness, and with much success. The newest competitor in the field of commercial gardening is Hrn. G. Stuehle, court purveyor in Ludwigsburg, who has erected several ranges of span-roofed houses in which the cultivation of the plants will be carried on according to American methods.

GRUBWORMS FROM MANURE.

Last spring I sowed a piece of ground in oats, turning them under after they were ten inches high. Before sowing I gave the land a liberal coating of horse and cow manure. The soil is now in splendid shape, but on taking up only one shovelful of dirt I will find at least a dozen small grubworms. Can you tell me how to do away with this pest, as I intend to use this soil for growing my carnations, which will be planted on solid benches? I have no arrangements for heating or steaming the soil before using it, and I am afraid to use it with all these worms in it. C. C. W.

I do not think the small grubworms you mention would do your carnations any harm whatever. I would not hesitate to use the soil on the benches. There are many forms of grubworms, but only a few of them are really destructive, like the large white grub which does so much damage in the rose benches. This one is usually found under sod, while those you mention were likely introduced with the manure and are a harmless kind. If, however, you should find later that they are the harmful kind, you can rid the soil of them by drenching the soil with lime-water or by using bi-sulphide of carbon. You can also get rid of thousands of them by plowing the soil and letting your neighbor's chickens at them. A. F. J. B.

CUTWORMS ON CARNATIONS.

I am sending, under separate cover, a few carnations containing specimens of worms that are attacking our carnations. They eat the blossom and seem to pre-

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

THE RETAILER'S DISPLAY CASE.

Every retail florist should have as good a display case as his capital will permit. And nowadays the manufacturers of refrigerators have come to a realization of the large amount of business to be done with florists, so that they carry in stock quite large assortments of florists' refrigerators and it is no longer necessary to have a cut flower box built to order, as was the one illustrated, unless it is designed to fit in where all the fixtures are specially planned, in which case it will of course be required that a special case be built.

The case illustrated stands against the wall and is accessible only from the front. The ice chamber is above and is filled from the end. In planning a store it is often possible to divide it across the middle, the front section to be the salesroom and the other portion the work room, all the mechanical part of the business being kept behind the scenes, as it were. Where such an arrangement is possible it is desirable to have an ice box which opens both front and rear. It gives both the salesman and the make-up a chance to get at the stocks without extra steps. In such a case, too, the ice should go in from the rear, so that unnecessary dirt may be avoided in the sales-room. If there is any one thing the retail florist should be particular about it is that his store is scrupulously clean.

SCOTCH HEATHER BLOOM.

There have been a number of instances when cut flowers have been shipped from New York to London for various reasons, but the first attempt to put transatlantic business in cut flowers upon a commercial basis is being made this season by James Smith & Sons, of the Darley Dale Nurseries, near Matlock, England.

This firm is said to be the largest grower of hardy heaths in the United Kingdom, having upwards of 500,000 plants in stock. They do a large business in supplying quantities of cut white heather bloom to England and continental florists during the months of August, September and October. This year they propose to extend the field of their operations to include America, both Canada and the United States. The heather bloom carries well and they feel that there is no question that the stock can be shipped to arrive in good order. They will pack it in boxes containing one to three pounds and ship by parcels post to the nearest port of entry. As practically every city where there are leading retail florists is a port of entry, admission through the customs houses should be accomplished without delay. August is not the season of largest demand except in a few of the summer resort communities in this country, but there is always a demand for novelties, and the success of Smith & Sons will be watched with interest.

In a recent issue of a British trade paper there is the following account of the Smiths' heather industry, which will be of special interest on account of their present undertaking:

"There are about a dozen establishments around Matlock, the proprietors in nearly all cases belonging to the Smith family, the prevalence of this surname being somewhat bewildering to the stranger, but our notes on the present occasion relate only to the historic nurseries of Messrs. James Smith & Sons, at Darley Dale. As the ground actually under nursery stock covers some 230 acres, it is of course impossible to give a detailed description of the enormous stock, and we shall therefore merely mention a few of the salient points which struck us particularly in the course of our tour around the various departments.

"First and foremost of these is, without doubt, the magnificent stocks of hardy heaths which flourish here in a way which shows that the soil and climate suit them to perfection. The white varieties now so popular for cutting purposes are seen in broad flats, running into tens of thousands, the stocks of the E. albinos being, we believe, unequalled in the kingdom. Bi-color especially took our fancy, as it carries white, purple and pink flowers on the same plant, so that a flat had the effect of a very harmonious mixture of bedding plants. The rare Erica Mawiana, with rich purple blooms, also made a good display, as did the golden Ling, while Mediterranean and other varieties are only just in bud, and will, weather permitting, be making a brave show in December. The collection is a fine one, and the proprietors may be excused a little pardonable pride in this branch.

"A feature which strikes all strangers

The Retailer's Display Case.

is the grand stock of Gentiana acaulis, but this must be seen earlier in the year, when bands of blue running up the hill-side remind one of Alpine glories. A nice batch has now been worked up of the new white variety, which, though it did not appeal to us like the glorious blue of the type, will no doubt find a demand with the specialist. Two other plants not often seen in first-rate condition are Lithospermum prostratum, a rival to the gentians in color, and Daphne encorum, with its unrivaled perfume; both looked perfectly at home and happy, with apparently no special care or trouble. Another flowering plant grown in immense quantity is the ordinary tritoma, or torch-flower, as it is sometimes called."

BLIGHT ON DELPHINIUMS.

Does anyone know a cure for a blight that attacks the blooms of the hybrid delphiniums? The petals become black and somewhat curled. Sometimes the entire spike is affected, crippling it entirely, and in other instances only a portion seems troubled. W. C. E.

The choice named hybrid delphiniums sent out by such noted hybridists as Kelway and Lemoine seem to be peculiarly susceptible to the attacks of the blight spoken of. With American raised seedlings there is little trouble, unless the plants have been allowed to remain in one location without transplanting for a number of years. Beautiful as are these European hybrids, we find extreme difficulty in keeping them longer than three or four years. It is otherwise with home saved seedlings, which seem to possess far greater vigor. I have tried spraying with Bordeaux mixture for the disease, with only partial success. I do not know of any collection where these hybrids are successfully grown for more than four or five years before they run out. Transplanting into fresh soil every third season is good for all delphiniums and careful division of the roots in September may help to keep them clean, but we have had but indifferent success in retaining the choice double sorts.

DRACAENAS.

Dracaena Godseffiana is at first, or when it is young, a rather slow grower, but when it gets large enough for a 6-inch pot it goes ahead with amazing rapidity, considering its previous stubbornness. This dracaena makes a splendid specimen for the decoration of conservatories or even for dwellings. Its spotted green foliage is in striking contrast to all other dracaenas.

Dracaena Sanderiana is another variety with characteristics so distinct as to mark it from all other dracaenas. This variety is much used by florists in made-up pans for decorative work. It is easily rooted from cuttings made of the tops of old or useless plants. I mean useless for any other purpose. Pans of this dracaena sell readily at any time.

THE SEASON FOR REPAIRS.

During warm weather, and while we are likely to have it comparatively dry, also, is the proper season for repairing roofs, painting, etc. A thoroughly systematic going over now, when all conditions are favorable, will save a lot of trouble when the cold fall rains and frosts begin. If the work is postponed till September or later, it cannot be done in such an efficient manner, as the wood absorbs the evening moisture and becomes unfit to allow the putty or paint to take hold.

Where the sashbars are old and the putty decayed, it is sometimes most profitable to strip off the glass, clean and paint the sashbars and reset. This involves a little more time than patching, but if the work is done carefully the roof will be tight and dry for a year or two longer, and the better quality and quantity of cut will be ample compensation for the extra outlay, besides the added satisfaction, as there are few conditions so unsatisfactory to the grower as a leaky, draughty house.

Another and less expensive way to make an old roof tight is to run either mastic or old English soft putty along the edges of the glass, taking care to fill every crevice. By adding one-fifth of white lead to the putty it makes the job more lasting.

Particular care should be taken to see that the roofs are tight at the junction of roof and gutter, as this is where the cold air is most liable to come in and create the conditions most favorable to the germination of mildew spores.

This work is tedious and, if the weather is hot, very tiresome and trying, requiring care and patience, and should be intrusted to none but the most careful and painstaking.

Alterations and repairing of pipes and boilers, and putting fire boxes in good working order, should also be attended to while the weather is good.

Ventilators should also be examined and readjusted, so that they may be in good order when the winter season commences, thus simplifying the work of that season.

RIBES.

BUDS REFUSE TO OPEN.

Enclosed you will find a rose and bud. Please give its name and tell me what causes the rose to form such compact growth and refuse to open. Is it natural for this particular rose, or is it because of certain conditions of soil, food or trimming of the bush? Other roses, growing alongside, bloom finely.

All get the same treatment. It blooms all the season long, and late in the fall, when there are fewer buds, they open well.

H. F. K.

The buds reached me in such condition that it was impossible to be certain as to the variety. They appeared, however, to be Baroness Rothschild. This variety, when grown in the shade, either inside or outdoors, has a tendency to produce such a wealth of petalage that they sometimes refuse to open freely. This trait also shows in the old Catherine Mermet.

Cut out all small wood and trim the bush in such a shape that there will be free access of air among the foliage. Ventilate freely and do not overfeed with nitrogenous material. Bone meal or wood ashes would be the most suitable food at this season, especially as the bushes are not of this season's planting.

ROSES AT WOODS HOLE.

Hundreds of visitors from Providence, New York, Boston and even Philadelphia attended the annual rose exhibition on the grounds of Miss Sarah B. Fay's estate, at Woods Hole, Mass., held this year in the second week of July. Once a year during the rose season Miss Fay and her gardener, M. H. Walsh, who also grows roses for commercial purposes, hold a joint exhibition at which the grounds of the estate are thrown open to the public.

The Fay estate was developed from a rough New England farm and all about the place, even under the trees, are little gardens, most of them now filled with roses. A pergola between the great rose gardens of Miss Fay and Mr. Walsh—for each has now a share in the glory—is covered with the famous Debutante rose, and all about are rustic benches and houses where a flower-loving public may make itself at home, through Miss Fay's generous hospitality.

Three acres of the estate are devoted to the rose gardens, in which Miss Fay, the present owner, takes great pride. Almost every variety of rose is grown here and many new ones have been produced. The walks are all of grass and the rose beds are here placed in accordance with a color scheme designed to give the most artistic effect. One bed, for instance, has nothing but the new single Irish roses.

The name of Woods Hole has become known in remote quarters of the world by the production on this estate of new varieties of climbing roses through the process of cross-fertilization. The London horticultural paper, Country Life, in speaking of the recent Temple rose exhibition, said that "the sensation of the exhibition this year, as it was last, was the display of Hiawatha and Lady Gay roses, an American importation from Woods Hole, Mass."

This year four new ramblers have come out of Woods Hole—La Fiamma, the name of which indicates its flame color; Evangeline, with single flowers two inches in diameter; Delight, a bright carmine with a yellow center, and Paradise, with white and pink single flowers.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Callas.

Callas which have been resting for a few weeks should now be overhauled and repotted. In case any of the roots show signs of decay, cut the affected part clean away with a sharp knife, afterwards rubbing over the cuts with powdered charcoal. Callas like a liberal amount of root run and pots of fair size should be given them. Medium bulbs may go singly in 6-inch and larger sizes in 8-inch pots. In 10-inch and 12-inch pots several large bulbs may be grown. These will give you finer flowers than the smaller pots, as a rule. Use a rich compost consisting of two-thirds turf loam and one-third dried cow manure, to which may be added some fine bone and a good dash of sharp sand. After potting, place outdoors on a bed of ashes. Give one good watering and then keep on the dry side until root action is active. The plants need not be under glass until frost threatens.

Where bulbs were planted outdoors it would be well to postpone lifting them until August 20. In taking them up keep as many roots intact as possible and shade and spray freely for a few days until they become established.

Callas are not infrequently grown on benches, but we consider pot culture preferable, on the whole. While larger blooms are to be had from bench plants, those in pots seem to bloom with greater freedom in midwinter. For bench culture, five inches of soil, moderately rough, so that water will pass through it freely, is ample. A night temperature of 55 degrees to 60 degrees in winter suits them well. In a colder house they develop slowly.

Rambler Roses.

How are your rambler roses coming along for next season? If any are still under glass, place them outdoors now and plunge in a sunny spot where you can afford them plenty of water. The shoots will be growing vigorously now and should not be allowed to sprawl over the ground. Tie them up to stout stakes. This will insure good ripening of the wood. The pink varieties, like Dorothy Perkins and Lady Gay, make long shoots and stakes of considerable length will be needed for them.

The most successful way to grow these ramblers is in pots right through the season. They can be lifted in the autumn, but such plants cannot become sufficiently established to force well. When in bloom, it is an easy matter to tell which plants were pot grown all the time and which were lifted from the open ground in the autumn.

Red spider is liable to get a foothold on the Crimson Ramblers, but good pressure of water from a hose will keep it in check. Do not attempt any drying out at the root before the middle of September. After that date those with the most mature wood can receive reduced supplies of water.

Hard-wooded Plants.

The hard-wooded plants are, or ought to be, either planted or plunged in the open, where they can be freely syringed and watered. Left-over azaleas will now have their growth pretty well completed, but should not be dug up and potted before September. The same applies to acacias, which should now be making strong growth. The various ericas need plenty of moisture at the root, and a dressing of any old spent manure over the ground will be found beneficial. Genistas do not lift readily and, we presume, are in pots. They need clipping or pinching once a fortnight to keep them bushy. Boronias plunged in ashes are growing finely, as are eriostemons, pimelias and other hard-wooded stock.

No plants suffer more than this class from dryness at the root. A thorough drying out means death to the finer ericas, so be sure they are carefully watered and freely syringed.

Coleus and Alternanthera.

It may seem early to talk about propagating bedding stock, but the present is a good time to get in a good batch of cuttings of coleus and alternanthera. They are being less used each year, but florists will always find a certain demand for them. In the case of coleus, put them in the propagating bed and keep soaked with water. When rooted, put either in flats or several together in 5-inch pots. Keep pinched and they will be nice plants before winter. They are less inclined to become buggy than old plants. You may lift when frost threatens.

With alternantheras, the better plan is to dibble the cuttings right into flats of sandy soil, with good drainage. Keep moist and shaded and they will root quickly and cover the flats with growth before winter.

Scented Geraniums.

There is always a demand for leaves and shoots of the rose-scented geraniums in winter. If you did not keep any plants over in pots, get a batch of cuttings in without delay. They must not be kept soaked, as you would alternantheras and coleus, or all will rot. Give one good watering and a light syringing each day and pot off as soon as roots are an inch long. These cuttings will make nice plants before Christmas if kept potted along. Cuttings of the lemon-scented verbenas, Aloysia citriodora, also root freely now. Use soft shoots and water more freely than you would the geraniums.

Poinsettias.

Poinsettia cuttings root easily now, either in a greenhouse or frame, and nice little plants for pans may be had, put in as late as the middle of August. The early batch, if desired for cutting, the time the bracts begin to develop, when heat is essential, they will lose foliage quickly and prove disappointing. In boxes six inches deep they can be kept outdoors until September and then placed in a warm house.

Poinsettias are too leggy when grown to single stems in a pot. They are much better planted six or eight together in 8-inch to 10-inch pans. For this purpose the late struck cuttings will answer well, as they are shorter than the earlier rooted ones. Poinsettias quickly resent careless watering. Dryness and sogging will alike quickly cause a yellowing of the leaves.

French Bulbs.

The bulbs of Roman hyacinths and Paper White narcissi will be arriving shortly and a good batch of each should at once be placed in flats containing four inches of soil. Bulbous plants as a rule prefer a light and moderately rich soil, to which a little charcoal and sand is added. Fresh manure is harmful, but cow and horse manure several years old, which will crumble up in the hands, is ideal. Flats 15x30 will contain about eighty bulbs each. Soak thoroughly after the bulbs are planted and then cover with three inches of fine ashes, if you leave them outdoors. If you have a cool and dark cellar, set them on the floor and they will need no covering at all, but water must be given at intervals, for nothing ruins bulbs so quickly as dryness at the root.

Brief Reminders.

Nephrolepis, adiantum and other ferns established in pots will be much benefited by applications of liquid manure once a week. If snails are troublesome, lay traps of cabbage or lettuce leaves and examine them daily.

The latest propagation of chrysanthemums should now be potted. They will still make nice little plants before November.

If you have not a good supply of boxes ready to plant bulbs in, get lumber and make a number when you have spare time.

Sow mignonette seeds in small pots if you need a supply for Christmas and cannot afford any bench for it. Thin out to three plants in a pot and repot before they become potbound.

August is a suitable month in which to transplant evergreens. Select cool, showery days for the operation. Lift the plants with good balls and mulch well after planting.

Continue to transplant seedlings of biennials and perennials when the ground is moist.

Ply the hoe continually and hand weed among small seedlings, which are easily smothered during this tropical weather when weeds grow so rapidly.

Remove Manetti and briar suckers from hybrid roses outdoors. Remove any berries where flowers were not cut.

Watch for and destroy the aster beetles. Hand picking is the most effectual. Poison should not be sprinkled over the plants when the flowers are opening.

Where carnations are grown for summer bloom outdoors the plants will now require some staking. Model carnation supports are good.

Prepare a good pile of compost for bulbs, which will soon be arriving in quantity.

Pot the Harrisii lily bulbs as soon as received.

must be potted along or they get pot-bound. Better still, if you have a spare bench or house where you can give them 60 degrees at night, you will get some beautiful bracts. It is no use planting them in a carnation or chrysanthemum house. They will grow there quite well until the cool nights of autumn, but at

THE NIESSEN STORE.

The REVIEW takes pleasure in presenting its readers this week with some illustrations from photographs taken at the new building of the Leo Niessen Co., in Philadelphia. This building, which was completed last February, is of reinforced concrete and the appointments throughout are of the best. The cold storage system, a model of efficiency and economy, and the extensive telephone system are features of the establishment.

The history of the business is briefly told: Twelve years ago a young man, industrious, persevering and filled with enthusiasm for his work, saw the possibilities of the commission business in cut flowers, the bringing together of buyer and seller. He began in a small way; he met many discouragements, but he stuck at it. The business grew and prospered, a younger brother brought his valuable aid; several times larger quarters were needed. Three years ago the company was formed. Today they are doing a business of which they may well be proud. The products of a great stretch of territory are brought together and placed at the disposal of those within an area that is steadily broadening.

SWEET PEAS UNDER GLASS.

Will sweet peas germinate well if sown under glass the fore or middle part of August and flower for Thanksgiving and throughout the winter? Are the following varieties good for winter forcing: Dorothy Eckford, Lovely, the orchid flowering sweet pea Gladys Unwin, and King Edward VII? A. E. R.

Sweet peas sown early in August should flower in from twelve to fourteen weeks. They will germinate either in a greenhouse or coldframe, the latter being preferable to the former. As a rule, germination is more uncertain in the hot months, but if your seed is good you should have no trouble with it. If sown in frames, lift off the sash in the evening and leave off all night. Give them as low a night temperature as possible.

The sorts you name, while excellent, are not adapted for winter blooming, and if sown now will probably not flower until February or March. Use Earliest of All, Christmas Pink, Florence Denzer and Mont Blanc. The first two are pink and white, the last two pure white. These colors always sell well. A. Zvolanek has several winter-flowering sorts in other colors. C. W.

RAWSON'S SWEET PEA TRIALS.

About 125 florists and gardeners took advantage of the invitation of W. W. Rawson & Co. to visit their sweet pea trial grounds at Marblehead, Mass., July 27. About fifty of this number journeyed by special electric car from Scollay Square, Boston, the remainder coming by steam car, automobiles, carriages and on foot. The weather was as nearly perfect as possible and the plants showed the benefit of recent rains, being in fine bloom and all being carefully selected, with all rogues removed. The visit proved most interesting and valuable to sweet pea lovers. In order to add to the interest of the gathering, printed slips were handed out containing the names of all the sweet peas on trial, each visitor being asked to mark what he considered the twelve best varieties.

From the forty returns handed in the vote stood as follows:

Frank Dolly	38	Shasta	18
Nora Urwin	32	Helen Pierce	18
Queen Alexandra	30	Paradise	16
George Herbert	28	Emily Eckford	14
Miss Willmott	28	Eliza Eckford	12
Apple Blossom	26	Enchantress	12
Flora Norton	22	Blanche Ferry	12
Mrs. A. Watkins	22	Prima Donna	12
White Wonder	20	Gladys Unwin	10
Zoe	20	John Ingman	10
Admiration	18

Of other popular sweet peas, Dorothy Eckford only received 6 votes, Helen Lewis 2, Hon. Mrs. Kenyon 6, Lady Grisel Hamilton 0, Countess Spencer seedlings 2 and E. J. Castle 2. It will be noted that all the heaviest vote getters are novelties.

After a thorough inspection of the sweet peas and other plants, all of which were in grand condition, the visitors were entertained with refreshments. Then followed a well-contested baseball game and a trip through beautiful and historic Marblehead. The return car left for Boston at 6 o'clock, all voting the outing a most delightful one. Many ladies were present and to each a large bunch of sweet peas was presented on leaving.

Hearty votes of thanks were tendered Mr. Rawson and his manager, Maurice Fuld, for their many courtesies and kindness.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will hold a field day to inspect the dahlias in the Marblehead trial grounds on or about August 21. The plants promise to make a grand showing by that time, being very stocky at present and some already showing flower.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

A well attended meeting of the executive committee of the American Rose Society was held Wednesday, July 24, at the Hotel Martinique, New York. A decision was made as to the character of the certificate to be awarded for novelties, in addition to the gold and silver medals now offered; also a certificate for life membership. There is a life membership fund now invested, amounting to $2,700.

Philip Breitmeyer suggested that a committee be appointed to solicit life memberships, because the Rose Society needs a permanent endowment of sufficient amount to enable it to be an organization of vital and permanent force, and with this end in view President Simpson, upon motion, appointed the following members to take up this matter of soliciting life members: Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit; August Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.; Patrick Welch, Boston; P. J. Lynch, West Grove, Pa.; Adolph Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa.

A letter was received from Mr. Schupp, secretary of the Chicago Florists' Club, stating that he was directed to say that the Chicago Florists' Club desires to co-operate with the Rose Society to the fullest extent to make the exhibition next March a success. It was decided to adopt the schedule used at the Washington show. The list of special prizes has already been started with a considerable amount.

Mr. Hill reported that the E. G. Hill Co. will offer a prize of $50, to be used as the committee may designate for the Chicago show next spring. Mr. Hill suggested that in view of the splendid offers of Philip Breitmeyer and A. T. Boddington they ought to bring out a fine lot of exhibits and suggested that an effort be made to secure an exhibition in pots of all the novelties, European and others.

President Simpson advised that the attention of all rose growers, and especially private gardeners, be directed to the offers made by Mr. Breitmeyer and Mr.

Boddington. The former offers $200 and the latter $100 as first and second prizes for the best exhibit of outdoor roses in pots, in bloom, exhibit to consist of 150 plants, not more than five plants of one variety, correctly labeled, and to include all classes of roses suitable for outdoor planting.

The officers of the American Rose Society are much gratified at being able to offer such splendid premiums and hope that a goodly number of growers may compete, and that as a result we may have the finest display of outdoor roses in Chicago next March that has ever been made before the society. Mr. Hill stated that he understood that Alex. Montgomery, Alex. Scott, Peter Reinberg, Peter Bisset, Poehlmann Bros. Co., Myers & Samtman, F. H. Kramer and the E. G. Hill Co. will each have a new rose to exhibit, and stated that the appearance of so many new varieties will, if properly advertised, add interest enough to bring out a big attendance at Chicago.

Mr. Hill also reported that he was appointed at the annual meeting to attend the convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, which he did, and presented as best he could the aims of the Rose Society. Of this meeting he said: "I was most cordially received and was given a good hearing. I do not know what the result may be, but hope some good may come from the effort. It occurs to me that no one thing will direct more attention to our society or excite greater interest in the exhibition than to give full prominence to seedling roses and special encouragement to the originators."

The secretary suggested that the Rose Society make an effort to disseminate among its members, in pamphlet form, accurate information concerning fertilizers, insecticides, fungicides and soil chemistry, which, in his estimation, would create much interest among the present members and have a tendency to attract the younger generation of growers. Mr. May stated that this suggestion was along the line of that offered at the annual meeting, that the Rose Society ought to have a quarterly publication.

The committee voted to direct the secretary to prepare and publish a report of the society and to circulate the same to all members.

It was proposed to call a meeting of the Rose Society to be held during the S. A. F. convention at Philadelphia.

President Simpson said that he would leave for Europe July 31 and will not be present at Philadelphia; that he expected while away to visit some of the best establishments in England, Scotland and Ireland and hopes to bring back some matters which will be of interest to all interested in the rose.

The Market.

Old home week is expected to enliven the market somewhat this week. The city is more gaily decorated than ever before in its history and is already crowded with tens of thousands of visitors. The supply of roses and carnations continues to decline and there is no trouble in disposing of blooms of fair quality. No high grade blooms are arriving. Sweet peas are abundant and of good quality considering the dry weather. Prices are better than a week ago, when there was a considerable overstock. Asters are rather more abundant, but keep up well in price. Some nice outdoor gladioli are now arriving and sell well this week. There is only a moderate supply of lilies, but plenty of good lily of the valley. Water lilies are being freely used in window decorations. Green stock is only in moderate request.

Club Picnic.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club was favored with perfect weather for the annual picnic, which was held in Dorchester park July 25. The attendance was the largest ever seen at a similar gathering, over 500 being present. The picnic grounds, while close to the city of Boston, are quite secluded and being heavily wooded gave ample shade from the sun's rays. The various sports, as usual, attracted a great deal of interest and contestants were more numerous than ever. The following was the list of the sporting events, with the winners, the prizes comprising silver cups, hammocks, cameras, watch charm, silver watches, cuff links, suit cases, fountain pens and a wide range of useful articles:

Tug of war, commercial growers vs. private gardeners—Private gardeners, captained by James Wheeler, beat commercial growers, captained by W. J. Collins.

Picnic Jottings.

Once more the private gardeners proved too strong for the commercial men. The winning team consisted of J. Wheeler, captain; D. Finlayson, W. Kennedy, M. Lally, W. Robb, S. Bolton, J. Campbell, J. G. Duguid, A. Lowe, W. S. Grassie, P. Barker and J. L. Smith. The commercials pulled for all they were worth but were simply outclassed.

J. A. Pettigrew's hosts of friends were pleased to see him out again after his sickness.

J. Wheeler simply romped away from the field in the fat men's race. He captained the winning ball and tug of war teams and had a most strenuous day of it. Wheeler is as good a sport as a gardener.

Kenneth Finlayson got a nasty knock on the left side of the head with a quoit. The cut required half a dozen stitches. He pluckily returned to the field later in the day and is improving nicely.

Peter Miller made an efficient starter.

Wilfrid Wheeler filled the bill as hand-capper. J. F. Flood was megaphone man. Duncan Finlayson worked like a Trojan and much of the success of the picnic was due to the great amount of work he put into it.

As the tug of war contest ended, the skies, which had been serene all day, commenced to weep as if in sympathy with the feelings of the beaten commercialists.

F. E. Palmer, J. P. A. Guerineau and J. H. Cheyne were among those who played ball well.

Mrs. Robert Edgar proved the value of systematic training by winning the married ladies' race again.

The committee on sports, D. Finlayson, R. Cameron, J. W. Dinean, R. S. Edgar, H. M. Robinson, M. Fuld, W. Downs, James Wheeler and W. Wheeler, provided a bountiful supply of tea, coffee and sandwiches for any who had not brought lunches and also distributed several hundred boxes of chocolates and peanuts.

All present pronounced the picnic the best ever and absentees missed a grand treat.

Various Notes.

James Wheeler and family are spending their vacation at Pemberton Beach. J. T. Butterworth and Miss Rachel Butterworth sailed on the Ivernia July 23 for a two months' tour in Great Britain and on the continent.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will hold a field day at the Bay State Nurseries, North Abington, August 31.

There was a fine exhibition of fungi by the Boston Mycological Club, at Horticultural hall, July 25.

Not the least of the attractions of the great crowds in Boston this week is the city's incomparable park system. In the Boston and Metropolitan systems there are 10,000 acres in parkways and over twenty-five miles of boulevards.

PLANTS FOR CEMETERY LOT.

Will you kindly advise me what are considered to be the best hardy flowering plants for a cemetery lot? I would not care for anything that grows very large, or for a great quantity, but would like something that is hardy in Wisconsin climate and that will give as near as possible a succession of flowers from spring until fall by planting different varieties.

W. L.

If perfectly hardy plants are desired it will be necessary to use bulbs and herbaceous perennials. Crocus of any desired color can be planted late in October, also chionodoxa. These flower very early. Among these you could plant tulips, to follow them. Myosotis palustris or alpestris, forget-me-nots, are pretty in spring, as are pansies or Viola cornuta alba. All these will winter with a light winter covering, or the forget-me-nots and pansies may be planted in spring among the bulbs. They make a pretty groundwork to tulips and daffodils.

If you do not care to lift the bulbs after the flowering season is over, you can plant annuals among them. For ease of culture I would suggest using petunias or verbenas in separate colors for flowering from June to October, in preference to hardy perennials, none of which will flower so long as the two annuals named. These would be preferable to geraniums, which are so much used in cemeteries. The dwarf hardy phlox or moss pink phlox subulata, makes a pretty carpet of pink or white flowers in May and is often used on graves. If you do not care to plant any tender stock, I think Viola cornuta alba will bloom more persistently than any other hardy plant you can obtain.

I CONSIDER the REVIEW the most practical paper printed.—E. TRETHEWAY, New Haven, Conn.

BONE MEAL OR BONE FLOUR?

Would pure bone meal be as suitable as bone flour for mixing in potting soil for geraniums? M. W. W.

Bone meal is safe to use wherever bone flour is safe. The difference is that the flour acts with its full strength more quickly, while the meal is more lasting because it takes longer for the larger particles to decay. For quick-growing, short-lived crops use the flour, but for long-seasoned crops use the meal, as the food is released more moderately and more steadily. A. F. J. B.

DAMPING OFF.

According to the Kew Bulletin, extended observations made in the Jodrell laboratory strongly suggest, and in many instances prove, that, apart from the rusts (Uredineæ), smuts (Ustilagineæ), and certain other truly parasitic forms, fungi are not so frequently the primary cause of disease as they are generally supposed to be. For example, the minute fungus called Pythium Debaryanum is considered the primary cause of the damping off of seedlings. In reality this fungus can only grow in a damp situation, and consequently only destroys seedlings that are growing in damp, badly ventilated and badly lighted places. When seedlings are growing in open ground exposed to light and air they resist infection by the fungus. Hence, damping off is primarily due to that is favored, but there are double and single varieties. They come into flower earlier than the ordinary yellow marguerites, and are also easier to grow.

If raised from seed, they are inclined to run up rather tall, but where dwarf plants are wanted the tops may be taken off and rooted. And if sown in the autumn and the cuttings taken early in spring, the tops will flower much earlier than plants which have to be stopped or raised from spring sown seeds. They succeed best in a light, cool house, yet though considered hardy annuals, they should have just sufficient warmth to keep out frost when grown through the winter, but plenty of air and light is necessary. There are few plants which are so easily spoiled by warmth, and they cannot be forced into flower by giving heat.

TROUBLE WITH BEGONIA RUBRA.

We send plants of Begonia rubra which are diseased at the root. Please let us know the cause and remedy of same. Plants are not affected when young, but get the disease when a year old, or older. The stem of the plant turns black, leaves fall off and the plant slowly dies. S. & S.

The plants sent seem to be small for year-old specimens, but the trouble you have is not exceptional. Begonia rubra is perhaps the most robust growing variety of the whole genus. Have your

BULBOUS IRISES.

We wish someone familiar with the cultivation of the various kinds of bulbous irises, such as alata, histrioides, Caucasica, Pavonia, Persica and others, would give us some information regarding them. Are they as hardy as the English and Spanish kinds? T. K. C.

With one or two exceptions the bulbous irises named are not as hardy as Iris Hispanica or Iris Anglica. I consider Iris Hispanica perfectly hardy and one of the finest bulbs we have for massing purposes. The English iris, Iris Anglica, seems to do better in a rather drier location. It is less reliably hardy than the Spanish section.

Of the other bulbous irises, those from South Africa, such as I. alata and Juncea, are not hardy in New England, but will succeed in a frame or cool greenhouse. I. histrioides, pale blue, we find succeeds well on a bank where the soil is light and gravelly and where the ground gets fairly dry in summer. It receives some shade from overhanging trees. This pretty iris flowers very early, being in bloom this year before April 1. Iris Lusitanica is a robust variety, resembling a Spanish iris, flowers bronze with gold cup. It succeeds well treated like the Spanish iris.

I. Pavonia (Peacock iris) is uncertain, but I. Persica, with sky blue and yellow flowers, grows well treated the same as I. histrioides. I. reticulata, violet blotched with yellow, is a fairly reliable sort, doing well in a rock garden and in locations where the ground gets well baked in summer. This section flowers as soon as frost leaves the ground. I. tuberosa does well in an open border for a year or two; then runs out.

If desirous of trying one or two bulbous irises in addition to the Spanish and English varieties, I would suggest planting I. reticulata, Lusitanica, histrioides and Persica. The culture of the majority of the bulbous irises is something of a lottery, but those last named will be found tolerably reliable. W. N. CRAIG.

OLD-FASHIONED FLOWERS.

Among the so-called old-fashioned flowers the hardy phlox is now coming to be used commercially perhaps fully as extensively as any other. There are great numbers of phlox, in different colors and varieties, grown by florists and by growers for florists for summer use, and there are but few flowers more satisfactory for various purposes.

Just as soon as fresh hollyhock seed is obtainable it should be sown, either in flats or in the open ground in cold-frames. If the seedlings are got well started before fall and transplanted, they will grow enough during the winter, if they are given a growing temperature, to warrant their transplanting again, thus insuring their ability to flower the following summer. There is a good deal of difference in the value of plants that will flower and plants that will not, when offered for sale in the spring.

Delphiniums are among the most effective perennials grown. These are also used in large quantities by florists. Sow seed of these now also.

Seed of canterbury bells, sown now or even a little later, will produce splendid plants by next spring and summer. Sown in flats and the seedlings transplanted when large enough to handle and then bad cultivation. The host of fungi known as wound parasites are all secondary agents in promoting disease, the primary cause being the agent causing injury to the tissues, and thus enabling the fungus to enter. According to the bulletin, the punctures made by mites, greenfly, scale insects, etc., serve as starting points through which fungi gain an entrance to the living tissues.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SEGETUM.

There are now some much improved varieties of Chrysanthemum segetum which are extensively grown for the Covent Garden market in London. They may not be the true segetum, the native Corn Marigold, for they appear to be hybrids of segetum and coronarum. Most of those now grown are propagated from cuttings, and it is only the deep yellow plants not been kept cramped in too small pots and allowed to become quite dry at the root at times? There is no reason whatever why this begonia, of all others, should have a trace of disease if kept potted along and carefully watered. Use a compost of fibrous loam, old dried cow or horse manure and a little leaf-mold and sand. The plants will be better outdoors in the summer, where they can obtain a little shade, such as would be afforded by the high branches of a tree. This begonia should grow with anyone, but if your stock is in poor shape, why not get cuttings or plants from someone whose plants are clean? C. W.

grown so that they can take care of themselves through the winter, they will get along almost anywhere. Canterbury bells are very serviceable plants, either for pot-culture or when planted out in the open ground. D. M.

ISMENE CALATHINA.

Ismene calathina is a native of Brazil and does not withstand the trials of our winters outdoors; but it can be planted in the open in the spring to make its growth and to bloom in July. The bulbs must be taken up before frosts occur and be wintered in a dry, frost-proof place.

The greater worth of this bulbous plant consists in its ability to stand forcing, like a hyacinth or other so-called Dutch bulb. Certainly it is not adapted for early forcing, as its vegetation is not finished so early as that of a hyacinth, and naturally it must have a season of rest before it is awakened to a new life; but, just as is the case with the hyacinth, this rest period can be shortened considerably by placing the bulbs in a warm and moist place. The blossoms having great beauty and a pleasant fragrance, the plant forms a valuable change to the forced hyacinths, tulips, and narcissi. As a cut bloom, with long stalks, and of large size, ismene will find as much favor with the public as the eucharis, to which its blooms have some similarity.

Treated like gloxinias, the bulbs may be started in a warm house, placing them in damp sand. In the course of two or three weeks the roots will show themselves and the bulbs may then be potted singly or in twos and threes in rich soil and provided with good drainage. The pots should be placed on a warm bed and not kept dark as is the way with hyacinths, etc. In about three weeks the leaves will begin to show and the blooms will appear as soon as the leaves are fully developed. The flower buds to the number of three to five appear on stalks sixteen inches high and open in succession, but not so that all are open at one and the same time, as even when placed in a cool house the first bloom to open will be past its best before the next expands. As a period of ten to fourteen days elapses between the opening of the first bloom and the passing of the last, florists must take notice of this fact and act accordingly.

A large flowered variety, I. calathina grandiflora, has found its way into commerce. The bulbs will, with suitable cultivation, continue to flower for many years in succession if after flowering and the leaves have turned to a yellow tint, the bulbs are kept in a perfectly dry condition.

The Florists' Outing.

The Washington florists had a sure-enough outing. Never before was there such a gathering of the local craft at one time. Everybody was aboard the two special trains at 2 p. m. The trains were decorated with flags and pin oak brush. The engines looked like floats in some monster street parade. Most of the ladies and children were dressed in white, each wearing a dainty blue and gold badge and a huge smile—a sort of a can-it-be-possible smile. The men were introduced to each other and when we got through you could hear on all sides, "I had no idea there were so many florists in the district."

After viewing the great falls of the Potomac, we gathered around two tables at the historic Dickey homestead, where presidents of the United States have been entertained and many notable people have satisfied their appetites. Chicken was served in the good old southern style in the hills of Virginia and eaten by people from the District of Columbia. Winners of the athletic events were:

Potato race, Frank Fleury, a belt. Potato race for girls, Miss Bisset, a string of beads. One hundred yard dash for men, Robt. Featherstone, a dozen handkerchiefs. Fifty yard dash for ladies, Miss Eva B. Cook, a parasol. One hundred yard dash for boys, David Burlar, a base ball. Three legged race, J. Sharper and B. Johnson, suspenders and necktie. Sack race, Oliver Beveridge, a penknife. Quoits, George Cooke and Samuel Simmons.

Several events were postponed, owing to the lateness of the hour.

F. H. Kramer, who was in charge of the weather bureau, predicted a dampness on the inside, and there was, at the Dickey house. Mr. Kramer gave an exhibition in black art and was a grand success. His audience is still wondering where all those chickens went to; some say Jim Dumps helped him out.

Later in the evening Fred Miller, of Gude Bros., and Fred Liepley, of Kramer's, carried off the honors in trick riding on the carousel.

James Hardy, who received an awful bump in the sack race, is out again and says he had a bully time. Mr. Clark made a sensational jump at the falls. Mr. Clark is an old Alpine climber and is as sure footed as a goat. Mr. Robinson made the hit of his life as a sport promoter. Geo. Cooke also held up his end as the milkmaid.

Every flower stand in the city, except two, closed at 12 o'clock on Thursday. The outing was so much of a success that it is more than likely to be repeated before the season is over. When Adolphus suggested baseball the retail players commenced to watch the clouds roll by. He is the fellow that swatted the ball at Bayridge while playing the Baltimore florists. They still have a committee looking for the ball, with full power to act when they find it.

Mr. and Mrs. Peterson, from Cincinnati, stopped this week on their way to New York and Europe. O. O.

THE ANNUAL SPECIAL Convention Number

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

will contain a full report of the Philadelphia Convention of the S. A. F., and in other features will be fully up to the previous Special Issues of this journal. Enough said.

WITH so many persons without knowledge of the trade investing money in the greenhouse business, there are many splendid opportunities offered to men of experience to take charge of large and up-to-date plants.

H. N. HIGINBOTHAM, who is recognized as one of the great credit men of the country, in a recent address to merchants advised them to give all their patronage to one firm, of course selecting that one best equipped to supply their needs. His argument was that one then becomes an important customer and worthy of the best attention a house can give. The customer who splits up his business, buying little lots here and there, is of slight value to anyone.

THE REVIEW does not accept advertising outside the trade, pays no commission to any agent upon the rare occasion that a trade advertisement falls into an agent's hands to be placed, and never has bothered itself with the interminable string of requests from such sources for "full information as to rates, discounts to agents, special discounts, cash discounts and circulation." Any advertiser who cares to see the REVIEW's circulation records is welcome to do so—and there is no objection to showing them to the publisher of any contemporary who is skeptical.

AUGUST already; the summer is almost over. It is high time you were making preparations for the busy season, now close at hand.

ILLINOIS ASSOCIATION.

There will be a special meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association at the Leland hotel, Springfield, Ill., Saturday, August 10, 10 a. m., to consider the proposed changes in the constitution and by-laws. A. C. BEAL, Secretary.

GENERAL BUSINESS.

In the week's reports as to the state of general business the big commercial agencies made some most encouraging reports. Speaking for New York and the east, R. G. Dun & Co. said: "It is still noteworthy that there is practically none of the customary complaint of midsummer dullness in commercial or industrial channels. On the contrary, reports from many cities announce that all the backwardness of the early season in lightweight fabrics has been made up and the liberal distribution of merchandise is accompanied by steady improvement in mercantile collections."

Speaking for Chicago and the west Dun said: "Despite the hot weather, general business activity is undiminished and production in the heavy industries is without abatement. Satisfactory demand continues in leading retail, and the summer lines of merchandise undergo much depletion. Increasing accessions appear in the numbers of visiting buyers and their operations in staples compare favorably with a year ago. Collections in the western states leave little room for complaint."

Bradstreet said: "High temperatures have stimulated crop developments as a whole, helped retail trade in summer goods, and improved reorder business with jobbers, all these influences favoring some growth of the feeling that early poor starts in crops and trade have been largely made up for."

ASTERS

We have several growers who make a specialty of Asters—a specialty of growing them well—from special strains of seed worked up with much care. Consequently the cut stock has that extra quality that calls the buyers, whether flowers are plentiful or scarce. Try our asters.

BEAUTIES

Beauties are not so abundant as they have been—and our own crop will be heavier in a week or two—but our quality is as good as the best and much of the crop is long stemmed.

Kaiserins

Good crop of fancy Kaiserin, best summer rose. Also heavy cuts of other roses; quality as good as the market affords.

LILIES

Nice lots of both Longiflorum and Auratum Lilies—make a large showing for the money.

VALLEY

Choice valley always on hand; you can wire us any day in the year and be sure of getting any reasonable quantity by next train.

FERNS

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There was pronounced improvement in demand by the end of last week and this week started off with a call for stock which made it impossible to fill all orders. The demand for roses was ahead of the supply, but the greatest shortage was in carnations of a quality that would satisfy customers' requirements. Quite a number of houses report July business as hardly up to last year, but the closing week of the month has done much to restore the balance to the right side of the records.

There is a decided scarcity of good stock. The roses being cut are not numerous and the quality of Brides and Maids is such that wholesalers do not like to ship them. The heavy supplies of Beauty are no longer in evidence. Weather conditions are responsible for much black spot in the houses of summer Beauties and several of the large growers have been compelled to dry off these houses so that they are cutting little or nothing. Killarney is in good shape and about the most salable rose. Carnot, Mrs. Field, Kaiserin and Richmond also are in good shape. Few Liberty are now being grown in this vicinity, Richmond having almost wholly displaced this variety.

With few good carnations in the market and apparently few to be had in any of the cities within our shipping radius, the demand has caused a sharp advance in price for anything at all salable. Asters show considerable improvement in quality, but the supply is not yet large and does not serve to hold down the prices of carnations the way it will when asters become more abundant. Nice clean asters are seen, but the length of stem is not great with most of the growers and the increase in supply has not been as rapid as was expected.

We are approaching the end of the peony season and the demand for these flowers is not so great as it was, but those who still hold them in storage have no fear as to the outcome. The stock is keeping better than was expected. Prices are not high.

There continue to be large receipts of lilies, including longiflorum, auratum, rubrum and speciosum. About their only use is for window decoration or funeral work. The glut of sweet peas has passed.

Valley is abundant, but has been in better demand the last few days. Gladioli are not in large supply. Daisies are overabundant, but poor in quality.

There is no shortage of green stuff.

Kicks.

Every time that there is a sharp advance in prices in this market it brings indignant protests from out-of-town buyers who do not keep in touch with the situation. This week there has been more than the usual number of kicks because of the disparity between quality and prices.

Out-of-town buyers should consider that when supplies suddenly pass off in their own vicinity the same reduction always is noted in this market. At the same time demand is greatly increased and the result is a sharp advance in values. At seasons when quality is not high anywhere it is useless to expect superlative grades to be sent out on all orders placed in this market. The stock in the Chicago market averages rather better than that produced by local growers through the country, but no one can have big, solid roses with the temperature above 90 degrees. Prices are wholly regulated by supply and demand. Out-of-town customers often fail to realize that stock sent them could be sold over the counter without the bother of packing and shipping for at least as much money as they are asked for it. It is the practice of practically every house in this market to refuse local buyers stock which is called for by shipping orders. They do this because the local patronage never is stable and because the satisfied out-of-town buyer usually comes back for all he needs.

Unlimited Phones Win.

A committee of the city council has for months been wrestling with a new ordinance for the telephone company. Peter Reinberg has been one of those who have stood steadfast in a demand for an unlimited service, and at length the company and the majority of the committee have agreed that the ordinance shall provide for an unlimited service at the present rate, if the subscriber so wishes. Every wholesale florist would have found his telephone charges greatly increased under the measured rate.

Johnson's Speculation.

Ole Johnson has been preparing to turn a trick with a bunch of peonies in storage. He has held something over 1,000 dozens until the market has become practically bare of stock. Now he is bringing them out and, as he says, he sees "nothing in giving them away." One thousand dozens is no great lot for this market, but it remains to be seen whether the August flower buyers want cold storage peonies at high prices.

The Biggest Box.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is installing in its city store the largest ice-box in this market. Its length is forty-five feet four and one-half inches and John Poehlmann says they expect to cut enough stock in the next season so that even that last half inch will be needed. The box is seven feet deep and seven feet high, built by Orr & Lockett.

Thirty-first Street.

There are four retail flower stores within a few steps of the corner of Thirty-first street and Indiana avenue. Hildred, a few doors north from the corner, has an attractive store and maintains a good summer window. He has been located here many years and reports a steady annual increase in business.

A few doors south is the old E. Hobbs place, now conducted by George C. Wagner, who, besides his cut flower trade, does a large spring business in bedding plants and especially in filling window-boxes.

At Vernon avenue and Thirty-first street H. S. Morton is building up a nice trade. He is an energetic young man and branching out as rapidly as his facilities will warrant.

At Michigan avenue W. J. Smyth's employees report July business as, if anything, better than usual. Mr. Smyth is himself at his summer home at Antioch and only comes to the city for a day or two each week.

Various Notes.

There was a mix-up Sunday evening at a resort on Lincoln avenue in which Henry Welsh fell and broke his neck. Four of the young men in the place were arrested, among them Charles Kruchten, son of Nick Kruchten, the well-known carnation grower and brother of John Kruchten, the wholesale florist. There appears to be no special reason for holding young Kruchten, save that he was in the place at the time the accident occurred. He is 19 years of age and an excellent carnation grower, working at times for a number of the Bowmanville growers.

Henry Wehrman's asters as seen at Amling's show the result of three years' careful selection. He has saved his own seed during that period, reserving each season the finest flowers of each variety in his patch. The result has been a decided improvement in his strains.

A. C. Kohlbrand, of Amling's, has returned from a fortnight's fishing trip to Alden, Mich.

C. W. McKellar says the demand for orchids has improved with the call for other items. The crop of Cattleya Gaskelliana holds out surprisingly long.

Peter Reinberg and Leonard Kill, accompanied by their wives, are spending a few days at Salem, Wis., as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Kransz.

William Graff, of Columbus, arrived Monday from the resort where his family is. He came because his brother at the store had wired him that business would be much better if more stock could be obtained.

Charles Dressler, of the city store of Wieter Bros., is spending the week in Wisconsin on a fishing trip.

John Kruchten and family returned Monday from an outing at Fox Lake.

As an instance of how bare the market has been, E. E. Pieser, of the Kenicott Bros. Co., says that at closing time Sunday there was not a flower in the store, except a few bunches of sweet peas which had been thrown in the barrel. A Greek gave a quarter for the contents of the barrel.

Bassett & Washburn say that they have steadily had good business on Monday, Friday and Saturday, but that the middle of the week has been quiet. This week Monday brought a special run of orders for roses.

Clifford Pruner is no longer with the E. F. Winterson Co. It is understood he will go on the road, representing several supply houses on commission.

Fritz Bahr and family are at Niagara Falls and Fritz is spending a good share of his time in the selection of comic post cards, endeavoring to fit the fancies of his friends at home.

Two young ladies who have done especially well on the floor of the Flower Growers' Market this season are Miss Gunterberg and Miss Tonner. They have made an arrangement to look after each other's interests while they take their vacations. Miss Gunterberg now is away and Miss Tonner looking after the combined receipts. When Miss Gunterberg returns Miss Tonner will take her vacation and all the stock will go to Miss Gunterberg.

The A. L. Randall Co. reports special satisfaction that last week's sales were ahead of the same week a year ago. With receipts the lightest of the season, and a generally inactive market early in the week, such a result hardly was expected.

Vaughan & Sperry state that they expect their peonies to be all cleaned up by August 7. The demand is somewhat improved.

C. M. Dickinson and family have returned from their outing at Pelican Lake. Wm. Abrahamson, traveler for E. H. Hunt, is at home from a month's trip west as far as Denver.

Edward Amerpohl, of Janesville, Wis., was in town this week. He says he will have a good stock of his new fern for Weiland & Risch are already getting quite a cut of Killarney from young stock and J. P. Risch says they will cut carnations from new plants in two weeks.

Philip Schupp says that if the second half of the year shows as good an increase in business for the J. A. Budlong estate as the first half showed, everyone will be satisfied. The record shows that better average prices were realized than last year.

George Reinberg has his replanting operations practically completed.

All the carnation growers are hustling with the work of replanting.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

As to the cut flower market, what can be said when there is no market and the quietude of the wholesale section is oppressive? Even the advent of a buyer on the scene fails to awaken one from the lethargy. It is what Grover Cleveland would call the season of "innocuous desuetude." Prices do not vary. The quotations of a week ago are as near correct as one can make them, never forgetting, however, that the amount unsold and in the discard is always more than what finds its outlet through the legitimate retail channel. The fact is, the retail river is very dry and, apart from a funeral or a vessel sailing, there is no break in the clouds, nor will there be before the August weddings are heard from. Down at Newport and other popular society summer resorts it is better and dinners are all the go, with some quite elaborate decorations. Siebrecht, Smythe and Leikens seem quite contented with the volume of summer trade furnished by the society element.

Beauties hold firm and any extra fine stock brings top prices. Carnations are scarce and consequently higher where the quality is up to the mark. But there is not a great deal of quality yet on exhibition.

The gladiolus, as to quantity, is king and immense shipments are coming in, larger and finer every day. Asters for some reason, perhaps the long spell of dry weather, are yet few and poor and later than anticipated. There will probably be enough and to spare before the week ends.

Brides and Maids are resting. Few that come have either color or substance. Orchids are abundant, but there seems to be a steady outside demand that leaves no surplus. One of the noted orchid growers, Julius Roehrs, Sr., has gone to Europe, his annual trip, combining pleasure and business. Henry Hurrell, of Lager & Hurrell, was in the city Monday and says the firm will have a handsome orchid display at the convention.

Various Notes.

Convention matters grow more interesting daily. The special train is now assured. Commodore Nugent has his bill of fare completed and it will take several cars to accommodate the crowd. There will be many exhibitors from New York, more than at any convention ever before held by the S. A. F.

credit to Mr. Bunyard for the idea. It is something every retail florist will want when he sees it. You will find it among the Reed & Keller exhibits at the Philadelphia convention.

The Greek outing, at Witzel's, this week Friday promises to be a big success. The Greek-American Retail Florists' and Growers' Association is the ambitious name of the combination. Tickets, including boat ride, dinner, etc., are reasonable in price and many have been sold. Several of the wholesalers will attend. It would take a long time to count the Athenians in this country who have adopted the florists' profession. Their stores are all over the big city and there are some showy ones among them.

C. R. Johnson, of Lindenhurst, N. Y., was in the city Monday. His specialties are sweet peas and carnations and his stock is handled by A. M. Henshaw.

The Johnston Heating Co. is installing two steel return tubular boilers in the big range of greenhouses at Samuel Untermyer's place, at Yonkers, N. Y., and are also caring for Dard's conservatory, at his new store on West Seventy-second street.

J. K. Allen and wife leave this week for Atlantic City, where they will remain until the convention. Mr. Allen, who is the vice-president of the library association at Kearney, N. J., made a fine decoration at the opening of the Carnegie library there last week, a large floral book with the inscription "Knowledge is power" in roses being especially admired. Miss Smedley, the bookkeeper for this house, is back from the mountains, also Miss Emma Trojan, of Charles Millang's office force. The gentler sex in all the wholesale houses have had especial holiday recreation this season and are coming back painted by sun and breeze and ready for the strenuous labors of the rapidly nearing busy months.

Joseph Fenrich and family are at Asbury Park, N. J.

M. A. Bowe and son, Kenneth, are at South Orange, N. J., where the new pony and cart are doing double duty. Frank Good, formerly with Hart, on Madison avenue, is now one of Mr. Bowe's force at Twenty-fourth street and Broadway.

Charles Schimmel, with Ford Bros., is back from a two weeks' vacation in Florida, and Patrick Donegan, of the same house, has departed for Saratoga.

Arthur Weise has returned to H. E. Froment's and James Maloney, the bookkeeper here, leaves Saturday for a two weeks' holiday at Lake Hopatcong.

W. H. Gunther and family are at Long Branch and George Hildebrand, of John Young's, and family are at Darien, Conn.

Mr. and Mrs. John Seligman have enjoyed a two weeks' rest in the Catskills and next week Joseph Levy and wife depart for Lake Huntington, Sullivan county.

C. W. Ward is in Michigan.

the fall business booked is in excess of other years. They are steadily adding to their line and have several good novelties this season.

The market gardeners and the growers with stock in the fields have been badly in need of rain. It came at the first of this week and did great good.

A fire on Fifth avenue and Forty-second street did considerable damage in the building in which the fine retail store of Thomas Young, Jr., is established, but was subdued before it reached his premises.

The Market.

Last week was the hottest of the season and, of course, this did not improve business or stock. Quite a bit of funeral work was made up last week, but in all other lines business was dull and the days become monotonous about the flower stores. The wholesalers, too, are having lazy times after the morning sales are over. So little stock is coming in that in a few hours all has been disposed of and delivered.

A look over the stock that came in Monday morning, at the different wholesale houses, showed that there was hardly enough to go around. J. F. Ammann is still sending in a few good Killarney, Ivory and Richmond roses. Beauties of the first grade are scarce; in fact, all grades in these are short.

Carnations are poor. No fancy grades are coming in. Asters are selling well; so are gladioli. As these are good keepers, they make excellent window decorations. Plenty of these are coming in, increasing in quantity each week. The foregoing is about what makes up the market these dull days.

Rate to Philadelphia.

In the rate and routes given Wm. C. Young, state vice-president of the S. A. F., the $25 rate quoted was in error, to Jamestown via Philadelphia, as this ticket does not carry any stopover.

The 60-day, $30.60 ticket with 10-day stopover at Philadelphia via rail to Norfolk, stopover at Norfolk, via boat to Washington, stopover at Washington, Baltimore, Harrisburg, Pittsburg, etc., is the best ticket and will be used largely by the florists.

The Florists' Picnic.

The fourteenth annual picnic given by the St. Louis Florists' Club was held Thursday, July 25, at Ramona park. Every car that came out was loaded with florists. The reception committee, Messrs. Fillmore, Schoenle and Beneke, had a hard task supplying all with badges, which entitled them to all privileges, including refreshments and cigars. The attendance was the largest ever seen at a florists' outing. There were 300 badges and these were not enough, so the crowd was estimated at close to 350, which included the friends and children of the florists. The weather was hot and the racing did not attract as usual. The trustees had everything in readiness and deserve great credit for successfully carrying out every detail.

The first event was the 100-yard dash, open to all. This was won by August Hartman, of Kirkwood; Fred Alves, second. Prize, silk umbrella. Next came the 50-yard race for girls under 16. There were seven entries. This was won by Alice Music; prize, a fan. In the 100-yard race for boys 12 to 16 years of age the winner was John Bentzen; prize, ball and bat. The potato race for boys and girls under 16 came next. The winner for the boys was Joe Kerr, and for the girls was Alice Music; prize, a box of candy each. In the 50-yard egg and spoon race for married ladies, Mrs. W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, was the winner after a hard run; prize, silver meat fork. For the hop, step and jump, Fred Alves had a walkover and won as he pleased, his jump being thirty-two feet three inches. Miss Rose Windler won the 50-yard race for young ladies over 16 years; prize, a fan. The ninth event was the 50-yard race for boys under 12 years. Edwin Lammers had little trouble winning this, a catching glove. Next came the exciting event, the tug of war, between a team of florists from Kirkwood and a team from St. Louis. After a hard pull Kirkwood was declared the winner; prize, a box of cigars. The ball throwing contest by ladies was won by Mamie Trockenbrock. The flower pot breaking contest, for ladies only, was won by Mrs. Klockenkemper.

This ended the miscellaneous games, when all wended their way to the ball grounds to witness the main event of the day, a ball game between the wholesalers and the retailers. The latter team was made up of employees of C. Young & Sons Co. The line-up was as follows: Wholesalers—Hartman, p; Alves, c; Schriefer, 1b; O. Ronkes, 2b; Shipper, 3b; Huettelman, cf; Christie, ss; Bonning, rf; Spenger, 3b. Retailers—J. Schroter, c; L. Schroter, p; H. Young, 1b; W. Young, 2b; P. Browning, cf; Edwards, lf; Locklett, rf; Schroter, ss; Brocket, 3b.

The game was called after five innings were played, the score being eleven to five in favor of the wholesalers. The feature of the game was Christie's double play and Huettelman's home run with the bases full. Both teams played fine ball at times.

After this all the younger folks had a good time dancing and singing. Miss Nellie Broe, of Eggeling's, sang beautifully the new song, "Love Me and the World Is Mine." After hearing her sing, the last of the crowd left at 10:30 p. m. and all voted this the best picnic ever given by the Florists' Club. The few stay-at-homes again missed a great treat.

W. C. Young was on hand talking S. A. F. to the members, and has, it is said, quite a delegation to go with him in his special car to Philadelphia.

E. W. Guy and Henry Emunds, of Belleville, with their families, had a good time. It is a long way to come, but it was worth it, they say.

Carl Beyer had to use a cane in order to get around, as his limb still troubles him. The cane was won at one of the florists' outings.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, with his family, never misses a florists' picnic.

Kirkwood was almost as well represented as St. Louis.

The two oldest florists on the grounds were F. W. Ude, Sr., and Francis Fillmore, both over 80 years old. They found much enjoyment in all the events.

Various Notes.

Julius Dilloff, a representative of the Schloss Bros., New York, called on the trade last week.

George Waldbart left Wednesday of last week for a trip to Europe, to be gone one month.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, is sending in a fine lot of gladioli, which meet with a good demand.

Miss Meyers, bookkeeper for G. Angermueller, has returned from her vacation looking much improved in health.

Gus. Eggeling, who was reported sick in the last issue, is up and around again. He says he had a narrow escape this time.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will on next Thursday afternoon hold its meeting at the Missouri Botanical Garden. The annual election of officers will take place; also other important matters will come up for discussion. This being the last meeting before the S. A. F. convention, a large attendance is expected. The members are also invited to bring their ladies with them, who will be entertained by Mrs. Trelease and Mrs. Irish.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Widespread mortality has caused a decided quickening in the demand for cut flowers during the last week. While not in any sense an epidemic, this mortality is pronounced, probably owing to the extreme heat on several days. Asters are easily first in the market. The better varieties, Semple's and a choice white, noted in this column last season, Ostrich Plume, have made their appearance so early as to indicate improved methods with the growers. Prices have advanced, due to quality, and on several days there were not enough to meet the demand. Valley also was scarce. Liliun auratum is in fair demand. Adiantums have been selling well, also galax and dagger ferns.

New crop Beauties have made their appearance and are a welcome addition.

To sum up, flowers are scarcer than a week ago, and hardly equal to requirements, excepting the outdoor stock and indoor stock of poor quality.

Convention Hospitalities.

The entertainment committee in charge of the S. A. F. amusements has accepted the offer of H. Bayersdorfer & Co. to give a luncheon in honor of the visiting delegates on Thursday, August 22, from 12 until 4 o'clock. This luncheon will be held on the roof garden of the Bayersdorfer building at 1129 Arch street. Mr. Bayersdorfer has engaged an orchestra for the occasion.

The bowling committee, in charge of William Graham, is full of activity and promises an excellent program. Clubs forming teams of five ladies each will have an opportunity to compete for handsome prizes.

The reception committee, consisting of Robert Craig, William K. Harris and John Westcott, reinforced by William Graham and Samuel S. Pennock, has been deputed to invite Governor Edwin

S. Stuart and Mayor John E. Reyburn to address the convention at its opening session.

Next Tuesday's Meeting.

Next Tuesday's meeting of the Florists' Club promises to be one of special interest. First, there will be the all-absorbing convention arrangements; then George Redles, one of our best informed plantmen and botanists, will speak on "Some Observations on Native Plants." And last, but by no means least, will be the competition for the Nephrolepis Amerpohlil prizes offered by William P. Craig. REVIEW readers will remember that nine of our most skillful private gardeners entered this competition, each receiving three plants of this new fern three months ago, under the conditions that they be grown until the August meeting of the club and there exhibited. There were no restrictions as to size of pots or pans. Three cash prizes have been offered. The winner of first prize is also to receive one plant, the remainder reverting to Mr. Craig. Reports from the gardeners indicate that some wonderful specimens will be seen. Mr. Craig has further plans for entertaining his fellow members, in the shape of music and refreshments. His brother, Robert A. Craig, has composed an original song, a parody, I think, on "The Kangaroo," which he will sing with piano accompaniment.

An Interesting Idea.

A. M. Campbell once told Phil a story about an editor who secured a pair of game roosters, dipped their feet in the ink bottle and allowed them to fight on a large sheet of white paper. After the battle the sheet of paper was handed to an imaginative reporter, who was told to write a story about it. The reporter, who knew nothing about the battle, wrote a marvelous story concerning Chinese hieroglyphics, or something of the sort. Mr. Campbell has stoutly protested that there was nothing pointed in his telling this particular story to Phil, but it seemed odd nevertheless.

That story will recur whenever the question of the fitness of a thing for publication is up for decision. Despite the story, Phil has the courage to print the following simple statement of facts:

When David Cliffe was proprietor of the Enterprise Greenhouses, in Germantown, the principal house, called the showhouse, was devoted to palms, with an occasional sprinkling of flowering plants. These palms were in the house the entire year. Later, when Emile H. Geschiek came into possession of this place, the character of the showhouse was changed. It was filled in the fall with chrysanthemums, in winter with bulbous flowers and some flowering plants, at Easter with lilies, azaleas, etc.; in the spring with geraniums, bedding plants, vines and vegetable plants. The house was used as a workshop in so far as was necessary for potting and caring for the plants. Each crop was brought forward and matured so far as possible in this house, the idea being that the passersby might see the seasonable operations in indoor gardening.

The result has been most gratifying. Interest was awakened, many visits of investigation made and business stimulated. Of course, cleanliness in a show-house is an absolute necessity at all times.

This may not be a new idea (there is nothing new in the world), but at any rate it is an idea worth considering.

Various Notes.

M. Rice & Co. are making great preparations for the coming florists' convention. They will keep open house during convention week.

Miss Evans, who is in charge of Edward Reid's office, has been visiting the Jamestown exposition, as the guest of Lloyd G. Blick, of Norfolk, Va.

Henry I. Faust, of Merion, says, "What's the use of worrying about poor business? Next winter is coming." Mr. Faust is a true philosopher.

George Anderson is deeply interested in the subject of automobiles just now.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. made and shipped a very handsomely decorated pair of wedding gates for a special order recently. Mr. Bayersdorfer secured the agency for the novelty crepe paper flowers while in Europe. These flowers are wonderfully perfect.

The Robert Craig Co. has a large house of fine Liliun auratum in full bloom.

PHIL.

FOSTERS HOME GARDENS.

Boston and its environs are noted for the character of the home gardens and for much of the good work in this direction the influence of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society is to be credited. The society exerts its influence in many ways, among them being a schedule of premiums offered by the society through the committee on gardens, for the encouragement of the horticultural development of private grounds.

There may be an impression abroad that these premiums are intended only for large estates, but in recent years the committee has so arranged the schedule that all classes of private gardens and grounds are eligible, as the following list of prizes offered will show:

The H. H. Hunnewell triennial premium of two prizes, $160 and $80, is offered for an estate of three acres or more, and special prizes of $50 and $25 are offered for an estate of from one to three acres. For still smaller places, of from 5,000 to 20,000 square feet, two prizes, the first a silver medal and $10 and a second of $10, are offered for the best flower garden and also for the best vegetable garden. For the best garden of hardy roses two prizes, $30 and $20, are offered and the same are offered for the best peony garden.

Entries can be made at any time during the season up to September 15, excepting in the rose and peony classes, which, of course, must be visited when in flower.

In making examinations of smaller estates and gardens the committee pays a good deal of attention to tasteful arrangement and to the general economy and thrift displayed, especially in regard to the neatness of the grounds.

The committee this year is composed of Charles W. Parker, chairman; Oakes Ames, George Barker, W. M. Craig, Wm. H. Elliott, A. F. Estabrook, A. H. Fewkes, J. A. Pettigrew, W. W. Rawson, Wm. P. Rich, H. P. Walcott, and S. M. Weld.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Henry P. Weber.

Henry P. Weber, vice-president of the H. Weber & Sons Co., of Oakland, Md., and manager of the farm operations of the firm, died July 20, from the effects of a rifle wound in the head. Early in the morning he was found unconscious in his poultry house, and he expired four hours later. The first newspaper reports stated that he had committed suicide, but a fuller investigation of the circumstances seems to prove it impossible that the wound was self-inflicted. It is believed that Mr. Weber had heard a disturbance in his chicken coop, that he had taken his rifle there with the thought of possibly shooting some animal that had been killing his poultry, and that the weapon had been accidentally discharged.

Mr. Weber was 39 years of age. He had lived in the neighborhood of Oakland for twenty-four years and had made a host of friends by his genial manner and business integrity. He married Miss Grace Jackson, of Lonaconing, Md., and is survived by his wife and five children, his mother, five brothers and five sisters.

Gustave Kiesling.

Gustave Kiesling died at the Savannah Yacht Club, Savannah, Ga., July 26. He had been ill for several weeks and his death was not unexpected. He was 74 years old.

For many years Mr. Kiesling was the leading florist in Savannah. He began business soon after the close of the Civil War, and for some years had the field to himself. His greenhouses and nursery were located near Abercorn and Fortieth streets. He retired from the business some time ago and since had been living at the yacht club. He was born in Germany, but came to America when a mere lad and settled in Savannah. He fought through the Civil War as a Confederate soldier. He was married in Savannah. His wife died a number of years ago. He is survived by no members of his immediate family, and has but two relatives in Savannah, a niece, Mrs. Smith, and a nephew, H. S. Teynac, who is now in charge of the flower business in which Mr. Kiesling was engaged. Mr. Kiesling was a member of Savannah lodge of Elks.

George Raymond.

George Raymond died July 23 at his residence in Clifton Springs, N. Y. Mr. Raymond was born in Geneva, N. Y., seventy-seven years ago. August 10, 1862, he enlisted in the Forty-fourth regiment of New York State Volunteers, and he saw three years of active service. He was captured by the Confederates five days before the end of the war. Mr. Raymond was married at Macon, Mich., February 3, 1855. In 1873 he and Mrs. Raymond moved to Clifton Springs, which place has since been their home. Since 1900 he and Mrs. Raymond have been successful florists. He leaves his wife and two children.

Henry F. Rosenberger.

Henry F. Rosenberger died at his home, 946 Chew street, Allentown, Pa., July 23. His death was due to a complication of diseases. He was born in Hilltown, Bucks county, Pa., October 5, 1844, and attended the schools in that section. In October, 1863, he began teaching school. In his later years he sold nursery stock. Besides his wife, Amanda E., he is survived by one son.

Hiram Merrihew.

Hiram Merrihew, a well known gardener at Burlington, Vt., has been missing since July 18 and July 26 his body was found in Lake Champlain. He is thought to have been drowned by the capsizing of his launch.

James Young.

James Young, of Hartford, Conn., died of tetanus at St. Francis' Hospital July 26. Mr. Young's death followed a severe attack of convulsions, that began at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and lasted with short intervals up to his death at 8:15 o'clock. The trouble started from a puncture in his right foot from a rusty nail while he was working around his greenhouse a week before. The wound was not serious and seemed to yield readily to local remedies, and after being poulticed it appeared to heal. The muscular stiffness began July 25 and was attributed to a cold, but it became worse towards evening and the services of Dr. Joseph P. Ryan were called on.

Mr. Young was about 40 years old and came to this country from England in 1892, settling in Hartford one year after his arrival. He was descended from an old family of English gardeners and followed the florists' business with much success, which he had conducted in Hartford for the past eleven years. He is survived by his wife and five children. His brother, William Young, has charge of the greenhouses of S. W. Robbins, of Wethersfield, Conn. Mr. Young was much respected in his community and was a member of a number of fraternal and benefit organizations, among them the United Workmen, Woodmen and Foresters.

OMAHA.

The annual picnic of the florists of Omaha, South Omaha and Council Bluffs was held at Lake Manawa July 25 with over 100 in attendance. The program of athletic sports was not carried out because of the dampness of the grounds, but there was a bowling contest, in which J. Hess, of Omaha, won first prize, a silver-mounted umbrella. J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, won the second prize, and B. Floth the third, each receiving a box of cigars. Supper was served in the pavilion at 6 o'clock.

We highly appreciate the work you do in encouraging the trade and hope the REVIEW may continue to improve.—GRANER BROS., Washington, D. C.

St. Louis, Mo.—The eighteenth annual banquet to gardeners, florists and nurserymen, provided for in the will of Henry Shaw, founder of the Missouri Botanical Garden, will be held at the Southern hotel August 14.

The Florists' Manual

We note your advertisement in a recent number of the REVIEW of the second edition of Scott's Florists' Manual, and request that you enter our order for a copy of this valuable book. The writer is thoroughly acquainted with the first edition of this work, having often had occasion to use it for reference while a student at the Michigan Agricultural College. Please rush this order, for we feel, with Mark Twain, that we "would rather not use violence."

RADISH will be a scarce item again this season.

THERE are reports of operations by the army worm in Wisconsin.

BOYD'S DISPATCH says there are seventeen seedsmen in the Hawaiian Islands.

P. G. CAMPBELL, Oswego, N. Y., intends to add an extensive line of seeds to his rapidly growing florists' business.

A. A. BERRY, Clarinda, Ia., has begun harvesting onion sets. He has twenty-two acres in sets this season and reports a fair crop.

ALTHOUGH seed crops now appear in better shape than a few weeks ago, there is prospect of almost no surplus after deliveries on contracts.

THE canners report a short pack of Alaska peas, although one packer advises that "east of Rochester, N. Y., the growers have a full average yield."

THE warehouse of the newly organized Dakota Improved Seed Co., Mitchell, S. D., is well under way. The first structure will be 70x74, three stories high.

THE wholesale seedsman's greatest worry just now is not where he shall look for orders, but where he shall search in quest of stock to fill those already taken.

PLEASE extend our order to make it thirteen insertions of our advertisement of colored seed bags. Results are very satisfactory.—HERNDON, LESTER & IVEY Co., Richmond, Va.

THE peas are past the point of greatest danger, but have not come through as well as had been hoped, and the condition of most fields is not so good as it was a month ago.

It is said that stocks of seeds of the popular greenhouse varieties of sweet peas are so low that they are not likely to meet the increased demand expected to result from the excellent profit made last season by the forcers of winter flowers.

JACQUES ROLLAND, Nimes, France, states that his seed business has been continued uninterruptedly since 1680, or for 227 years. He adds: "I should be very glad to know if I can count myself to be the oldest establishment in the seed trade line."

ONION sets at Chicago have suffered, on low land, during the extreme heat of the last fortnight in July, the tops on some pieces falling over and rotting. Weeding has been pushed. Harvesting will begin in a few days, but the bulbs are not forming as rapidly as the growers would like.

CALIFORNIA SEED CROPS.

to harvest spinach, salsify, radish, lettuce and sweet peas. The latter three items are running short and will not be an average crop. The onion crop is setting and what acreage is now left promises to be a fair crop, providing we have no unfavorable weather before it is harvested. It will be about three weeks before we begin cutting onion seed. We are still of the opinion that it will be very short, owing to the limited acreage.

HARRISII BULBS.

The main shipment of Harrisii bulbs reached New York July 26 on the steamer Bermudian. There were consignments on board as follows, according to customs house figures:

PUGET SOUND CABBAGE SEED.

Frank Leckenby, vice-president and manager of the seed department of the Charles H. Lilly Co., Seattle, Wash., writes as follows under date of July 24:

NEBRASKA SEED CROPS.

The end of July is too early a date, says William Emerson, of the Western Seed and Irrigation Co., Fremont, Neb., to give any positive information as to yields, etc., of the different crops we are growing. We can only give a general idea of the conditions at present.

We find on looking through our crop book, and drawing off a memorandum of the acreage and present conditions, that with a few exceptions, and a favorable season from now until fall, and throughout the harvesting season, we should be able to fill our contract orders nearly in full.

We further wish to state that our contract orders have run considerably larger than last year, and that we have a larger acreage of nearly all varieties growing this season.

We have, however, been obliged to reduce the quantities of some of the va-varieties ordered a little late in the season, and owing to the increase in the size of our orders, do not anticipate much, if any, surplus, with possibly the exception of a few varieties.

Nearly all early and medium early sweet corn crops in Nebraska, in so far as we know, are in fair condition, and we believe they will make good crops and become well matured. The same will apply to our crops of Stowell's Evergreen and Country Gentleman, but our crops of Mammoth Late, Egyptian, and Zig-Zag Evergreen are practically failures.

We have received favorable reports from nearly all of our growers of flint and field corns, also cucumber, and other vine seeds, although a few of our crops were damaged slightly in one locality by hail. We believe, however, they have recovered, and will make fair crops.

Generally speaking, we do not look for any large surplus crops this season; neither do we look for any excessively short crops, excepting a few varieties.

NOVELTY IN CABBAGE LETTUCE.

Cultivators are notoriously suspicious of novelties in salad plants, as in other vegetable productions, but the new variety of cabbage lettuce, Ruhm von Frankfurt, according to a writer in Muller's Deutsche Gartner Zeitung, is a great acquisition for cultivation in frames for early work, and the price it fetches in the market per head is nearly

"The crop of egg plant is looking well and fruiting nicely, and bids fair to produce a good crop; but there appears to be some disease among the plants, which may affect the final outcome seriously.

"The cowpea crop will be exceedingly short, for the reason that there was not enough stock seed in the country to plant any crop to speak of."

THE MELON APHIS.

The melon aphis, or, as it is commonly known, the melon louse, injures plants by piercing them with its beak and sapping their vitality. It occurs from early spring to late in autumn on melons and other cucurbits of all kinds, and in seasons which favor its increase, notably in summers following springs that are cool and rainy, it frequently develops in enormous numbers and does very serious damage, collecting in masses on the under surface of the leaves of plants and causing them to curl, shrivel, and lose color, and interfering with the ultimate development of the fruit. Often it kills plants outright, and destroys whole fields or greatly reduces the yield of fruit.

The melon aphis is a minute, soft-bodied creature, of variable color, usually of some shade of green or greenish black; in its young and wingless stages, louselike in appearance, and of sluggish habit throughout its existence. This is by far the most important and abundant aphis affecting melons and

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS SWEET PEAS

BODDINGTON'S EXTRA EARLY CHRISTMAS WHITE SNOWBIRD.

An exceptionally early Sweet Pea for indoor flowering—will bloom six weeks after sowing. Color clear white, upon long stems; habit fairly dwarf, and of exceptionally free flowering qualities. Trade pkt., 50c; ¼ lb., $1.00; ½ lb., $1.50; 1 lb., $2.50.

CANARY. Similar to the above, but flowers of an exceptionally good yellow. Trade pkt., 50c; ¼ lb., $1.00; ½ lb., $1.50; 1 lb., $2.50.

FLAMINGO. Color scarlet; free flowering and early. As the crop of this variety was small, we can only send out packets this season for trial. Pkt., 25c; 5 pkts., $1.00.

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS PINK. This is the earliest and most profitable and useful Sweet Pea in cultivation, as by sowing the seed under glass in latter part of August flowers can be cut from Thanksgiving on during the winter months. ¼ lb., 30c; ½ lb., 50c; 1 lb., 75c.

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS WHITE. A companion to Christmas Pink. Just as free and profuse a bloomer, and is, without doubt the finest early white for indoor planting. ¼ lb., 30c; ½ lb., 50c; 1 lb., 75c.

other cucurbits, and is not likely to be confused with any other species occurring habitually on the same class of plants. It is, indeed, a most important pest, and, taken season after season, the worst aphid occurring in this country. It is generally distributed throughout the United States, but does more injury in the southwest than elsewhere. In Texas, Kansas and Nebraska it is particularly troublesome to melons, and in the last two states to cucumbers.

There is perhaps no better example, among insects, of a common and widespread species being held in abeyance and limited to innocuous numbers (save in exceptional seasons) by natural enemies than the melon aphid. The usefulness of these natural enemies, of which a large number have been recorded, in subduing the aphides cannot be overestimated. Garden and field aphides generally are subject to attack by the same classes of parasitic and predaceous enemies. The number of species of insects known to prey upon the melon aphid is about thirty-five. The list includes many ladybirds or ladybugs. The value of these natural enemies against aphides is such that entomologists frequently advise the employment of remedies only when the enemies are not present in abundance.

The severe losses occasioned by the melon aphid in its seasons of greatest destructiveness could be largely mitigated and in many cases almost entirely prevented if the employment of methods for its control were begun upon the insect's first appearance.

All things considered, the most satisfactory way of controlling this insect is by fumigation. As an aid, however, cultural methods are necessary. In the south spraying with kerosene and other emulsions is preferred to the bisulphid of carbon method, and tobacco is now much used, especially in Texas.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

A storm accompanied by wind of cyclonic fury swept Bloomsburg July 20, creating havoc at a number of places, but doing especial damage at the J. L. Dillon Estate's greenhouses.

At about 4:45 o'clock two storms, one from the northeast and one from the southwest, seemed to meet nearly above Normal hill. There was a terrific down-pour of rain and some hail, but the greatest damage was done by the excessively high wind.

The force of the storm was first felt at Dillon's residence, where trees were uprooted. At the greenhouses, two of the big houses were completely demolished. One, a rose house, 22x210, and another, a carnation house, 11x210, were unroofed and nearly every pane of glass broken. W. C. Bryfogle, who was in the rose house, was caught by the falling timbers, and narrowly escaped with his life. The stack on the engine house was blown over. In all about 7,000 square feet of glass were broken.

PITTSBURG.The Market.

We are now going through the worst of the summer season. Stock inside is at its worst and that is very bad, while asters from outside are still scarce. In fact, all outdoor flowers are below the usual grade as far as quality is concerned. In addition to this, many of the shippers, because stock is poor, do not take even ordinary precautions in packing and lots of stock which might be sold is lost. This is especially true of sweet peas. Business is good for the time of the year, but there is trouble getting anything fit to fill orders with.

Most of the shops are running short of help, as many are taking advantage of this month for their vacations.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams, who was away for several weeks on an extended tour through the maritime provinces of Canada, has returned. On her way home she stopped long enough in New York to look up a few novelties for this winter.

Messrs. John Bader and H. L. Blind attended the Knights Templars' conclave at Saratoga, N. Y., coming home by the way of the Hudson river to New York, where they were met by some agents for European houses and made some extensive purchases.

Edw. McCollum, of the Pittsburgh Florists' Exchange, with Wm. Patter and Karl Klinke, of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., have just returned from Burleigh Falls, Canada, where they were supposed to be fishing. However, there is a lake in that immediate vicinity called Lovesick lake, and if all stories are true either the lake or a few maidens who were hovering in that vicinity affected these same young men, for report says they had the symptoms, and much time which might have been spent fishing was spent hovering along the shores of the lake with the aforesaid maidens. Further deponent sayeth not.

W. A. Clarke, treasurer of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., with his wife, has just returned from a three weeks' Canadian visit, ready to take up a year's work. Philip Langhans, of the same company, will now retire to the quiet of his bungalow in the wilds of Allison

IT DID THE WORK.

We potted up about 6,000 4-inch geraniums as a surplus over the needs of our retail trade to try the REVIEW and see if it would sell some for us. We sent in a small advertisement and in five weeks we were sold out and received orders for 1,000 more than we had. We sent money back to eight different states. When a man gets his offer into the classified department of the REVIEW he wants to be careful or his stock will all be sold and he will have nothing left but empty houses to take care of. The REVIEW is worth dollars a year, instead of $1, to any one in the business. You can use this letter if you want to; it is true. RAGAN BROS.

GRAFTED ROSE book sent by the REVIEW for 25 cents.

HAVE you the Florists' Manual, by William Scott? Its consultation when in doubt will give you prompt information and save you many times the cost of the book, which is $5.

THANK YOU.

An old subscriber writes: "Here is the subscription of a friend of mine in the trade. He says he wants to keep up with the times, so I told him to get the REVIEW and it would be easy for him."

The REVIEW receives many similar courtesies at the hands of its readers and hopes to continue to merit their recommendation.

GALESBURG, ILL.

Galesburg was visited by a severe hail storm on the evening of July 24, which did considerable damage to the greenhouses of H. F. Drury, breaking between 1,600 and 1,700 lights of glass. The hail stones were very large and jagged and resembled chunks of ice more than hail, measuring from one to four inches in diameter. The greenhouses got only the tail end of the storm, otherwise the loss would have been much heavier. Four blocks south of the greenhouses there was no sign of hail.

KEEP up your good work—the REVIEW has won another friend.—E. A. SATTler, Belleville, Ill.

WEST NEWTON, PA.—M. Fenton is building a house 30x100, which more than doubles his glass. Business is steadily increasing.

The Market.

There is little to talk about for the last week, except to mention that business is chiefly noticeable on account of its absence. The weather remains cool; in fact, overcoats can be worn with comfort at any time of the day and they are a necessity after sundown. This has the advantage that many persons are in town who usually haunt the watering places in summer, and it also has the effect of keeping the stock sent in by the growers in much better shape than it is usual to find it at this time of the year. Never has there been so much good stock shown, both inside and outside grown, as has been displayed for the last two months, at the time when goods of all kinds are in their poorest condition. If the retailer only had business to match the stock, there would be little complaint. However, an early exodus from the country can be looked for this season, and with the opening of the schools in the near future things will probably brighten considerably.

Roses are holding their own, in price as well as quality, and the growers have little to complain of. Carnations are also in tiptop form and color and in fair supply. Outside stock, with the exception of sweet peas, continues to be a drug, and were it not for the street vendors but little of it would be used.

Various Notes.

Chas. Gandil, late of Redondo and Los Angeles, is in town on a visit. Mr. Gandil was for many years connected with the Exotic Gardens, on Mission street.

Thos. Manton, recently employed at Hotel del Monte, Monterey, is in town, en route to Australia.

J. P. Nissen, the landscape gardener of Berkeley, has returned from a month's trip to San Jose.

Robert Gilmore has severed his connection with Domoto Bros., at Elmhurst, and is with E. W. McLellan & Co., at Burlingame, Cal.

John M. Holland is with the C. C. Morse Co., at Glen Echo, Oakland.

Douglas Fraser, of Vallejo, is in town on a short visit.

G. Symacopulos, of Oakland, is remodeling his Broadway store.

The Piedmont Floral Co., of Oakland, reports a good funeral trade for the month of July. S. K. Love and H. J. Letts are the proprietors of this old established business, having recently purchased the interest of M. C. Morse, who has located near Mountain View cemetery.

SEEDLING EVERGREENS.

The handling of young seedling evergreens at this time of the year demands the growers' attention. I refer to such stock as hardy palms, conifers and evergreen trees, the seed for which was planted in the late winter or early spring months. Whether grown under glass in flats or in the shade house, if the seed has germinated well and the young plants are growing vigorously, they are apt to be too close together in the boxes, and when the dark days and long nights arrive careful judgment must be used or the damping off habit will get a larger portion of them. If the stock is far enough advanced to put in thumb pots and the grower has sufficient room and accommodations for them, it is the best way to handle almost everything. If not, they should be transplanted into other flats and given sufficient room both for growing and for a circulation of air between the plants. Do not attempt to put anything out in the open at this time. They should be kept either under glass or in a shade house—preferably the latter—or any place where there is a free circulation of air and the plants can be conveniently watered. The direct rays of the sun are dangerous at this season of the year, especially when the water has to be used overhead.

With hardy palms much care must be used with any of the varieties of the so-called fan-leaved palms. Although they are very hardy in a later stage of growth, they are very delicate when small, and plenty of room must be given the young seedlings. It is a better plan to transplant them at this time, when they are growing vigorously, than later, when they have ceased for the season. With the date palms there is not so much risk, which is also true of the chamærops and dracenas.

Young peppers and acacias need much attention later and the same rule applies to them. Do not attempt to grow them too closely in flats without transplanting, as three-quarters of them will succumb in the fall and early winter. They are among our best sellers and are easily handled if watched carefully.

Young conifers can be transplanted into flats or thumb pots very successfully at this time. They are not so liable to damp off as the varieties I have just mentioned, but if left in seed flats until next spring the danger of losing a greater portion of the roots in the effort to tease them apart is always present and many will be lost in consequence.

All such stock should be kept under shelter until the plants have shown a tendency to make additional fibrous roots after transplanting, and should the boxes act badly the places can be refilled again from the seedling boxes. A few days suffice to tell whether there will be any shortage in the count of the young transplanted stock.

THE REVIEW will send Smith's Mum Manual for 40 cents.

NEW ENGLAND DAHLIA SOCIETY.

The executive committee after free deliberation voted that the previous vote to co-operate with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in giving an exhibition of dahlias on September 4 and 5 be rescinded; that the contributors to the prize fund be thanked and notified that on more extended and mature consideration by the executive committee it has been deemed wise to defer all exhibition work for the present season and that the treasurer be instructed to refund the contributions.

The work of creating a proper and perfect classification and a set of rules for judging which must be established before we can give an exhibition is of the greatest importance and requires careful deliberation, much more so than at first anticipated, and this reason alone was ample justification for the action of our executive committee.

Every member of our society is urged to assist in the exhibit of the nearest horticultural society and in that way give special prominence to our favored flower.

Those who have a possible chance to exhibit on September 5 and 6 at Boston should try their utmost to make this exhibit eclipse all previous ones.

CARE OF VEGETABLE HOUSES.

Temperature.

There is much difference of opinion as to the best temperatures for different crops, but where one is in doubt he will usually be on the safe side by choosing the lower temperature, as it is less liable to injure than a temperature held too high. I feel safe in saying that few growers use enough ventilation or keep their temperature low enough. If they did so they would have less trouble with disease, etc., as their plants would be much stronger and more able to withstand anything that might be injurious. But there is a limit to all things and one must not let the temperature be too low, or let there be too much difference in the day and night temperature. This is the cause of more losses than any other feature in the care of greenhouses. For instance, if you are unable to keep your cucumber or tomato houses above 55 degrees or 60 degrees at night, in a stretch of severe weather, don't run them more than 15 degrees or 20 degrees higher in the daytime, or the plants will make a soft growth and be unable to stand the chill at night. It is better to make less growth and have it strong and hardy.

On the other hand, if you are sure that you can keep your houses up to a night temperature of 65 degrees or 70 degrees at all times, you will be safe in carrying them 15 degrees or 20 degrees higher on bright days. It is unwise to let the night and day temperatures be more than 20 degrees apart.

We have found the temperature as given below most satisfactory:

Variety	Night tem.	cloudy days.	Tem. bright days.
Lettuce	40° to 45°	50°	60°
Radishes	45° to 50°	55°	60°
Tomatoes	65°	70° to 75°	75° to 80°
Cucumbers	68° to 70°	75°	80° to 85°

Asparagus, peppers, melons and beans require about the same temperature as cucumbers.

The grower must be the judge of the day temperature. If the weather is mild enough to ventilate all day, the temperature can be higher than if there is no air on the houses. A high temperature in a closed house is injurious. A house may be 10 degrees warmer where there is ventilation on, and not seem so warm as the one with lower temperature and no air.

The condition of the soil should also be taken into consideration. When a little dry and too late in the day to water, the high temperature may evaporate moisture from the foliage faster than the roots can supply it and consequently the plants wither, which is very injurious. In the first place, when the roots are unable to supply the evaporation, the plant has no moisture to make it grow; second, it causes the plant to grow hard when too young, and many times the foliage is burned. A lower temperature in this case would prevent the rapid evaporation of what moisture the plants have and keep them from wilting until supplied with water.

Moisture.

The watering and syringing should be done early in the day, so that the foliage will dry off before night, and syringing for red spider, etc., should be done only on bright days. The soil also needs less water on cloudy days, as the evapora-

RAWSON'S HOTHOUSE CUCUMBER

As a forcing cucumber is one of the largest and most profitable crops of the Market Gardener, it is essential that the very best possible strain should be sown. With this idea in view we have made selections for the past few years from our Rawson's White Spine, which have resulted in a strain about two inches longer and a darker green in color, with a few light spines showing at blossom end. This new strain we confidently believe to be superior to any other on the market. The results we have had at our own greenhouses with the stock conclusively prove the above to be true. 1/2 oz., 35c; oz., 60c; 4 oz., $1.50; lb., $5.00.

tion is decreased and the roots are not called upon to work so fast. Overwatering causes the soil to become soggy and sour and causes the roots to decay. When the soil is too wet, the plants, not having to send far for sufficient moisture, make few roots and soon become top heavy. Young plants always do better when kept a trifle dry, but not so dry as to suffer. They make more roots seeking for more moisture, and when well equipped with roots and nicely started they will use much more water and grow all the faster for it.

When the drainage from the beds or benches is good, so that when well watered the surplus drains off quickly and leaves the soil just moist, then you can water often without danger. Good drainage is the safety valve for careless watering and should be had even by the most careful growers.

NEW LONDON, WIS.—Since its establishment the cut flower and plant business has rapidly increased here, and P. Olson reports that he will close the summer season with no stock left. Carpenters are now at work extending his greenhouses to the limit of the premises, and in the spring it is understood that two more houses will be erected of the same size as those now being completed.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. O. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

H. W. VAN DER BOM & Co., Oudenbosch, Holland, state that H. W. Van der Bom has no longer any connection with that firm or with the Alma Nurseries, which the firm conducts; nor has that firm any connection with the Union Nurseries, a combination said to embrace three nurseries which have pooled their interests in the American trade, under the direction of Mr. Van der Bom.

NURSERY EQUIPMENT.

All wideawake nurserymen realize that they cannot keep up with the times if their equipments are radically different from those of their successful competitors. There is perhaps no part of a nursery equipment more indispensable than a plant storehouse. It not only saves many things that would either perish if left outdoors or at best would necessitate laborious outdoor protection, but it also facilitates the shipping and marketing of stock in early spring and late in summer. Such a house is useful in protecting as well as retarding when such is deemed necessary for business purposes.

It is perhaps hard to determine which could be omitted with the least resulting loss, a storehouse or a greenhouse, but there are few engaged in the business nowadays who would think of doing without either. At no time of the year need a nursery greenhouse be empty or even partly empty. The demands for the products of the nursery are becoming so varied as well as extensive in certain lines that only by utilizing greenhouses to the fullest extent possible can these demands be met and progress be made, as progress is made by others. R. R.

THE ALBAUGH CASE.

Ralph H. Gibson, sheriff of Miami county, Ohio, has been appointed receiver for the Albaugh Nursery and Orchard Co., of Phoneton. His bond was fixed at $10,000. The appointment of a receiver was made on application of the Fourth National Bank, of Dayton, which represented in its petition that the defendant concern had liabilities of $40,000. Noah H. Albaugh alone is surety on $37,000 of the amount. According to the decree of the court in naming a receiver, the assets of the company will be appraised and sold, the proceeds being applied to the liabilities. The balance remaining unpaid, if any, will be liquidated by the sale of Mr. Albaugh's personal property interests.

HYDRANGEA OTAKSA.

Now is the time to think about increasing the stock of Hydrangea Otaksa from cuttings; they may be rooted in small pots, in flats or in frames, if provision is made for their thorough protection in winter. The young plants rooted in frames may be allowed to remain there until spring. This protection is easily afforded if the bottom of the

SMALL FRUITS.

The twenty white tables in the Maryland space in the States Exhibit Palace at the Jamestown Exposition last week were covered with magnificent Lucretia dewberries and Holloway and Houghton gooseberries. The dewberries, which were exceptionally fine, were exhibited by J. A. Davis and J. Spencer Lapham, of Goldsboro, Caroline county, Maryland. The gooseberries were exhibited by Roland H. Phelps, of Brooklyn, Md. All three of these gentlemen are extensive growers of small fruits and they are to be commended for advertising their respective counties by showing some of their best fruit to the public at the exposition.

THE OSAGE ORANGE.

The osage orange is a tree of medium size, with a short trunk, ridged scaly bark, and wide-spreading branches. Within its natural range, the tree occasionally reaches a height of sixty or seventy feet and a diameter of two feet. This size, however, is not attained elsewhere. It produces a compound globular fruit that looks somewhat like an orange, is yellow when ripe, and contains a large number of seeds.

The natural range of the osage orange is from the Arkansas river south through southeastern Indian Territory to southern Texas. In the forest its principal associates are the oaks, elms and hickories. It grows on rich bottom lands and fertile slopes and appears to be most abundant and to attain its greatest size in the valley of the Red river in Indian Territory. Cultivation has given it an artificial distribution of much greater extent.

The range of the osage orange for economic planting includes the middle western states from central Illinois southward and westward to eastern Colorado and New Mexico. It is hardy as far north as Massachusetts, but is likely to be winterkilled during severe seasons in the northern part of Iowa, Nebraska and Illinois.

The osage orange adapts itself to a great variety of soil and climatic conditions and within its planted range is surpassed in hardiness only by the red cedar. It will endure a great amount of neglect and rarely succumbs to drought.

This ability to withstand aridity makes it one of the most desirable trees for planting throughout the middle west.

It is tolerant of shade and consequently well adapted for planting in mixture. The usual rate of growth under good conditions is one-quarter to one-third of an inch in diameter yearly. Height growth is relatively slow after the first few years, and no great height is ever reached.

The osage orange is one of the most valuable trees for hedges and in its planted range has been used for this purpose more extensively than any other. Its tendency to branch freely makes it very suitable for a low, dense wind-break.

Reproduction is abundant from seed, suckers and stump sprouts. Osage orange trees should be set close to overcome the tendency toward profuse branching. Cultivation should be given several times each year until the ground is partly shaded or until the size of the trees prevents. Weeds and grass should be kept out at all times. Probably the largest single plantation of osage orange in the United States is a 10-acre block at Farlington, Kan.

CHATSWORTH, ILL.—Thomas Pepperdine is extending his greenhouse, the addition covering 20x35 feet. He will install a new Kroeschell boiler.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

State of Trade.

Trade is about at a standstill at present. A little funeral work now and then is about the only thing doing. Stock is poor. Roses are small and of poor quality. Carnations are even worse. Asters are coming in more plentifully, but are of poor quality. However, they help out nicely in a pinch. We are all looking forward to better stock in the near future.

A great many of the trade are now away on their vacations.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Columbus Florists' Club was held Tuesday evening, July 23, and the attendance was rather slim and nothing much of importance to attend to. The picnic committee made its report and it was found there was double the number that ever before turned out at our last outing at Buckeye lake. Everything was quite satisfactory. The club voted to meet every two weeks at Olentangy park for bowling.

William Graff and family are spending their vacation at Cedar Point and Sam Graff is taking charge during his absence.

Sherman Stephens reports trade quiet, but says they have plenty of work now with mums, as they have about doubled the quantity over last year.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is moving right along with the new range of three houses 27x400 feet. The first house is being planted and the others will soon be ready. A gasoline pumping outfit has been installed.

The Munk Floral Co. is rushing the new range up and is making a fine showing.

R. A. Currie, vice-president of the Florists' Club, has been quite sick for the last ten days with a touch of kidney trouble, but is improving.

Gus Ackerman is busy replanting his range in roses, carnations and mums.

Society of American Florists

YOU ARE INVITED TO VISIT US during convention week, any day at your convenience.

ANDORRA presents a unique Nursery—six hundred acres of hilly land, containing over three hundred and fifty acres of Ornamental Trees, Shrubs, Vines and Perennials. OUR LOCATION permits us to grow many varieties, both in deciduous and evergreen trees and shrubs, that cannot be grown to advantage north or south of this latitude, and thus adds to our extensive collection many desirable and decorative plants.

ANDORRA has been called "The Modern Landscape Nursery." The lay-out of our land, with its hills, valleys and woodland, permits the planting of trees and shrubs in natural positions, thus affording planting suggestions at every turn.

ANDORRA is easily and quickly reached from the Convention (Horticultural) Hall by the Pennsylvania Railroad from Broad St. station (at Broad and Market Sts.) to Chestnut Hill station; then by trolley, which passes the depot to the city line. Our office is one block from the trolley terminus at city line.

The Market.

Business is not brisk, but it is all that could be expected for summer, and there is no complaint. Supplies are light and of the flowers available not many are what even the salesmen can call good; consequently the best stock commands a fair figure. The growers are all hard at work getting things in shape for another season.

Various Notes.

Hugo Schroeter and Mrs. Schroeter have gone on a trip to Boston and Newport, expecting to be away about two weeks.

John Kline, one of the young men on Breitmeyer's staff, is to join the benedicts August 3.

Thomas Browne is back in harness after a long siege. He hopes to be with the boys at Philadelphia, and the boys surely hope he will.

Do not forget the next club meeting, August 7. Election of officers.

Among recent visitors were: George H. Bowditch, Alliance, O.; G. Reising, of L. Baumann & Co., Chicago; John Q. A. Turnbull, of Chippewa Rustic Co. H. S.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

Krueger Bros. have incorporated, with a capital stock of $50,000. The stock has been issued in 500 shares of $100 each, all of which has been subscribed for by members of the Krueger family. The business has grown largely in the last few years. The Kruegers started with a few greenhouses, and now they own one of the largest plants in the city. They have recently purchased an eighty-acre farm in Wood county, on which extensive improvements will be made.

Greenhouse Heating.

STEAM FOR ONE HOUSE.

What is the best way to pipe a house 27x64 feet, for heating with steam? I have some 1-inch and 2½-inch pipe. Would the 2½-inch pipe do for the flow?
H. J. L.

The 2½-inch pipe will be large enough for a riser, and if 1-inch pipe is used for returns it will require about 1,300 lineal feet, to give a temperature of 60 degrees in your Indiana climate.
L. C. C.

HOT WATER RADIATION.

I am going to build an addition to my greenhouse, 20x50 feet, running east and west. I am heating with hot water, and would like to know how much radiation I must put in to keep the right temperature, from 55 to 60 degrees, in Wisconsin climate.
F. D.

An even-span house, 20x50 feet, piped to carry 55 to 60 degrees at night in your climate, should, if piped with 4-inch pipe, carry 400 lineal feet; piped with 2-inch, 660 lineal feet; and if piped with 1½-inch pipe, 800 lineal feet of pipe, for hot water.
L. C. C.

FROM STEAM TO HOT WATER.

I want to change the heat in two greenhouses, 20x80 feet, with glass in the sides of the west house. The houses run from north to south, with the potting shed and boiler house on the north end. We have a tubular boiler, 36 in. by 14 ft., with thirty-two 2¼-inch flues. The boiler is set in brick, and the top of it is below the floor level of the houses. At present we are using steam, with piping as follows: In the east house there are ten runs of 1½-inch pipe, five on each side, with a 2-inch leader overhead to feed them; four runs of 1-inch pipe in the center, all returning direct to the boiler. The west house has a 2-inch leader to the front, branching in 1¼-inch pipes to one radiator on each side of six pipes, extending the full length of the house. We want to change to hot water and use as much of the pipe we have as possible.
N. G. N.

If you add eight more runs of 1½-inch pipe in the house piped with that size, so as to make eighteen in all, and

MANUFACTURERS OF

Reducing Valves, Back Pressure Valves, Steam Traps, Steam Goods

This is what one of our customers thinks of our valves:

LINCOLN, ILL., January 8, 1906.

THE JOHN DAVIS COMPANY, Chicago, Ill.
GENTLEMEN:—You can strongly and unhesitatingly recommend the "Eclipse" piston type reducing valve to florists. We have two purchased of you last year. We would not have them out for double their cost and find them as sensitive as a watch. We will be in Chicago soon to take up the vacuum system with you.
Yours truly,
W. H. GULLETT & SONS, FLORISTS.

add another 2-inch riser to carry nine of these pipes, you can heat the house with hot water. The other house can be piped with the same amount of pipe, or 2-inch returns can be substituted for the 1½-inch piping, in which case you should use two 2-inch flow pipes and fourteen 2-inch returns. I do not think it wise to use the 1¼-inch pipe in a hot water system of this length, as the circulation will be too slow; 2-inch pipe all through will be an advantage. I should not discard the 1½-inch pipe, however, but treat the house as suggested. L. C. C.

STEAM IN WESTERN ONTARIO.

We have a two-span greenhouse, 43x150 feet, practically one house, lying east and west, and propose to put in a furnace on the north side. Our boiler is eight feet long by thirty-six inches diameter, and has thirty-three tubes. The fuel is coal. What is the best way to heat it, with the smallest pipe possible, running two circuits, one east and one west? We propose to sink the boiler six feet, the flow pipe in that case being just about level with the ground.

C. & C.

The houses in question, 43x150 feet, will require about 2,400 square feet of radiation, which, if supplied by using 2-inch pipe, will require nearly 3,900 lineal feet of such pipe. The house can be heated by using four 3-inch risers from the boiler, one running under the ridge of each house from the boiler, located at the center, to the far end of the house and each riser there dividing, to return by thirteen 2-inch pipes. This is equivalent to two 3-inch flow pipes the length of the house and twenty-six

KROESCHELL Boilers

NOW IS THE TIME TO PLACE YOUR ORDER.

"Had different kinds of cast-iron boilers. I am assured that I can save about one-third fuel with your boiler. I started firing October 10 and the fire never went out up to this time, May 12, 1907. This boiler heats both my dwelling and greenhouses and gives the best of satisfaction. My dwelling is about 40 feet from the boiler. Can recommend your boiler to anybody. It is the only greenhouse boiler."

G. BASLER, Buffalo, N. Y.

"Had three cast-iron sectional boilers and find I can heat twice as much glass with yours and save about one-third fuel. We are using the Kroeschell-Honeywell Generator with the boiler and believe it helps the boiler to distribute the water with a more rapid flow, also saving fuel."

N. BOMMERBACH, Decatur, Ill.

"I had a cast-iron sectional boiler before I got yours; would not give yours for a dozen of the others. Your boiler is the quickest heating boiler I ever saw. I hardly ever have the damper over half open and the draft shut most of the time. In the four years I had to buy a new section and four heads that had cracked, and I had to be right with the cast-iron boiler and I would have to fire every twenty or thirty minutes. The cast-iron boiler took much more attention and more coal and would be leaking half the winter. I want no more cast-iron sectional boilers."

CHAS. W. UNGLAUB, Springfield, Ohio.

150 New Establishments, with 2,168,000 square feet of glass, installed the Kroeschell Boiler in 1906.

Made in 15 sizes. Heats from smallest houses up to 50,000 feet of glass. Will maintain 60 degrees at 15 below zero outside.

2-inch returns the full length of the house. The boiler has just about one-half the capacity necessary for this plant. I would suggest the purchase of another of the same size, the two to be set in battery. L. C. C.

PIPING IN MONTANA.

I should like to get your advice in regard to heating my two greenhouses. I will use a hot water system and want the piping arranged so a night fireman will not be necessary, if it is possible to arrange it thus. The two houses are parallel, run from northeast to southwest, and are separated by a solid wall. House No. 1, the house with the northwest exposure, is 11x50 feet; it measures six feet to the eaves and nine feet to the ridge. The northwest wall is concrete; the southeast wall is glass where it extends above the other house. This house is used for carnations, especially such varieties as Pink and White Lawson, Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Lady Bountiful, White Perfection and Victory. House No. 2 is 12x50 feet, four feet and a half to the eaves and seven feet and a half to the ridge. The southeast side and the southwest gable are of wooden construction to a distance of two feet and a half from the ground; above that they are glass. This house is used for ferns and smilax, and for such roses as Brides, Maids, Kaisersins and Beauties.

The work-room and boiler-pit are at the southwest end of house No. 1. The pit is five feet below the level of the greenhouse floors. House No. 1 is piped with 4-inch black pipe, two coils running around the house under the benches. No. 2 has a 2-inch flow under the ridge and drops into eight 1½-inch returns, four on each side, under the benches. This piping does not keep the houses properly heated and it is my intention to overhaul the plant this summer. The outside temperature here, in central Montana, went as low last winter as 35 degrees below zero. L. L. W.

The house No. 1, heated with 4-inch pipe, in order to maintain a temperature of 70 degrees should contain at least seven runs of 4-inch pipe. I should arrange a flow and three returns on the exposed side, and a flow and two returns on the protected side, of the house, the flows to come direct from the boiler and go to the far end of the house and there divide, to return by three pipes on one side and two on the other. House No. 2, heated with 1½-inch pipe, should have fourteen returns instead of seven, in order to maintain a temperature sufficient for roses. L. C. C.

ness, I am doing it in as economical a way as possible, to see whether I can catch on to the game. I have a large hot air furnace in the cellar and am going to put a hot water arrangement in the furnace for the purpose of heating the greenhouse. Please give me some idea of the piping that would be required for a house such as I have described, in Massachusetts. P. B. B.

I am sorry I cannot give you hearty encouragement in your enterprise, but fear it will not prove especially satisfactory on the proposed basis. The heating plant will not prove satisfactory and the house is too small for best management. To heat it, however, you should provide at least 1½-inch pipe

A TRIP TO MT. CLEMENS.

The writer recently spent a day among the growers at Mount Clemens, Mich., and regrets that the visit could not be extended a week, as the hospitality of the florists in the Bath City is unlimited.

August Von Boeselager's was the first place visited. This is not the largest place, but for neatness and modernness it is above the average. The main product so far has been carnations, but it is Mr. Von Boeselager's intention to devote considerable space to roses. La Detroit, Kaiserin, Sunset, Killarney and Bon Silene will be grown. In carnations the most space will be given over to Enchantress; in white, Moonlight and Lady Bountiful will be the chief products. Rose-pink Enchantress and Mr. Von Boeselager's own sport of Lawson are also to be grown. In chrysanthemums, only the old staple varieties will be given space. Some space will also be devoted to single and double violets. The whole range is to receive a new coat of paint. Mr. Von Boeselager believes in having things up-to-date. One good feature noticed was a rack made of ordinary ½-inch mesh wire netting and nailed up in each house to hold the hose when not in use, to prevent rotting.

John Carey was the next man visited. As usual, he was head over heels in work. It is a pretty hard matter to find out from Mr. Carey just what his intentions are for the future, but from present appearances it is certain that the usual large variety of roses, carnations and chrysanthemums will be grown. Some space will also be devoted to violet culture. Although no new houses are planned for this season, the old ones are being given a thorough overhauling that will make them look new.

It's a long walk from Carey's to James Taylor's place, up near the cemetery, especially with the thermometer at about 90 degrees in the shade, but Mr. Taylor's glad hand more than squared matters. He was attired in a suit of overalls somewhat besmeared with the florists' best friend (cow manure) when we stormed his place. All the houses were practically empty, or in different stages of emptiness, to make room for next season's stock. Boston Market is Mr. Taylor's favorite in carnations. Lawson, Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress will also be grown. Mr. Taylor will have a large assortment of all popular varieties of chrysanthemums, to meet the demand this fall. A new cross house is being erected in place of the shed, which is being torn down. Mr. Taylor's old dwelling is also to be remodeled into an office.

From Taylor's we cut across the railroad tracks to A. L. Stevens' greenhouses. The stock in Stevens' houses showed that it is not being neglected, even though this is the dull season. This firm believes in getting all the returns possible out of the houses. Lady Bountiful is Mr. Stevens' favorite carnation and most of his glass will be devoted to it. Lawson, Enchantress and Flamingo are also on the list for 1908. It is still doubtful if violets will be grown.

Robert Klagge was probably working harder than any man in the city when we ran across him. Two new Atlas boilers, each sixteen feet by seventy-two inches, have just been put into position, ready to be connected up. Butting up against the boiler-shed, two new houses, each 22x120 feet, and 7 feet high to the gutters, will be built to take the place of several old houses. It was at first intended to grow roses in these houses, but as the season is so far advanced, carnations will take their place. A large shed is also being torn down, to make way for a driveway between the two ranges. A house of La Detroit, planted after the violets were thrown out, looked fine and is bringing good returns. A house of Kaiserin is bringing its third crop. More violets will be grown for 1908 than for some time. Mr. Klagge's early crop of asters has been destroyed by stem-rot.

By the time we reached the Breitmeyers' large plant it was 5:30 (quitting time), but a glance through the houses was sufficient to tell us that the men have not been idling. The rose and carnation houses have a good start for next season. One new house is being erected, which will be devoted to violets. The Breitmeyers are going more extensively into violet growing the next season; about 35,000 will be planted.

Leopold Mallast was the last man visited. Mr. Mallast has but a small place, compared with some others, but what he has he certainly knows how to handle. His Lawson and other carnations, sent in last year, were second to none on the market, while his violets were by far the best around town. A new dwelling is taking all of his spare change at present—so he says.

The Market.

At last the market florists' trade has taken a change. Business is dull and few attend market. The street boys failed to make their appearance last week; they certainly had a brisk season and are well satisfied with the results. Some will soon leave town and seek the different county fairs, but will offer to the public goods of a different nature than flowers.

The retail store trade has been doing a fairly encouraging business. Funeral work is about the only kind of work that has any demand. The extremely hot weather we have been experiencing has sent society to the different resorts, and naturally flowers find little demand. However, our florists are on the hustle, building new houses and making alterations. Many have made a decided change, spending their hard-earned cash and trusting that the extensive improvements will soon pay for themselves.

The weather has been almost overwhelming and the plants have often looked thirsty. Fortunately, we are now getting a few showers; otherwise our plants would burn. Asters are surely slow in coming into bloom; so, also, is Golden Glow. Dahlias are arriving fairly well, but with rather short stems. Carnations are still coming on the market, but are poor. Roses are scarce. Phlox is in fine condition. Gladioli find little sale. Greens of all kinds are enough to meet the demands.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Push the Housing.

By this time you should have your beds all ready to plant and, unless you have, you should rush it to completion as rapidly as possible. Many houses are already planted and this cool weather is just the thing for them. In fact, it will be the making of the first crop, which usually depends largely on the kind of a start the plants get after being housed.

In looking over the plants in the field I see that most of the varieties have made a splendid growth and the plants are in that well-matured condition which means quick reestablishment and little wilting.

Use of Bone Meal.

Before you plant, mix in your bone meal at the rate of about twenty-five pounds to 500 square feet of bench space. Some growers recommend more than this amount, but we consider it sufficient for the start. We prefer to add later on, with the mulch, whatever quantity seems to be needed. It is easier to err by adding too much than too little. You will find, however, that the coarser the meal is the less danger there is, because only the finely powdered particles will become soluble at once, while the larger particles will require some time to decompose. Chop it into the soil with a rake, only as deep as the teeth will go. In watering it will soon be washed down to the roots.

A day or two before you wish to plant, examine the soil and see that it is in the proper state of moisture. If too dry, water it sufficiently to moisten properly clear to the bottom. It is wrong to set a plant into dry soil, but it is worse to have the soil moist on top and dry at the bottom.

Shading Freshly Planted Stock.

We are planting this season with only a light lime shade on the houses, instead of a heavy mud shade. While it is yet too early to say how it will work, we expect good results. We have seen others do it, so I guess we can do it, too. There is no doubt that if one can manage to reestablish the plants in the full light it will be better for them. There will be less weakening of the plants and normal growth will be resumed quicker. It takes more syringing and closer watching, though, on account of the more rapid evaporation.

For the inexperienced, however, I think a fairly good mud shade on the house is the safest plan, and until I can give you full particulars I would recommend that method. Do not make it too adhesive, so that when you want it off, it will come off readily. Just today I was called by 'phone by a local grower who was overzealous when he applied a lime shade some time ago. To do things well does not always mean a full measure of permanency.

Save the Rootlets.

When digging the plants be sure you get as many of the roots as possible and be especially careful not to break any of the larger roots. Save a clump of earth as large as your fist, whenever possible, but do not let it worry you if all the soil crumbles off. Get them planted as quickly as possible after digging. By dividing your force properly, some digging and others planting, you need never have many out of the soil at one time. If they must be hauled a considerable distance, then you would better dip the your plants are crowded in February, there will be trouble for you before spring.

In arranging the different varieties on your benches, bear in mind the temperature best suited to each variety and also which varieties like the strongest light, and those that prefer a rather subdued light to bring out the best color. Also, the amount of headroom required by the tall growers. The modern carnation house has no benches with less than five feet of headroom, but there are many carnations grown in the old style houses, and that is where considerable forethought is required. In fact, there are many things to bear in mind and they differ on each place, according to the stock grown.

In growing a good, average quality of carnations for the wholesale market, what roots in water and cover the plants well while en route, to keep the drying winds off them.

Spacing.

Plant on the benches as near 10x12 as you can, for most varieties. Do not be tempted to plant closer because your plants may seem slightly undersize. You will be surprised how they will spread out along toward spring, and that is the time you must keep in mind when figuring how much space to allow each plant. Few plants would really need that much room up to March 1, but if could I expect to realize per hundred throughout the season, say from October 1 to July 1?

M. W. W.

I can give you no definite answer to this question, as there are too many things that will affect the price. Different markets will differ materially in the returns they will give you for the same stock. Then there is the inexorable law of supply and demand, which affects the price more than any other factor, and this is in turn affected by the weather and other conditions. Then, too, the price you should get will depend somewhat on the varieties you grow. If you grow mostly Enchantress and its two sports you must get more than if you grow such varieties as Queen, Candace, Fair Maid, etc. It is all well enough to say that you ought to get a certain amount out of each hundred blooms or out of each square foot of bench space, but when it comes to doing it, there is usually a different story to tell, and a host of excuses to offer.

If you contemplate growing carnations for the wholesale market, then the best advice I can give you is to inquire in the market where you expect to dispose of them. It would be useless for me to tell you what we get for our blooms unless you expected to sell them in our market. Your market may return more or it may return less. Grow your carnations as well as you can, and by keeping your eyes open see that you get as much for your blooms as your neighbors or competitors, and then you can tell at the end of the season whether carnations are a profitable crop to grow for your market. I will say, however, that if the demand and the supply are normal and prices are normal as compared with other markets, carnations will be as profitable as any other crop. This does not answer your question, but it is the best I can do for you, as I would not make assertions which would stand only one chance in a hundred of proving correct in your case.

A. F. J. B.

SOIL FOR CARNATIONS.

Owing to unusual high water I am unable to obtain my soil for carnations where I had expected, and I do not know where else I can get suitable soil. I thought perhaps you might suggest a way out. I had thought of leaving the old soil in the benches, sowing it to clover or something of that kind, letting it grow for a few weeks, then turning it over and working in rotted cow manure, lime, bone meal, etc., and setting my carnations about September 1. What do you think of this plan? Have you some better suggestion? Would sterilizing the soil be of benefit? C. A. N.

I would not advise you to leave the old soil in your benches to plant carnations on; in fact, it would be about the last thing we would do. We have heard growers tell about using soil more than one season with good results, but from personal experience I can say that old soil will seldom, if ever, produce as good results as new soil that is as good as the old soil was when first planted. Whenever someone finds out just what the plants take from the soil, and how it can be put back, in the same soluble condition as it was originally, then perhaps we can rejuvenate old soil and use it several seasons.

Your plan of sowing clover is not practical, as you have not enough time to reap any benefits before planting time. It would take at least three months for the clover to do any good, and even then it would take some time for it to rot enough to suit carnations. Carnations want a well rotted compost and will not do well in a half-rotted sod, as roses will.

It is too near planting time to use sod for this season's work, if it is not already cut and rotted. I would advise you to get some soil from a field that has been under cultivation, but which is fairly rich. Spread on some of that old cow manure and plow it in at once, and plow it every two weeks or oftener, to let the air into it. Of course a good rich soil is a splendid thing to have, but you can feed as much as you find necessary later, when the plants are established. It is of more importance that the soil is in a sweet, live, friable condition—a condition you do not usually find in old soil, however much you may doctor it up.

A. F. J. B.

CARNATIONS FOR SOLID BED.

I have two benches and a solid bed in my carnation house. The solid bed is at the west side of the house—the cool side. What variety should I plant on it? I intend to plant Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, White Perfection, Lady Bountiful and Lawson. The Bountiful plants are small. J. H. D.

I would advise you to plant Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress on the solid bed and in the coolest part of the house. Plant Lawson in the warmest part and the two white ones where the temperature will run about 52 degrees.

A. F. J. B.

DISTANCE BETWEEN PLANTS.

What is the right distance apart to plant carnations in benches for the best results? The soil is strong clay loam, with manure and a little lime. C. & C.

The distance apart you set your carnations on the benches will depend somewhat on the varieties you grow, and on the size of your plants. For most varieties and average size of plants you can allow a space 10x12. For varieties like Victory you need not allow more than 8x10, but you would not dare plant Robert Craig as closely as that.

VIOLA CORNUTA.

As a good and most beautiful material for bedding purposes, the spring and summer flowering Viola cornuta hybrids, with their manifold and bright colors, deserve here to be mentioned. They are really worthy of being used in every garden, be it a small or large one.

As one of the best and showiest hybrids, I mention Papilio. The pretty and large blooms cover the dwarf and bushy plants in dense masses and are of a most lovely clear blue or light violet, with a small white center. Two other good blue varieties are Magnifica, of a dark violet shade, and Purple Queen, of a deep blue violet coloring. These three different varieties are especially suitable for planting in beds intermixed with yellow, white or pink, early or late flowering tulips. As Viola cornuta grows only to a height of about six inches, the tulips flower well above them and so present on the blue underground a really fine and beautiful sight. Viola cornuta is a

ROSES

TREATMENT OF BLACK SPOT.

The season is now approaching when black spot will make its appearance in Beauty benches, and it should be the duty of every grower to take due precaution to avoid an attack of this pest, and to stamp it out on its first appearance. Houses which are situated on low, marshy land or are much sheltered are more liable to be the subject of this trouble than those on higher and more exposed ground.

Care should be taken to keep the atmosphere as dry as is consistent with the health of the plants. Avoid all sudden fluctuations of temperature and be sure to have the foliage dry by sundown.

During protracted cold, wet spells it is good policy to start firing, in order to keep a good circulation of air, as there is no condition more favorable to the germination and spread of this trouble than a close, muggy atmosphere.

To prevent and hold this fungus in check, a spraying of the carbonate of copper compound is recommended, using three ounces carbonate of copper and one gallon of ammonia to fifty gallons of water, and applying once a week. This should be applied in the form of a very fine spray, taking care to give every part of the surface of the leaf, both upper and under side, a good wetting.

Cleanliness and care play an important part in the checking and prevention of this trouble. Those leaves at the base of the stem, which, owing to their proximity to the soil, are the first to get wet and the last to dry out, are the first affected and many growers make it a point to have them removed before the critical season commences.

All affected leaves should be picked off and burned and a careful watch kept every day for indications of the disease spreading. RIBES.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Meeting at Philadelphia.

It is desirable that a meeting of the members of the American Rose Society, and all who are interested in the rose, and particularly such as are specially interested in the 1908 meeting in Chicago, be arranged for during the S. A. F. week in Philadelphia.

The eastern growers will there have an opportunity of meeting many of the western growers, and can perfect arrangements for the convention and exhibition much more readily than can be done by correspondence. I would strongly urge upon the rose growers meeting in Philadelphia, the importance of arranging to attend this meeting and lending their influence and assistance, moral and material, to make the 1908 meeting by far the best in the history of the society.

Our secretary, Mr. Hammond, will be in attendance at the S. A. F. convention and will arrange for time and place of the rose meeting and announce the same in due course. I regret that I will not be able to be with you, but our vice-president-elect, Mr. Breitmeyer, will be present and will preside over the meeting. ROBERT SIMPSON, Pres.

PARROT TULIPS FOR BEDDING.

I am intending using tulips for spring bedding. Are the parrot tulips suitable and would you advise a carpet of pansies or forget-me-nots, or something else? I would like to use a carpet of some sort. The location is about 400 miles north of San Francisco and ninety miles from the coast. D. M.

Parrot tulips are less satisfactory for bedding purposes than other varieties. Their brilliant colorings and oddly marked flowers make them fascinating and popular, but unfortunately they have weak stems, which will not hold the flowers erect when expanded. After a storm of wind and rain they are so bent, broken and bespattered as to be of little value. We think they are well worth growing in small clumps, but think a bed such as you plan would be disappointing if you used them. If, perchance, you wish to try them, I would suggest the variety Cramoisi Brilliant, the finest of all parrots and very free blooming. The color is carmine and for this a groundwork of white and yellow pansies or white daisies would be suitable. If you use Lutea major, yellow, or Markgraaf, scarlet and yellow, the myosotis would do very well for a groundwork. With a mixed bed a light groundwork is best.

I think you would be better satisfied if you used some of the early bedding tulips, such as Joost von Vondel, Chrysolara, Thomas Moore, Belle Alliance or Proserpine, or any of the fine named Darwin late-flowering varieties, such as Glow, Gretchen or Edwin Rostand. It is better to use one variety in a bed, rather than a mixture. W. N. C.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Dendrobiums.

These two useful florists' dendrobes, D. nobile and D. Wardianum, if they have been making their growths in a warm, moist house, should now in some cases have the pseudobulbs pretty well made up and should be moved to a drier house, where they can obtain more light. Do not give direct sun at once, as the rays are still too powerful. Keep the plants rather drier at the root, but syringe overhead once or twice on hot days. Much of the success in flowering dendrobes depends on the thorough ripening of the bulbs. We have seen them hung under trees outdoors. This answers well in dry weather, but the soakings of thunder showers are not desirable. On some private establishments, fruit houses, from which the crops have been gathered, prove ideal resting places. On commercial places they do well hung over the paths in a carnation house, the little shading usually placed on the glass when the carnations are planted just breaking the sun's rays sufficiently. Plants with balls only partially completed should be kept well watered and syringed until the balls are fully made up.

Dendrobium formosum giganteum is one of the most useful of all blooming orchids. The flowers rival in size those of some of the cattleyas and their color, pure white with a yellow throat, makes them especially valuable for florists. This dendrobe revels in a warm, moist house, like all others of its kind when growing. The flower buds will now be appearing on the tops of the new growths. When expanded they will last better in a rather cooler and drier house.

D. Phalaenopsis Schröderiana should now be making vigorous growth and the flower spikes will be showing here and there. It needs heat to properly develop its long, graceful sprays, which are invaluable to all florists who can use orchids. Watch for small shell snails, which sometimes gnaw the spikes. Lay traps of lettuce leaves for these.

Cattleyas.

That valuable and popular autumn blooming variety, Cattleya labiata, will in many cases now have its bulbs pretty well completed, with sheaths showing on top of the bulbs. Keep the plants well up to the light, but do not decrease the water supplies until the bulbs are well hardened. C. Trianae, the standard mid-winter cattleya, is also completing its growths in some instances. It is a pity that this valuable orchid cannot be made to produce the number of flowers per sheath that the fall flowering C. labiata does. Ofttimes big, fat bulbs will produce but one flower, instead of three or four, as expected, and prove disappointing to the grower. This trouble is not infrequently caused by growing the plants too soft, under a heavy shade, where they make beautiful dark bulbs and leaves at the expense of flowers. The plants should now have a light shade and be kept as near the glass as possible. A light spraying on hot afternoons will be beneficial.

Any potting or basketing needed by plants of the summer blooming section, such as Mendellii, Mossiae, Gaskelliana and gigas, should be attended to as the plants go out of bloom. Remove as much of the old compost as possible without damaging the roots. Give ample drainage. Use chopped fern fiber, from which the fine dust has been shaken out, to which may be added some lumpy charcoal and sphagnum moss. Press the compost firmly with a pointed stick of hardwood, leaving the surface somewhat rounded. Keep the plants fairly dry until roots are being freely made and the bulbs are some inches in height.

Cypripediums.

Cypripediums need a fair supply of water the year around, but at this season, when they are making their most rapid growth, they require a good soaking once a day. Allow them to dry out tolerably if the weather is damp and dark. A good syringing, using a fine sprayer on the end of the hose, will keep down spider and thrips, which sometimes badly disfigure the foliage. C. insigne, the most popular variety, will soon be showing some flowers. Keep the plants cool and airy, without too much shade. If they are in a frame, throw off the sashes altogether on cloudy days. The leaves may turn a little paler under this treatment, but the plants will flower better for it and it is easy to put color into the leaves when they are placed in more shade. Cypripediums, especially of the insigne section, are benefited by doses of liquid manure applied once a week when the plants are well established in the pots.

Some people have the idea that orchids are hard to grow. Some varieties may be, but as a rule they are as easy of culture as carnations, roses and violets. A batch of C. insigne grown outdoors on a bed of ashes under a north wall, were roted last year and the florist who grew them flowers them splendidly. They were big, stocky plants, with leathery leaves, and evidently reveled in this outdoor summer culture from June to September.

Schizanthus.

The schizanthus has come into considerable favor of late years for pot culture, more especially since the dwarf forms, like Wisetonensis, have been introduced. It is not difficult of culture, its requirements being a cool, sunny and airy house, plenty of water at all times, pinching to keep the plants bushy and feeding liberally at the roots as the flowers start to expand. From seeds sown now nice plants for the Christmas holidays can be had. Sow half a dozen seeds in small pots and place in a cold frame. Thin out to three seedlings, shift successively to 4-inch and 6-inch pots.

The last named will grow nice, bushy plants. Keep the plants as cool as possible, clear of actual freezing, and do not on any account try forcing, for the effects will be ruinous. The variety Wisetonensis is the best for pot culture on account of its dwarf, stocky habit. Some large-flowered hybrids of it are especially good. Successive sowings of schizanthus may be made at intervals, to provide a supply until May. The flowers are good for design and bouquet work and last as well as carnations in water.

Attend the Convention.

The time is close at hand when florists from all over the country will be journeying to the S. A. F. convention in the Quaker city. Everything points to this being the banner meeting the society has yet held. The program is an especially attractive one and many points of vital interest to florists will come up for discussion. The good work recently done in compelling express companies to reduce their rates on cut flowers is but one example of the work being done for the benefit of the craft. Brother craftsmen, much more solid work lies ahead of us. The S. A. F. leaders need your attendance and if in your power, go to Philadelphia and you will be well repaid. The meeting of craftsmen from all over our broad land, the chance to view the notable nurseries, commercial florists' establishments and seed and supply houses, to say nothing of the many attractions of Philadelphia in other lines, should prove an irresistible drawing card.

The florist needs a vacation if any man does, and when can he better afford to take it than during August? Plan, therefore, to help make the Philadelphia meeting the best ever by journeying thither. You will not regret doing so, but will receive new ideas which will broaden you and make you wish you had attended the conventions years ago.

Brief Reminders.

If you grow mushrooms under the greenhouse benches, start at once to collect the horse manure for the beds. Turn it over to prevent rank heating and add one-third as much loam as you have manure.

Push ahead necessary repairs to houses, boilers and pipes. If you are too careless to make your greenhouse tight during the dry weather, you have no just cause for complaint because your roofs leak when it rains.

Look out for green worms on mignonette, cinerarias and primulas, or they will quickly eat off all the foliage. Kill all the white butterflies you can see in the houses and thus lessen the number of pests.

Lay amaryllis under a bench where they will be quite dry. They can remain there until time for repotting arrives.

As you finish planting carnation houses, rake up under the benches thoroughly. Give the floors a coating of clean cinders.

THE BEST SWEET PEAS.

A Successful Season.

The season of 1907 has proved a fairly satisfactory one for sweet peas outdoors. At best they are a somewhat uncertain crop in America, our intense summer heat making a long succession of bloom an impossibility unless the ground is well manured and deeply dug and the plants liberally mulched and watered. In the east the finest flowers, with the richest colors, are to be found in close proximity to the ocean, the moist, salt-laden air and generally cool nights suiting these and other annuals much better than the warmer and drier locations farther inland. It is pleasing to note a continued growth in the popularity of this best of all hardy annuals, and the steady improvement in varieties whets the appetites of both professional and amateur growers to try a few novelties each season.

In Boston the sweet pea show was this season the best the Massachusetts Horticultural Society ever had, while in London the annual exhibition of the National Sweet Pea Society entirely filled the new Horticultural Hall in Vincent Square, with all the annexes and two rooms upstairs, thousands of vases being staged. Features which attract visitors at the London shows are the decorated tables of sweet peas. Of these there were thirty-two this year, while of novelties no less than 154 were shown. This clearly shows that we have by no means reached the acme of perfection in sweet peas yet. Only seven, however, of this large number received awards of merit and none certificates, and in the whole exhibit there was nothing of outstanding merit. We note that the quality of sweet peas in Great Britain, thanks to the cool, moist summer, has been remarkably high, stems of the leading prize winners' flowers being eighteen inches in length and carrying three and four flowers each. While we can average that number of blooms here on some of the more robust varieties, we cannot get any such stems except from plants grown under glass by such experts as William Sim, of Cliftondale.

Last Year's Novelties.

It is an interesting fact that several of last season's novelties occupy a high position in the various competitive classes. In a voting contest initiated by W. W. Rawson & Co, of Boston, among their visitors, three novelties, Frank Dolby, Nora Unwin and Queen Alexandra occupy the leading positions and these same varieties seem to score high at the big English shows.

At the late London show the class calling for twenty vases of distinct colors went to the noted grower, C. Breadmore, for these varieties: Dora Breadmore, John Ingman, Dorothy Eckford, Duke of Westminster, Helen Lewis, Romola Piazzini, Jeanne Gordon, Helen Pierce, Agnes Johnson, George Gordon, Duchess of Sutherland, Princess of Wales, Countess Spencer, Lady Grisel Hamilton, Jessie Cuthbertson, Black Knight, Mrs. W. Wright, King Edward VII, Lottie Eckford and Cocinea.

Mr. Stevenson, who won the Eckford memorial cup and a gold medal, showed the following dozen varieties: George Herbert, Nora Unwin, Rosie Adams, Mrs. Collier, Helen Lewis, Romola Piazzini, Henry Eckford, Black Knight, Mrs. Hardeastle Sykes, Paradise, King Edward VII and Dora Stevenson.

The One-color Classes.

It is interesting to note the varieties winning in the strongly competed for classes for vases of one color. Dorothy Eckford swept the deck for whites. We still consider it the best white here, but Nora Unwin will give it a close push for first place in the future. No other whites at all approach these two varieties.

For scarlet, Queen Alexandra was the winner. It is much brighter than King Edward VII, stands our sun without burning, being in fact a sun-proof Scarlet Gem, and though this is not a very popular shade we have not seen anything to beat it here. Blush shades are too near white to be popular. Duchess of Sutherland again beat all competitors in London. The flowers lack size, but the variety is of a vigorous habit and a profuse bloomer.

John Ingman was invincible in the rose and carmine classes. It was finely shown in Boston and promises to be popular. There are apparently rogue strains of it in cultivation, a number of off-color vases being disqualified in London. Countess Spencer led in pinks, followed by Bolton's Pink. We have found Gladys Unwin and Countess Spencer both fine. The latter is a little deeper in color, but each possesses remarkable vigor and we think, if restricted to a single variety of sweet pea, our choice would be Gladys Unwin. Helen Eckford and Helen Lewis proved the best orange varieties in London. The former is useless here, the blooms being burned beyond recognition by the sun. Helen Lewis has proved rather better than that grand variety Miss Willmott, which is saying a good deal.

Climate Affects Colors.

Dora Breadmore proved itself the queen of yellows, Hon. Mrs. E. Kenyon having to take a back seat. In America this color comes too near white to become popular; with flowers of a more golden color its value would be enhanced. In London Lady Grisel Hamilton routed all competitors as a lavender and we see nothing in sight to beat it, unless Frank Flower Day at Oak Grove Cemetery, Springfield, Mass.

Dolby, rather darker in color, should displace it. Navy Blue remains the leading blue on both sides of the Atlantic and Mrs. Walter Wright among mauves, while Duke of Westminster is supreme in the violet and purple class, Black Knight having its own way in the maroon class.

Coming to magentas, George Gordon led the list in London. It is not a popular color here. In picotee-edged, Dainty and Lottie Eckford won, while America worsted all competitors in the striped and flaked red and rose class, Princess of Wales being supreme in the class for striped and flaked purple and blue. Jeanne Gordon cannot be beaten as a bicolor, while for marbled varieties we note that Helen Pierce was the only variety shown by the whole of eighteen competitors. For fancies, Agnes Johnston and Sybil Eckford were the winners.

Best of Each Color.

Sifting down the number of varieties to a few which will prove of great commercial value, the following would seem to stand out as strictly first-class:

Whites—Dorothy Eckford and Nora Unwin.

Pinks—Gladys Unwin and Countess Spencer.

Scarlets—Queen Alexandra and King Edward VII.

Rose—John Ingman.

Lavender—Lady Grisel Hamilton.

Mauve—Mrs. W. Wright and Frank Dolby.

Orange—Helen Lewis.

Striped—America.

Blue—Navy Blue.

Marbled—Helen Pierce.

Having grown all the foregoing fourteen varieties and taken careful note of sorts grown elsewhere or on the exhibition table, I can safely recommend them as being the best of their respective colors. If reduced to half a dozen sorts I would pick Dorothy Eckford, white; Gladys Unwin, pink; Helen Lewis, orange; John Ingman, rose; Queen Alexandra, scarlet; and Lady Grisel Hamilton or Frank Dolby, light blue.

ENGLISH SWEET PEA SHOW.

There were a surprising number of so-called novelties exhibited at the show of the National Sweet Pea Society at London, England, July 16, but only the following obtained awards:

Rosie Adams, a large waved flower, of a bright bronzy-purple, distinct and effective; award of merit.

Silas Cole, large wavy or Countess Spencer flower, rich maroon in color; award of merit.

The Marquis, another large waved flower, color rosy-lilac; award of merit.

St. George, a Countess Spencer type of Evelyn Byatt color; good in color and shape, but apparently rather short in stem; award of merit.

Nancy Perkin, a Countess Spencer type of Henry Eckford coloring; award of merit.

Elsie Herbert, creamy-white, with narrow edge pale pink; a large flower of wavy shape; award of merit.

Evelyn Hemus, cream, suffused palest pink; award of merit.

One remarkable thing about this show, says the Horticultural Advertiser, was the great number of novelties of the Countess Spencer type. Every one of the varieties which received an award of merit was of this shape, and there were heaps of others set up for awards, or to be found among competitive classes. It also struck us that there are getting a great number of varieties too much alike; to take the wavy pinks, there are Mrs. A. Watkins, Countess Spencer, Audrey Crier, Vera Jeffery, Mrs. Hardcastle, Sykes, Paradise, Malcolm and Gladys Unwin, and perhaps several more we have missed, which if distinct, are yet very much alike in decorative effect; three of varying shades of pink would be quite enough for all practical purposes. Those who are trying for novelties have now, indeed, a difficult task before them; all probable colors seem already appropriated, while it seems difficult to imagine much improvement in either size or form.

A SECOND MEMORIAL DAY.

How It Works in Springfield.

The custom of having an annual "flower day," on which all lot holders are invited to decorate graves, has become a popular custom in several cemeteries. It is a matter which florists should take up with the cemetery people in towns where it would be an innovation, for the custom of having a second Decoration day in the late summer or early autumn deserves all the support the trade can give it. The idea, once tried, is quite certain to have the friendship of the cemetery officials, as it is invariably productive of much interest in the cemetery.

Oak Grove cemetery, Springfield, Mass., adopted the idea in 1903, and Superintendent J. C. Sackett has found it over to prevent rank heating and add one-third as much loam as you have manure.

it to be growing in favor. This second general Decoration day takes place every year the first Sunday after Labor day. The following is the notice sent out to lot-owners last year:

"Third Annual Flower Sunday, Oak Grove Cemetery. Our third annual flower day will be held Sunday, September 9, 1906, to be observed by all those who wish, as a day for a general remembrance, and the bringing of flowers for the decoration of their lots."

The quick response to the notices each year is an assurance that the experiment is passing into a custom which will stay because the people approve of and welcome it. It goes without saying that it means an increase of business to the florists, although the season is one of more or less abundance of garden flowers.

The Springfield Homestead has the following to say of the last celebration of the day:

"All day Saturday many willing hands were tenderly working over the graves of their loved ones, but most noticeable among them were the busy mothers. Old ladies with whitened hair and tired faces bent over the graves of children who have been at rest for more than fifteen years. The middle-aged mothers were there, too, softened by a grief which had lost its first pang, and then there were the younger women who have just tasted their first real sorrow, and to all faces alike this act of lingering awhile with the dead brought a sweetness peculiar to itself. Although the decorating of graves may not help the dead, to the living it brings one of the gentlest influences of human experience.

"Early Sunday morning, while the dew was still heavy on the flowers, people began to visit the cemetery. They came and went all day, and at dusk little groups were still scattered about, quietly talking of those who were gone.

"The conspicuous graves Sunday were the undecorated ones, but there were not many of these. Almost every grave in the cemetery had its token of remembrance. Asters, dahlias, phlox, marigolds and huge clusters of hydrangeas were scattered in autumnal profusion among the handsome monuments, making a brilliant bit of coloring quite in harmony with the warm September day."

THE LATEST PLANT WRINKLES.

A Visit to Robert Craig.

Robert Craig had an appointment with Phil, made several weeks ago; Mr. Craig did not remember it—great men never do remember their appointments, it is a sign of mediocrity—nevertheless he was ready and gave his visitor 100 minutes of his time; 100 minutes that were full of pleasure and profit, though I fear Mrs. Craig would not be human did she not regret full fifty of those minutes when dinner waited.

First there were the cyclamens, perfect peaches in 6-inch pots in frames, plants worth the trip in two trains to see. Grown with skill from especially selected seed, they promise well. There is a special cyclamen grower on the place, an elderly man of rare ability, who potters over and fusses with his pets until they must be fine; they cannot help it. His name, maybe, is Winship. Under that name he personifies painstaking care and skill.

Then came the ferns. Five whole houses of Nephrolepis Amerpohlii are being grown by the Robert Craig Co. for William P. Craig; a splendid stock in all sizes, from the original plant in a 12-inch pan, a perfect specimen, to the little runners just potted into 1½-inch pots. Last February it was freely predicted that this fern would not be ready before 1908. Now it is evident that the stock is here. The demand is here also; merit is quickly recognized. Nephrolepis Todeaoides is also planted out in quantity. Mr. Craig says it will replace N. Piersoni, N. Elegantissima and N. Barrowsii, but that it is not in the same class with N. Amerpohlii.

The crotons were next, two beautiful houses of nicely colored plants in many old and new varieties. A seedling of Edwin Lonsdale's, a cheerful Christmas red, is here in quantity. A pow-wow was to be held at Girard College the following afternoon at 2 by the clock, to decide upon a name.

Dracæna terminalis was even, clean and well grown, a house to give pleasure to any grower. By it was Dracæna Massangeana, grown in larger numbers since Mr. Craig's visit to Haddon Hall, Atlantic City, where plants of this variety were thriving apparently with no special care.

Then came the specialty of the place today, Ficus pandurata, an imposing sight from the doorway of each house. Long rows of these stately plants stretch to the farther end, the living embodiment of durable planthood. The largest size was being planted into cedar tubs 10x12—buckets divested of their handles, admirably adapted to the purpose.

Chrysanthemums were next. First came President Loubet, an early white equal in size and finish to the best late varieties. Mr. Craig is believed to have the largest stock in the world of this novelty. Another early white, Snowflake, is a competitor of Polly Rose. Jeanne Nonin has come out from behind a cloud, the leaf disease to which this fine variety is subject having been discovered to affect the early and not the late struck cuttings. Colonel Appleton and Major Bonnaillon are still standard-bearers in their color. A single of golden yellow color, a daisy in appearance, is praised as Kitty Bourne. Pompons, increasing in popularity, are plentiful. Briolas and Klondike, the former an improvement on the latter, are the golden yellows. White Lulu is grown for white. Returning to the standard varieties, such as Ivory, it is interesting to note that instead of pinching a plant and growing it to three flowers, two late struck cuttings are being planted close together, the idea being to grow two large flowers each to a single stem instead of three flowers of medium size. It costs a little more in propagating and growing the plants in pots, but the flowers will bring more. Better try it. Robert Craig is doing it. Eugene Dailedouze is doing it.

Otaheite oranges were fine, full of fruit. Pandanus Veitchii is being grown in large numbers to offer in medium sizes. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine is coming along nicely. Thousand Beauties is planted out for stock. Adiantum hybridum is having a lively run. "The best one for cutting sprays," Mr. Craig says, and now they know how to propagate it. Do you? PHIL.

TOBACCO IN GREENHOUSES.

Vaporizing and Fumigating.

In the vaporization of tobacco—a practice which has been in use since about 1894 and which has largely superseded ordinary dry-tobacco fumigation in many sections—tobacco stems are placed in a kettle, metal pail, or similar receptacle. A hose is then connected with a steam pipe, the nozzle inserted in the receptacle, and the house to be treated becomes saturated with the vapor of tobacco, with the resulting destruction of aphides and other soft-bodied insects that may be present, such as thrips or white fly.

Liquid preparations are generally evaporated over alcohol or other lamps, or are placed upon steam pipes, or hot irons are put into the receptacles. For general greenhouse fumigation, fumigating powders are placed in shallow pans, and a few drops of kerosene are added to facilitate ignition. The dry fumigant is designed to burn slowly, so as to produce a smudge which, when dense, is fatal to aphides. This process of treatment may be applied at any time, by day or over night, and upon its completion the house is ventilated. In some cases the plants are syringed, but care is necessary, for a surplus of moisture is to be avoided, owing to the liability of inducing spot, mildew, and other fungous diseases on plants susceptible to such maladies.

The amount of a tobacco compound to be used depends upon its strength, the plants to be treated, and the size of the greenhouse. Several forms are for sale under different trade names, and there is much difference in their strength. They are put up in both dry and liquid forms. In experiments conducted on greenhouse cucumbers at the Massachusetts Agricultural Experiment Station, at Amherst, one of these preparations has been used successfully at the rate of five or six teaspoonfuls to one and one-half pints of water, and vaporized in a space of about 5,000 cubic feet. The length of exposure in this case was over night. Thus used, it does not injure delicate plants, like cucumber, but it kills all aphides and nearly all thrips—for which it was used primarily and which are not infrequently associated with aphides on the plants to be treated.

Thrips and white fly are more resistant to poisonous gases than are aphides. The former are most effectively destroyed while in the soft, immature stages.

The adult thrips are hardier and, being winged and more active, spring and fly away, and are thus not so easily brought in direct contact with insecticides like kerosene emulsion. The white flies, on the other hand, are more susceptible to poisons while in the active adult stage. The nymphs are of firmer consistency and comparatively resistant. Remedies for the greenhouse white fly are described in Circular No. 57, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture and are worth careful study by every grower.

A later method of applying the tobacco extracts is to spray them with a fine mist, after diluting in water to a point where the cost is not great and safety to stock is insured, while at the same time the nicotine-laden mist destroys the thrips, etc.

PALMS.

The approach of the busy season for the plantmen shows that the market for palms will be in fully as strong a position as last year, when prices showed an advance from twenty per cent to thirty per cent over the preceding season. It is far from being a case of no palms to be had, for some of the growers who hew to the same line season after season have fully as large stocks as ever, and some of the far-sighted ones have increased their supply. But many who grew palms in quantity a few years ago have dropped out of this line, until the supply is not nearly as great, by comparison with the present outlet, as it was a half dozen years ago. The smaller sizes of kentias, such plants as will wholesale for 75 cents, $1, or $1.25, are especially short, both in this country and in Europe, where many of the palm specialists of a few years ago have gone into other lines.

It is interesting to note that a considerable number of the houses once given to palms by those who made them a specialty, are now given to ferns of the Boston varieties, but a number of these growers are talking either of cutting down the fern department to make additional room for palms, or else of building new houses to reënter the palm industry. The result will be that probably in two or three years there will again be a large supply and a slow market for palms, when these growers may be expected to again conclude there is nothing in the palm business. In the meantime, those who have kept steadily at it will do well, especially on kentias.

THE READERS' CORNER.

A Ladder for Greenhouse Roofs.

In the REVIEW of July 18 I noticed an inquiry from W. E. B. in regard to a movable ladder for greenhouse roofs. Perhaps my method will suit his purpose. I take a 2x4 clean pine scantling, of the required length, and split it for the sides of the ladder. My sashes are sixteen inches wide, and I lay the strips of scantling fifteen inches apart. Then on the under sides of the side-pieces of the ladder I nail strips of ash twenty inches long and about three feet apart. This ash, which is 1x1½, will also serve for steps, on the upper side, which I place ten inches apart. On one end of the ladder I screw two iron hooks, to catch on the ridgeboard. The hooks I use cost 25 cents.

This was my own idea and has been in use for the last sixteen years. The whole weight of the ladder is only about twenty-five pounds; therefore it is easy to handle. Paint the ladder and hang it in a dry place when not in use.

AN OLD FLORIST.

To Remove Lime Shading.

I noticed in reading the REVIEW an inquiry for something to take the lime shading off glass. This is a matter that has always bothered greenhouse men more or less, but by a very cheap and simple method the lime can be removed without injury to either paint or putty. All that is necessary is to scrub the glass with clear cider vinegar, using a soft brush or a rag swab. It requires only a small quantity of the vinegar to do the deed, as it neutralizes the lime, which can then be easily washed off with the hose.

The writer remembered having used this when a boy to wash the whitewash off a ceiling in a living-room, and he has experimented with it on glass and found it to be effective. I hope this will be a benefit to the trade in this perplexing question. A. E. BOYCE.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market continues in a condition of statu quo. It is low tide. Prices must be quoted as a matter of habit, but it is a case of take what you can get. Beauties, when they are beauties, can be independent. Some fine stock comes in from Newport and Briarcliff. The quantity of extras could be carried by a child. Kaiserin is the queen of the other roses; $10 per hundred is easy for the good ones. The new Brides and Maids are small and short-stemmed, but their color and texture give promise of early improvement. The tendency of the market is encouraging.

Carnations—well, one expert said Monday, "Cut out fancies; cut 'em out, there are no fancies." It is about true. Three weeks yet before we get really good ones.

Lilies are doing well and prices are firm. Valley should improve with the August weddings coming on. Dahlias are here too early. Nobody wants them. Some sold Monday as low as 25 cents per hundred. Of gladioli there is no end and the shipments are only just beginning. What will the flood be like by the middle of August? They are already down to 50 cents per hundred, the new varieties do not go above $1.

A lot of stock of many kinds never sees a buyer and the weekly shrinkage in the whole market is enormous. It is a miracle that so much is disposed of. It could not be if this were not the best cut flower market in the world. There is a lot of shipping to outside cities and resorts, quiet but constant. The summer society centers are having a boom which will last until September.

an estimate on the delegation to the S. A. F. convention, and all my inquiries confirm the prophecy. The special train, decorated and provisioned, will start at 9:55 a. m., August 20, on the Pennsylvania railroad, and the loyalty of New York florists for its big sister city will be demonstrated beyond any question. We can safely count on a delegation of 200. The exhibitors will be many and the space already spoken for by seedsmen, florists' supply and ribbon houses, plant growers and boiler companies is very encouraging.

Various Notes.

The New York Florists' Club will meet again on Monday, September 9.

On the afternoon of August 5 fire did great damage at the plant of Pierce & Co., the manufacturers of mastic.

Myer, the Madison avenue retailer, is spending two weeks at Avenel.

James Blauvelt, manager of A. Warendorff's Forty-second street store, whose summer home is at Spring Valley, N. Y., had an experience with burglars last week that relieved him of money, watch, jewelry and all portable articles of value in his home, four other homes yielding up their offerings the same night.

In contradiction to this tale of ill luck George Saltford recovered last week in a field at his old home in Rhinebeck a wad of $25 in bills which he dropped a year ago and which the seasons and the cultivator had mutilated sufficiently to make sending to Washington for redemption necessary. Even the teeth of the mowing machine had left their mark on the mazuma. Now he is sorry he had not lost $250. We are never fully satisfied.

Walter Reimels and friends are on their way to the Jamestown exposition in a naphtha launch, a rather perilous trip with summer storms abundant.

John Nash last week visited E. H. and R. C. Pye, of Nyack, growers of fine Kaiserin and Chatenay roses and carnations.

Mr. Nash, of Moore, Hentz & Nash, left August 3 for a three weeks' outing at Lake Mahopac, accompanied by Mrs. Nash.

John Kral has been flirting with the sound waters with friends for several weeks in his motor boat, Coynette.

B. S. Slinn, Jr., is on deck again after a pleasant summer in Texas, Arizona and Michigan.

A. J. Guttman and family are at New Paltz, N. Y., and will go direct from there to the Philadelphia convention.

J. K. Allen's address for three weeks will be The Larson, Atlantic City. From there Mr. Allen will round up his holiday at the S. A. F. reunion.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, were here last week on their way to Denmark and Norway.

George Stumpp and wife and W. H. Siebrecht and wife are visiting the great cities of Germany and sailing the Rhine together. They will return about September 1. Jos. Voeke, manager for Mr. Siebrecht, with his family, is back from a two weeks' stay at Shohola Glen.

William Ford starts this week for his three weeks' forgettery in the mountains, for Michael Ford has returned rosy, fat and full of energy again.

Robert Simpson had the company of millionaires Gates and Starin on his trip to Europe. There's no company too rich nor too good for the progressive rose grower nowadays.

Mr. Trumpore, of Small's, is now in the Adirondacks.

Mr. Ross, with F. R. Pierson Co., has got back alive from Scotland.

Thomas Young, Jr., is making his annual voyage this week to Europe and Alex McConnell is already on the way.

Alex Smith, of the Cut Flower Exchange, has been browning himself at Bound Brook.

Miss Mildred Foran, of the Cut Flower Co., is spending her vacation at her home in Quebec, Canada.

James F. McConnell, manager for L. M. Noe, with Mrs. McConnell, is in the Berkshires.

Messrs. Hillman, Jos. Millang, Sullivan and Hackland, of the New York Cut Flower Co., are all suburbanites and need no special vacation, every day of the long summer being a holiday to those of us who live in the delightful environs of Flushing, Borough Park and other cool and shady retreats, all within thirty minutes of the greatest amusement centers and the grandest city in the world.

William Starke has been displaying his handiwork in the construction of some Roman gardens at Murray's, on Forty-second street, near the Liberty Theater.

The big plate glass window of Lecakes & Co. was accidentally broken last week, by an expressman.

The store of the Geller Florists' Supply Co. was flooded by the careless neglect of a water pipe in the store above them July 31, and a good deal of damage was done the stock of baskets, immortelles, etc.

W. H. Traendly, the retail florist of Sixth avenue and Seventeenth street, died August 2, after an operation at the New York hospital. The immediate cause of his death was rheumatism of the heart. The funeral, August 4, was largely attended. Mr. Traendly has been in the florists' business for twenty-five years, in New York, and for over fifteen years at his last location. Frank H. Traendly, of Traendly & Schenck, is a brother of the deceased.

The outing of the Greek American Retail Florists' and Growers' Association was a great success August 2. Over 250 attended. Several of the New York wholesalers accompanied the happy crowd. The association has a membership of nearly 100. George D. Nicholas is the president. There are many splendid men in the organization and any one found unworthy is at once dropped from the roll. Some of the Greek florists are wealthy, one of them counting his ducats at half a million. Many fine stores in New York attest their general prosperity. The two dinners provided the excursionists were excellent, the games hotly contested and the enthusiasm universal. The dances by the ladies were especially graceful. Financially the society made a nice profit on the day.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

IN an opinion given the horticulture commissioner of the state of Washington, the attorney general holds that where a company has nurseries in Idaho and Washington one bond is sufficient, but the company must take out licenses for each agent operating in Washington.

AT MAPLEWOOD.

One of the accompanying illustrations is from a photograph of the Kellogg fern, as it is called because it originated with George M. Kellogg, at Maplewood, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Mr. Kellogg says of it:

"During the three years since its origination I have been getting a supply of plants in stock. I have some fine plants now on hand, but have as yet put it on the market but very little. I have placed a few plants for sale in my store in Kansas City. They certainly have attracted a great deal of attention from our customers, as well as those passing by. What few plants I have placed on sale have found a ready market and brought a good price. One by close examination of the fronds in the picture can form an idea of the width of the full-grown frond. They are double and fluffy on both the front and back of the central stem, making a very heavy frond, but still the stem holds its weight up well. The Kellogg shows very few marks of the Boston, from which it originated. It was a runner from a 4-inch Boston. All who have seen this new fern, Kellogg, have fallen in love with it. It is easily cared for and requires about the same attention given the Boston fern."

The other illustration shows Mr. Kellogg in the center of the group of employees and is reproduced from a photograph taken just after one of the quarterly dinners he gives them. After supper is served each one who has been in his employ six months receives as a gift one half of a week's wages. Mr. Kellogg thinks this will be a great help in getting his men to feel that he appreciates what they are doing. This gift is given after each quarterly supper and means two full weeks' wages as a gift each year.

There are several new greenhouses in course of erection at present and prospects for stock next season are good.

NEW POET'S NARCISSI.

Some of the newer hybrids of Narcissus poeticus have now multiplied sufficiently to be available for market planting, and it will be interesting to observe whether or not they will prove a profitable crop. I have every confidence in them, says a writer in the Gardeners' Chronicle, London. When in conversation with a large market grower, several years ago, he informed me that when he sent new and choice varieties of trumpet daffodils to market he found that they did not realize higher prices than did such standard and well-known kinds as Emperor, Golden Spur, etc., but that when he sent new and improved varieties of N. poeticus he found a marked improvement in their price over those of the old ornatus and others of the type. Recently I had occasion to write to a large grower for some bulbs of a new poet's daffodil, as I knew he held the main stock of the variety, but the reply I received was that he did not care to part with more than a few bulbs, as he intended growing this plant for his cut flower trade. Within the past two or three seasons stocks of improved varieties of N. poeticus have been sold for high prices, in some cases the purchaser being a market grower. There is certainly a scarcity of some varieties, which can only be explained by the fact that there is an extra demand, and in several cases prices have actually risen. All these things, to my mind, go to show that there is a good future for this beautiful and useful section of the genus narcissus, and growers who are the first to cultivate the best of the pheasant-eye narcissi for market will find the investment a remunerative one.

We are comparatively new in the business and some of our best work has been done by following the advice given in the REVIEW.—F. D. HARTSHORN, Augusta, Me.

THERE is a strong demand for all grades of greenhouse help, but especially so for men who are capable of taking charge of the growing and the management of men.

NARCISSUS PETER BARR is held at $125 a bulb, not $1.25 per bulb, as stated in a recent issue of the REVIEW. Formerly the price was $250 per bulb, but the raisers have this season offered it at half price.

"The increasing demand for winter-flowering carnations in England is wonderful," says the Gardeners' Magazine, "and there is not the slightest sign of decline in the popularity of the flower, either in the market or in private gardens."

IF the Illinois reader who recently sent in a leaf for name will send another, also sending his full name and address, effort will be made to supply the information he wishes. He also should state if it is an annual or a hardy plant, time growth starts and what flowers it produces.

THE Republican party gives notice that, if returned to power, it will revise the tariff in 1909; the Democrats, if successful in the election, will lose no time in getting after the tariff-protected trusts, so we may be fairly sure of some tariff tinkering two years hence, and not until then.

THOSE who attend the S. A. F. convention and visit the many prosperous growers in the vicinity will be treated to an object lesson in neatness and cleanliness, and not one arranged for their special benefit. With few exceptions the Philadelphia greenhouse establishments are ready for critical inspection any day in the year and are a pleasure as well as profitable to their owners.

Railroad Rates to Annual Meeting.

Members are advised that the Trunk Line Association, in whose territory Philadelphia, our meeting place, is located, has granted a special rate of one and one-third fare on the certificate plan. This rate has been concurred in by the following associations:

New England Passenger Association, Southeastern Passenger Association, Eastern Canadian Passenger Association.

Members are advised that the Central Passenger Association will not join in the reduced rate of a fare and one-third, for the reason that a number of states have provided by law for a standard rate of 2 cents per mile, particularly in the territories covered by this association. It has, however, made a special concession to our society in that it will sell a round trip ticket to Philadelphia at the rate of 2 cents per mile each way in the territory covered by this association, and at the reduced rate of a fare and one-third through the territory covered by the Eastern, Canadian and Trunk Line Associations. This special concession is only for those attending the session and not for the general public. These special tickets can be obtained only on card orders secured direct from P. J. Hauswirth, secretary, 232 Michigan avenue, Chicago. The Central Passenger Association has furnished the secretary with these card orders, and should you reside in the territory covered by the Central Passenger Association and desire to take advantage of this special concession you MUST obtain from the secretary a card order. In writing for card orders be sure to give the number required, as each person must have one.

The secretary has received the following letter from the Western Passenger Association:

Referring to your application for reduced fares account above named occasion:

We have been requested by the individual lines interested in Western Passenger Association territory to refer you to the revised one-way or summer tourist fares in effect to Chicago and St. Louis, with the understanding that persons can repurchase from those points and take advantage of the reduced fares authorized therefrom.

In order that you may fully understand the situation, beg to state that the fares to Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis from a large part of our territory at the time of your meeting will be on the basis of 2 cents per mile; hence if persons desiring to attend same will purchase tickets to those points and then rebuy at the reduced fares authorized therefrom, they will secure practically the same reduction in the territory of this association as would be accorded by fare and one-third on the basis of the old rates. Summer tourist tickets will be on sale to Chicago and St. Louis from points west of the Missouri river and east of and including Denver and Cheyenne, Wyo., at approximately fare and one-third of the fares in effect February 1, 1907. These fares will no doubt satisfactorily take care of persons desiring to attend your meeting from the territory mentioned.

It is suggested that the delegates residing in Western Passenger Association territory be furnished with Central Passenger Association card orders, so as to enable them to take advantage of the reduced fares authorized from Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis.

The secretary recommends that members living in this territory purchase summer tourist tickets to Chicago or St. Louis, and then avail themselves of the rates mentioned above as offered by the Central Passenger Association.

Jamestown Exposition Rates.

Members are notified that they can purchase cheap railroad tickets which will permit them to attend the convention at Philadelphia and then visit the Jamestown exposition at Norfolk, Va., on the route home at very low rates. Full information can be secured from your local ticket agent.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The market is decidedly quiet, except for the demand for roses, carnations and one or two specialties. There was a run on valley Monday, to such an extent that orders could not be filled.

The supplies of Beauties are not large. Every year growers make provision for summer crops, because they know that those who are successful with them make good money, but something always happens and the supply is under the demand. Beauties are not so good as usual this summer, but the demand is there, and excellent prices are being realized. There is a good call for other roses, particularly for white, and prices are good by comparison with the quality of the stock. Anything of special quality commands a premium and even the poorest roses bring more money than they were bringing at this season last year. Practically all the cuts now are from young plants and few roses can be found with long stems.

Some of the leading houses are receiving practically no carnations. There is no possibility of filling all the orders received. In many instances buyers refuse to take asters instead, having them on the home place, but the shortage of carnations makes a market for large numbers of asters, particularly white. However, the receipts of asters are considerably beyond the possibility of an outlet through the legitimate demand.

There are large receipts of gladioli, the better grades of which are selling fairly well, but there is considerable waste of the poorer stock. Sweet peas have become good property; there are few in the market. There are large supplies of lilies, both auratum and rubrum, with a few album and enough longiflorum to fill all orders. They are being used up at moderate prices for funeral work and window decoration. Peonies still are to be had, but the demand is light and prices low. Quantities of garden flowers are received, but are not readily salable. The demand for greens is light.

Chicago to Philadelphia.

The Chicago Florists' Club, and the visitors who can join them either at Chicago or on the way, plan to use the following route, Pennsylvania railroad:

Leave Chicago, Sunday, August 18, at 3:15 p. m.; arrive Philadelphia, Monday at 6:10 p. m. The fare, including trip to New York City, is $26.70 for the round trip. These tickets are good for thirty days. On them we are entitled to ten days' stop over in Philadelphia, after which the one using this ticket must go to New York and have the ticket vised there and certified to by C. A. Thorley, 1173 Broadway, a member of the New York Merchants' Association.

Delegates can then return, if they desire, via Washington, where they may stop over ten days, making a side trip to Norfolk, or they can return direct to their destination in the west.

Delayed members who cannot take the above train can leave Chicago at 10:05 a. m., Monday, August 19, via Pan Handle and arrive at Philadelphia at 12:17, Tuesday noon. Fare by the Pan Handle is $2 less than the above, or $24.70.

For further information address George Asmus, 897 West Madison street, Chicago.

America.

Gladiolus America has been reaching this market in considerable quantity in the last ten days. E. C. Amling says that it easily commands double the price of Augusta, which is possibly the next best selling variety. He has sold practically all the America at 8 cents each, while some of the common sorts have been unsalable at any price and Augusta has made 3 cents to 4 cents. He says the buyers at first complained of the price of America, but that those who tried it are now asking for more than he is able to supply, indicating that the public likes it first-rate.

The Wittbold Picnic.

The George Wittbold Co. entertained its employees at Edgebrook August 3, the picnic celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the business, which was established in 1857, at the location on Buckingham place, where the headquarters now is.

After fifty years of uninterrupted success there were more than eighty employees at the picnic, with their families, a total attendance of more than 300. The annual picnic day is the only day in the year when one cannot do business with the Wittbold Co.

normal, 3.15 inches, as against 3.68 inches as an average. There were only three clear days, nineteen partly cloudy and nine cloudy. It was a month of great humidity.

Who Is It?

A daily paper at Aurora printed the following August 1: "Representatives of a large Chicago floral company have visited this city during the past few days in search of a site for large greenhouses in the vicinity of this city. They visited a number of sites and returned to Chicago to report to the officials."

Various Notes.

Seitz & Nordell, 2923 Evanston avenue, being unable to get the lease renewed for their present site, have purchased a tract of ground on the opposite side of the street and will there begin at once the erection of a modern and complete range of houses. The newly purchased lots include 75x150 feet on the northeast corner of Evanston and Glenlake avenues, and 42½x180 feet on Glenlake avenue. A store will be built on the corner, with a palm house, 25x53 feet, extending northward from it on Evanston avenue. On Glenlake avenue, running eastward from the store, will be two houses, 19x119 and 19x99, for general stock, and at the rear of these will be a boiler-room, coal-room, stable, wagon-room and work-room. It is intended that all these buildings shall be completed before winter and part of the material is already on the ground. The framework will be constructed of cypress, which will be furnished by the John C. Moninger Co. The plans, as drawn, include two more greenhouses, which will be built as needed.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

We have about the same story to tell: Business is dull. The only redeeming feature is the remarkably cool weather we have been having. The retailers, when not busy with funeral work, are putting in their spare time making alterations and preparations for the fall trade. The wholesalers and greenhouse men, too, are making quite extensive alterations, so as to be through in time to make the trip to attend the S. A. F. convention.

Stock coming in at the four wholesale houses is of summer quality and anything fancy is out of the question. Roses are scarce, hardly enough coming in to supply one quarter of the demand. Carnations, too, are short of the needs of the retailers. Asters are becoming plentiful in all colors and cheap in price. These are selling fairly well, but the consignments are so heavy that the second grade is left over. Gladioli are too many for the demand, although the light colors are selling well. Hardy hydrangeas are coming in for a good demand. There are plenty of smilax, ferns and asparagus in the market, with good demand.

Various Notes.

Arthur Zirkman, representing M. Rice & Co., spent a day here on his way home from the coast. He reports a big trade in the western states.

Julius Koenig is now employed by the park department and is stationed at the Forest park greenhouses.

The Apple Growers' Congress will hold its annual meeting here next week, at the Southern hotel. The members have been invited to attend the Shaw banquet on the night of August 14.

W. Hibbert, of the Hibbert Floral Co., De Sota, in company with his son, Russell, spent Monday here.

Hugo Gross, of Kirkwood, has in course of erection six new houses which will soon be finished and in which carnations and violets will be grown. Mr. Gross has one of the largest places in Kirkwood.

Mrs. J. H. Kahrs, wife of the head of the floral department of Grimm & Gortley, on Cass avenue, died August 3, while visiting at Buffalo, N. Y. The funeral took place on Tuesday.

Miss Tillie Meinhardt is visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Vesey, at Fort Wayne, Ind., who recently celebrated their silver wedding. They will together attend the convention at Philadelphia.

Alex Siegel and his family returned last week from a vacation trip among the northern lakes. He reports grand fishing.

The Foster Floral Co. has moved to the new location, 909 Olive street, combining both stores into one.

F. W. Bruening is building two large houses at his Columbia, Ill., place, from which he is cutting a fine lot of outdoor stock, especially hardy hydrangeas.

Charles Juengel is building two new houses at his South Fourteenth street place. Robert Thompson is building them. This, he says, will change his plans of attending the convention.

Ulrich Arnold, for the last twelve years gardener at O'Fallon park, died last week from hemorrhage. His son, who was sick in the next room, died the next day, from the shock. A double funeral was held August 3. Both were well known in the trade.

George Schriefer, of C. A. Kuehn's, is taking a two weeks' vacation and will put in all the time playing ball with the city league teams.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society filed articles for incorporation last week. In the application it is stated that their aim is to conduct flower shows, to hold state exhibitions, establish a bureau or information, and provide a lecture course on horticulture. The incorporators mentioned in the petition are Edward Malinckradt, president; Otto G. Koenig, secretary; F. C. Weber, Theo. Miller, A. Meyer, Jr., Fred H. Meinhardt, Henry Young, A. Jablonsky and Emil Schray.

William C. Young, state vice-president of the S. A. F., had a busy week of it sending out circulars to all the florists in the state inviting them to attend the convention and if possible travel with the St. Louis delegation. The berths in the special car are filling up rapidly.

G. D. Hoog, of Kirkwood, has bought the greenhouses formerly operated by A. Berdan. Mr. Hoog will grow lily of the valley for this market. He also expects by next season to add new houses for carnations and violets. Mr. Berdan, who is one of the oldest florists in Kirkwood, will retire. J. J. B.

HORNELLVILLE, N. Y.—W. A. Wettlin is entirely remodeling his store.

PEKIN, ILL.—Geo. A. Kuhl has purchased and removed to his greenhouses the boiler that was formerly in use at the Pekin waterworks.

The Market.

Business continues good for this time of the year. Flowers are not plentiful and the demand is such that it uses up about everything that comes in. There are some few exceptions, though, of which the gladiolus is a good example. This flower has been selling poorly so far this season. It is true that the quality of the blooms coming in is not of the best, but they ought to sell better than they do. The retailers say that they can not sell them, as the public does not want them, and so they are bought only to fill out on the window display. It is to be expected that the later varieties will prove to be more profitable to the growers, as the quality is much better. In fact, the man who has gladioli late in the season is usually the one who makes out well on them. Carnations are hard to find and roses sell out on sight. Asters are now coming in fine style and they are selling well. Some of the mid-season varieties are in and are of good quality.

The Florists' Outing.

The florists' annual outing was held August 1, to the enjoyment of some 300 persons, young and old. The day turned out to be a most beautiful one and D. Rusconi and Henry Schwarz are to be congratulated. The ball game furnished a great deal of sport, as it was hotly contested from start to finish and was altogether a good game. The teams were captained by Harry Baer and Al Grey. Harry Baer's team won by a narrow margin. George Murphy and "Tuts" Grey were umpires and they had a rather lively time of it. In the bowling contest for men, Mr. Kirkpatrick was first, with 175; Charles Critchell, second, with 171, and James Allan third, with 150. The ladies' bowling contest was won by Mrs. Charles Pfeiffer, with a score of 124. The crowd left the grove at 9 p. m. by a special train, and all expressed themselves as having had a thoroughly pleasant time.

Various Notes.

The trustees of the Flower Market let the contract this week for the painting of the outside of the building. It will be painted a stone color with dark red trimmings, which ought to give it a good appearance. Considerable repairing also had to be done, but now the market will be in first-class shape again.

I have just learned of the sudden death from heart disease of our old friend and tradesman, George F. Brehmer, of Chillicothe, O. Mr. Brehmer was one of the whole-souled sort of men and he had a host of friends in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Gillett and daughter left August 6 for a three weeks' outing and fishing trip in Michigan. They will spend the greater portion of their time in Manistee, Mich..

Max Rudolph leaves shortly for a vacation trip to Snow Islands, where he expects to be joined later by William Murphy.

William Gardener is spending a two weeks' vacation with his folks in London, Canada.

Thomas Windram is busy making repairs and building two large houses, which will be planted to carnations.

Saturday, August 10, is the regular monthly meeting time of the Florists' Society. This will be the first meeting at which the new elected officers will have charge and a large attendance is earnestly requested, to give them a good send-off.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Old home week, with its attendant festivities and crowds of visitors, had but slight effect on the flower market. The retail florists loaned out a good number of decorative plants, but the demand for cut flowers was rather disappointing.

Flowers are now down to a midsummer basis. The glut of roses and carnations is over and supplies of these two staples just about meet requirements. Outside of Kaiserin and Carnot, roses are now of poor quality. Carnations, if anything, are selling rather better. A few outdoor-grown ones appeared this week, of fair quality. Sweet peas continue plentiful, but are of rather uncertain value. Asters are coming in much more abundantly and of good quality. Quite a few outdoor gladioli are arriving, but selling only moderately well. Lily of the valley and lilies each sell rather slowly and the trade for green stock of various kinds is quiet.

Exhibition.

Owing to the intensely hot and dry weather, there was a smaller exhibition than usual at Horticultural hall, August 3. For best display of annuals, Mrs. E. M. Gill was the only exhibitor and was awarded first prize for a fine table. For twelve spikes perennial phloxes, prizes went to T. C. Thurlow & Co., G. F. Pratt and Blue Hill Nurseries. The quality was hardly up to the average. W. W. Rawson & Co. filled a large table with an extensive collection of sweet peas, including many new varieties. They also had a splendid lot of cactus dahlias, hollyhocks, Nicotiana affinis, nasturtiums and other seasonable flowers. Blue Hill Nurseries had large displays of perennial phlox and herbaceous plants. Gypsophila paniculata flore pleno filled several vases and showed up finely. T. C. Thurlow & Co. had a large collection of perennial phloxes.

The next prize exhibition occurs August 17. Asters, gladioli and phloxes are special features. This will be the last Saturday show of the season.

Various Notes.

Quite a little convention talk is heard. Messrs. Stewart, Farquhar, E. L. Pierce, Elliott and others are working hard to secure a good delegation and we think Boston will make an excellent showing at Philadelphia.

A good many out-of-town florists visited us last week to partake of Boston's old home week attractions. It was a strenuous week, and Vice-President Fairbanks' wish that it might last a month instead of a week is hardly echoed by business men.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. are doing a good summer business and are making active preparation for a heavy fall trade.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will have a field day at W. H. Wyman's Bay State Nurseries, North Abington, August 31, and with W. W. Rawson & Co., at Marblehead, September 21.

Welch Bros.' fine new store, on Devonshire street, was prettily decorated for old home week and many out-of-town members of the craft called. The firm is doing an excellent summer trade.

W. W. Rawson & Co. are having an active demand for many of the newer sweet peas as a result of their recent field day.

Carnation growers are busy housing their stock. In some cases plants are smaller than usual, owing to the hot, dry weather, but on the whole they are up to the average.

F. W. Fletcher, of Auburndale, is trying Hedychium coronarium in benches for cut flowers, also gardenias and eucharis.

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Finlayson are planning to take in the Philadelphia convention.

A. H. Hews & Co. report an active season for flower pots, with a heavy fall trade starting in.

A good rain fall August 4 helped to relieve the drought, which was growing quite serious in this section.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Conditions have materially changed since last week. The quantity of flowers coming into the market is larger, the demand about the same. Prices have receded slightly. Asters are particularly fine and plentiful. Gladioli are also excellent. There is a good supply and a fair demand for them. Roses are selling well, Beauties being scarce. Valley is also in demand. Adiantum and galax leaves continue to sell well. This is the situation in brief, with the stronger features accentuated.

Club Meeting.

Fully 100 were present at the club meeting August 6. Six of the nine competitors for the Craig Amerpohlii prizes appeared, with three plants each. All were excellent. The judges awarded first prize to William Robertson, gardener to John W. Pepper; second to William Kleinheinz, gardener to P. A. B. Widener; third to Thomas Long, gardener to George W. Childs Drexel.

Convention committees reported. George Redles gave a good, practical talk on native and house plants, which was well received. Then President Pennock introduced ex-Mayor Smith, who, in his inimitably funny way, presented the prizes. Speeches were made by Robert Craig, John Westcott, Daniel Farson and others. A. M. Campbell, P. J. Lynch, William Wunder and H. T. Dumont sang. Speeches, songs, music and a well served supper were thoroughly enjoyed by the members, who were indebted for this admirably arranged entertainment to William P. Craig.

adverse weather, had been behind hand on March 1, finally almost equaled last season's figures. This was due to the cool spring, to a good demand, and to care. The founder of the business, whose portrait appears in this issue, is chairman of the hotel committee for the convention and doing everything possible to see that everyone is provided with just the accommodations he wants.

Convention Topics.

The approach of the opening of the convention finds the preparations going steadily on. In many instances, they are nearing completion. Superintendent Rust reports that the entries for the exhibition in Horticultural Hall are coming in satisfactorily. Much space has been engaged; there is still some to be had.

The report that the Knights of Pythias might fill the hotels to the exclusion of delegates to our convention is unfounded. It is true that the Knights have their convention the same week that we do, but it is improbable that their forces will be half as large as ours, and the hotels of this city are quite capable of taking care of much larger numbers of visitors than will be present at the two conventions combined.

Mayor Reyburn has graciously accepted the invitation to open the first session of the convention, and has promised favorable recommendation to the request that the Court of Honor be lit on one evening in honor of our visitors. Governor Stuart has not yet been heard from. In naming the committee in charge of this matter last week, the name of H. Bayersdorfer was omitted through error.

ed pleasure at the vim and energy that they were throwing into their work. He said he believed that everything would be in excellent shape before the doors of the convention were opened on August 20.

Progress has been made in the arrangements of the entertainment committee. William Graham, chairman of the bowling committee, has engaged the Terminal alleys for the inter-city team match, while other alleys have been secured for the ladies' match and the individual bowling contest. Arrangements have been made for at least one baseball match during the convention. Edward J. Fancourt has written to Boston and to Chicago, notable baseball centers, asking each city whether they can place a strictly florists' baseball team in the field. Albert Swan has been chosen manager of the Philadelphia team, and some fifteen or more candidates for places on the team are practicing for the game or games. If both Boston and Chicago accept, it is probable that one game will be arranged for Thursday afternoon, the other for Friday. The Philadelphia team will be in uniforms and it is hoped the others will also.

An error has crept into the preliminary program sent out from the secretary's office. The ladies' outing, arranged for Thursday, August 22, at Willow Grove park, is erroneously scheduled therein for Friday, August 23, the date of the general outing at Belmont Mansion in Fairmount park.

The statement that Ernest Hemming will deliver an address before the convention appears to be an error.

A Grower of Pot Plants.

It must have been John, Edward or Howard who rang the telephone last Monday morning to say that "father" wanted to see Phil that day. Phil was so dumb that he didn't know exactly who "father" might be, until the well-known voice of Godfrey Aschmann was heard at the other end of the wire, extending cordial invitation. So Phil hurried over to 1012 Ontario street and saw Godfrey Aschmann himself and a splendid lot of araucarias, excelsa, glauca and robusta, in medium sizes chiefly, with a few large ones that you will see in the exhibition hall. The Boston family has evidently come to stay on Ontario street. They have Bostoniensis, Elegantissima, Pieroni, Barrowsii, Scottii, and, I rejoice to add, Whitmani, all in quantity. The pteris family was also strongly represented in 2¼-inch pots (fernery size). Primula obconica and Sinensis were coming on; so also Asparagus plumosus nanus, a good thing for the grower of small pot plants. There was a house of Kentia Belmoreana and Forsteriana, some Latania Borbonica, and Cocos Weddelliana. There are more araucarias en route. They will be followed across the water by a great army of azaleas for Christmas and Easter flowering.

A feature of interest was long frames filled with hydrangeas, Jerusalem cherries, variegated vinca, planted out for stock. Phil came away feeling, as he always does, that Mr. Aschmann has plenty of pluck and energy, and deserves credit for succeeding where many another would have failed.

Some Bayersdorfer Novelties.

H. Bayersdorfer snatched a moment from a busy day to point out two or three, the advance guard, as it were, of the novelties that have reached his big warehouse. One was a massive bowl of a new type of pottery, resembling what might be termed Flemish toneware ornamented with iron bands. The effect was to symbolize solidity. There were several styles of this new pottery; each marked the advance of the idea of something that will set off rather than vie with the plant or flower it is intended to hold. Another novelty was a vase of toneware more gigantic in size than anything seen heretofore. It was suggestive of an adornment for a Fifth avenue palace, or a Chicago skyscraper. Some beautiful fiberware baskets in dark colors exhibited artistic workmanship.

Various Notes.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. will remove to its new building at 1517 Sansom street on Wednesday, August 21.

Henry Bauer will go to Belmar, N. J., on his vacation next Saturday.

Ernest F. Hoehl, of Madison, N. J., has leased the greenhouses of Samuel J. Bunting at Fifty-eighth and Elmwood avenue. Mr. Hoehl will grow carnations, sweet peas, plumosus and adiantum.

Mrs. Anderson, mother of David Anderson and Mrs. Edward Reid, died a short time ago. The funeral took place July 30.

Edward Reid left August 5 for a two weeks' vacation in the south. Harper's Ferry was his first objective point.

Paul J. Klingsporn has returned from a two weeks' holiday in the Catskill mountains, where he enjoyed excellent trout fishing.

Harry Berger and Mrs. Berger have the sympathy of their many friends in the loss of their little child.

Miss Mary A. Baker is enjoying a holiday near Lancaster, Pa. Miss Baker is a hard worker and can rarely be induced to leave business.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., has just returned from one of the most successful trips in his history.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving new crop Beauties from George Burton and from Myers & Samtman, a welcome addition to the list of flowers coming into the market. Indications point to increased receipts by the time these notes appear.

Edward J. Fancourt is enjoying a slight breathing spell before the rush of the convention.

Bowling.

The final series of games to decide places on the team to represent this city in the bowling tournament at the Terminal alleys, August 22, was rolled on the home alleys in the Florists' Club, July 29. The score follows:

PITTSFIELD, ME.—A. J. Loder is building a greenhouse, 150 feet long.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—The El Paso County Horticultural Society will hold its annual flower show August 22 to 24.

LAURIUM, MICH.—The store of the Lutey Floral Co. was recently entered by burglars and $23 removed from the till. Entrance was effected through the transom.

DANVILLE, ILL.—The Danville Floral Co. has secured a renewal of its lease of the Admiral greenhouses for a number of years. The building will be remodelled at once.

FORT DODGE, IA.—A large force of men have been started to work erecting the Larson greenhouses, near Central avenue and Sixteenth street. The buildings were torn down some time ago to make room for the new warehouse of the International Harvester Co.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Mrs. W. A. Herbert.

Mrs. W. A. Herbert, wife of the florist, died at her home at Wellsville, O., July 26, after a fourteen weeks' illness of paralysis of the muscles. She was born in Charlestown, W. Va., in 1851, her maiden name being Julia Slaughter. She was married to Mr. Herbert February 21, 1877. She was not only a devoted wife, but also a very practical helpmate, for she gave Mr. Herbert much assistance in his business. As they had no children, her death leaves Mr. Herbert alone, both in his home and in his business.

George F. Brehmer.

George F. Brehmer, one of the best known members of the craft at Chillicothe, O., is dead. The end came suddenly, heart disease being the cause. His brother, C. F. Brehmer, will sell the greenhouses and nursery to close the estate.

W. H. Traendly.

W. H. Traendly, one of the oldest of the retail florists in New York city, died August 2, following an operation at the New York Hospital. For fifteen years he had been located at the corner of Sixth avenue and Seventeenth street and did a large business. He had been in the retail flower trade for a quarter of a century and in that time had seen a great change in the business in that metropolis. F. H. Traendly, the wholesaler, is a brother.

F. L. La France.

Fred L. La France, well known as a grower at Elmira, N. Y., died July 24. He had been in the business for a number of years and had built up a nice plant from a small beginning. He had made the carnation a specialty and when, a couple of years ago, he incorporated, he chose the name, the La France Carnation Co.

Ulrich Arnold.

Ulrich Arnold, for twelve years gardener at O'Fallon park, St. Louis, where the S. A. F. was entertained on an afternoon during 1904, died last week, and his son, who was ill at the time, passed away next day. A double funeral was held August 3.

SMILAX SHOOTS EATEN.

Can you tell us what eats all the young growth of our smilax? As soon as it makes young growth, something strips it. This seems to occur at night. What can be done? H. F. C.

Undoubtedly cutworms are the cause of the trouble referred to. These are frequently destructive to greenhouse crops, doing thousands of dollars' worth of damage annually to carnations alone. These pests only work at night. They can often be found by pulling out a little soil around the base of the plants attacked. Kill all of the dark-colored grubs you can in this way; also look over the plants at night with a lantern and gather up all the grubs you can find into a tin and destroy them. Mix up some bran or shorts with molasses and add a little Paris green or white arsenic to it. Mix it thoroughly and drop a little here and there in the rows. The cutworms will eat this and many will be poisoned. Hammond's slug shot is recommended by some as a good remedy. Dropping a little carbon bisulphide, a few drops in holes eighteen inches apart each way, when the ground is quite damp, is another safe remedy. It will not injure the plants. Fill up the holes as soon as you drop in the liquid. The fumes are powerful and be careful not to hold a lighted match or candle while dropping it in. Sterilization of the soil before planting, where it can be carried out, is the best of all remedies for these and sundry other pests which pester florists. C. W.

ADAMS, MASS.—A. J. Boothman has torn down one of his old buildings and will erect in its place a greenhouse 26x40 feet.

BACTERIOSIS OF CUCUMBERS.

The bacterial disease of cucumbers, termed by Dr. Erwin R. Smith "bacteriosis," has been seen here in summer for some years on outdoor cucumber crops, says Prof. George E. Stone, in the report of the Massachusetts Agricultural College. My attention, however, has not been called to its appearance on greenhouse crops until this year; but if the reports and descriptions of this disease are correct, it has occurred in more than one greenhouse during the year.

In only one case have we had opportunity to examine an affected crop, and this was totally destroyed during October. This crop was started in August, and, like most crops of cucumbers started in midsummer, it was affected with downy mildew (Plasmopara Cubensis). The soil in the house was of good texture for cucumbers, and well provided with horse manure and commercial fertilizers, as was evident from the vigorous growth of the plants. About the time the plants had reached a height of seven or eight feet and had set a large amount of fruit the leaves commenced to wilt, and in a few days most of the foliage collapsed, leaving only a few unaffected leaves at the top of the plant, which necessitated the removal of the entire crop. Adjacent to this greenhouse were other larger houses, which, however, were planted somewhat later, and the plants in these houses entirely escaped infection.

Bacteriosis of cucumbers has been rare, if it has occurred at all, under glass in this state. A few years ago we secured germs from an affected outdoor crop of cucumbers, and inoculated the soil in our greenhouse in which cucumbers were growing, with the result that not the slightest infection occurred in any instance. The experiment was made during the fall and winter months, which may account in part for the failure of the germs to infect the plants.

There is always risk in planting a cucumber house in August, since the downy mildew previously mentioned, and anthracnose (Colletotrichum Lagenarium) are sure to be present during August in full force; and the same probably is true to a certain extent in regard to the germs of bacteriosis. At any rate, it is a significant fact that nearly every house planted late has none of these troubles to contend with.

In the case of the bacteriosis described above we are of the opinion that the method of growing the crop had something to do with its susceptibility to infection, since the plants were in our estimation somewhat too vigorous growers, and did not possess the best texture.

We have frequently advised growers of cucumbers not to plant in August, on account of mildews, etc. There is much less risk in planting in September, and scarcely any during any time in October. If a house of cucumbers is planted in August it is necessary to ventilate freely, apply little or no water to the foliage, and keep down the moisture in

NEWPORT, R. I.

Current Comment.

After a week of comparative quiet, Newport is now as full of life and excitement as I have seen it in many a year. So far there have not been many large entertainments, with balls as side shows. These are coming, and will take place at regular intervals from the middle of next week up to the second or third week in September. Just at present dinners, large and small, are all sufficient to make things interesting for everybody.

The decorations at these dinner parties are, if anything, more choice and elaborate than in former years. There is a certain amount of rivalry connected with these functions and the table decorations are often the features chosen for the excitement of envy. Private gardeners on places where there are extensive ranges of glass are in position to grow material for decorating that causes genuine surprises for those in the habit of having their tables done in a somewhat stereotyped fashion; and some of the gardeners endeavor to guard the secret of what they intend making up with, with amusing earnestness. In a few words, the fact of the matter is this, that everyone tries to outdo everyone else in everything under the sun in Newport, and they try harder with flowers than with anything else, knowing that with them they are most likely to attain some portion of success.

It is much the same with fruit as with flowers. Every hostess does her utmost to procure the largest bunches of grapes and the largest and finest colored peaches and nectarines for dinners. Ripeness and flavor are only minor considerations. What is wanted is something to make a display, and the more sensational the display the more genuine delight will be theirs. All this refers of course to the ultra-fashionable circle. There are fortunately many others who take solid comfort and genuine pleasure in normal things, and these are the ones who are invariably the most appreciative.

Prince William, of Sweden, will be here next week and he is already booked for dinner during every night his visit lasts. The decorations at every one of the dinners to be given in honor of the royal Swede will be more than something out of the ordinary. Several florists have already been given full swing, regardless of cost, in the matter of flowers. His Princeship will be at E. J. Berwind's. Mr. Butterton, the gardener, has fifteen sashes covering a superb lot of light gloxinias, every one of which will be used along with other material at the function to be given at the Elms.

RAWSON'S HOTHOUSE CUCUMBER

As a forcing cucumber is one of the largest and most profitable crops of the Market Gardener, it is essential that the very best possible strain should be sown. With this idea in view we have made selections for the past few years from our Rawson's White Spine, which have resulted in a strain about two inches longer and a darker green in color, with a few light spines showing at blossom end. This new strain we confidently believe to be superior to any other on the market. The results we have had at our own greenhouses with the stock conclusively prove the above to be true. 1/4 oz., 35c; oz., 60c; 4 oz., $1.50; lb., $5.00.

Rawson's White Spine Cucumber, 4 oz., $1.50; lb., $4.00. Send for Market Gardeners' catalogue, listing many special strains of Radish, Lettuce, etc., for use under glass.

THE Pacific coast crop of turnip seed has panned out well this year.

LITTLE is being said about beans, the inference being that the plantings are progressing favorably.

W. J. STRAWSON, representing Strawson's, of London and Paris, industrial chemists, is in the United States to introduce their line of agricultural insecticides.

THE onion seed crop that is scattered around and making a splendid show in all manner of out of the way places will cut a considerable figure when it is known what the harvest is.

THE onion set would be a cheaper commodity if it were not for the necessity of growing it where labor and fertilizer may be had in quantity, which means the use of high-priced land.

W. W. BARNARD, Chicago, returned August 2 from Sturgeon Bay, after a ten days' inspection trip. A. H. Goodwin and Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., are back from a successful fishing trip at the Flambeau reservation in northern Wisconsin.

A BAD feature of the freak weather during the growing months this year is noticeable in many of the market garden patches. Radish that should mature for market in July went to seed when it should only have been ready to pull. In many cases beets and carrots did the same. The gardener is now aware of the fact that the seed is not to blame for this and it is a good thing for the seedsman that the fact is recognized.

COMPLAINT is being registered against some of the prominent California seed growing firms because they are quoting onion seed to the consumers at as low or lower prices than those at which they have booked orders from dealers in the same locality. It would be no more than fair to let the dealer have at least a five per cent leeway. A rebate might fix things all right, but rebates are unpopular just now. It is the same old story: Too many growers are looking for orders, and when the dealer cannot buy from them all, those that are not favored go after the consumer and land his order, even though a cut price is necessary to do it.

THE onion set harvest is well under way. At Louisville, Ky., it is practically completed and will end at Chicago within the month. The crop is a disappointment, being much shorter than expected. A short crop, however, is a natural result of the unfavorable season. The seed that was planted at the proper time underwent freezing and thawing for a week or more before it got a proper start. The seed that was planted late, although it did not get the freeze, missed the early start that is needed to make a proper onion set. Under the circumstances the crop has done well and a better price will probably make up for the losses caused by the freak weather.

LIVINGSTON SEED CO., Columbus, Ohio

WOOD, STUBBS & CO., Louisville, Ky., suffered hardly a break in their business because of the fire July 18, having secured temporary quarters across the street before the ruins of the old store had ceased smoking.

THE pickle growers are beginning to pick from the vines and no blight has yet appeared to cut the crop. It is hoped that the blight that has almost put some of them out of business during the past few years will spare the crop this year.

AT last week's fair at Lake Geneva, Wis., gardeners who had bought Bodington's seeds made such a big showing that the enterprising Harry Bunyard, who was on the spot, invested in a half-page advertisement in the local newspaper there to emphasize the popularity of his house and the extent of its business in the Newport of the west.

be able to get all the stock they need. The crop of pickling onions, unlike the set crop, has produced wonderfully well. In an unfavorable season all onions that mature early have an advantage over the kinds that take longer to mature. One thing only is against the early white onion as a set proposition, and that is, it will not keep. It is only fit for the pickle vat, and must be salted down by September at that.

ERFURT SEED TRADE.

Rain, rain and nothing but rain was the note of almost every day for months gone by. Things have been looking black in consequence, as far as our seed crops are concerned. It was well-nigh impossible to master the fast growing weeds in fields and gardens, simply because one could not get at it, so wet and muddy the ground always was. The second half of July seems to promise sunnier and better weather anyhow, and I am sure the Erfurt seedsmen want it.

There is no doubt whatever about it, many things are very backward, and it is not at all certain that all plants cultivated for seeds will properly mature them, if we should happen to get a short, bad and cold autumn.

By the way, you ought to see the lovely show which all the polyantha roses, as Crimson Rambler, Mme. Norbert Levasseur, Thalia, Euphrosyne, Leuchtstern, Aglaia, Carmine Pillar, Tausendschön, Rubin, and others are making at present in the grounds of a big firm here, which I visited July 15; it was really worth while to see it. Of course, the lasting dull and rainy weather keeps them in bloom all the longer. Please excuse this side-jump.

On the whole, all plants have been and are growing fast, but a lot of them cannot get a chance to bloom properly; in other words, to develop all their buds and flowers as they ought to, and also to form and mature their seeds. It is not rain they need, for that comes day after day, but plenty of sun and dry weather—what has been wanting for so long in field and garden.

As far as can be by all appearances be judged at present, July 24, the prospects for red cabbage are pretty fair. Radishes are good, runner and dwarf beans rather bad, peas good, Brussels sprouts bad, kohlrabi fair, but in some places inferior.

In the flowering line, pansies are good or fair, myosotis good, Bellis perennis very bad indeed, larkspur fair. Asters are rather bad; if a fine and bright autumn were to turn up, things might possibly improve with them yet. Verbenas are standing well and in some places are pretty fair. W. H.

CONNECTICUT SEED CROPS.

At this writing (July 30) seed crops in this section are growing rapidly. We need rain but, on the whole, crops are doing well and look very promising. Most varieties, however, owing to the late spring, are ten days to two weeks late. Corn, tomato, pepper and tobacco are all late but are now growing rapidly. Beet seed is looking well and is as forward as usual at this season of the year. Onion seed, also, is as well developed as usual and now promises a fine yield. Acreage, however, is less than usual. Both red and white bulbs being very scarce last spring, much less than usual were set. There is yet danger from blight and severe storms, before harvest, but it is a pleasure to report crops at present in good condition.

S. F. WILLARD.

AURICULA-EYED DIANTHUS.

C. S. Daniels & Son, of Wymondham, Norfolk, England, have a special strain of Dianthus barbatus which is attracting much attention. They call it their auricula-eyed sweet william. It has been under cultivation with them for several years and by vigorous selection they have maintained the high standard of the stock. It is purely auricula-eyed, with flowers of good size, with clear and distinct markings, while a large proportion of the flowers show the rather rare blue shade of coloring. The strain is receiving much favorable mention from the trade publications in Europe and pressed flowers which have been sent to America show that the flowers are well worth the notice accorded them.

NEBRASKA SEED CROPS.

Commenting on the situation with the Nebraska seed crops, J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb., writes as follows:

"Everything in the seed line was planted very late this spring and many first plantings were lost with the wet, cold weather. Nearly everything was replanted, but, owing to late start, is backward.

"The condition on sweet corn is about sixty per cent of last year's crop. A favorable fall will help out, but we cannot expect a normal crop.

"Cucumbers are looking well. A slight indication of rust appears after cool nights with heavy dews, but are looking quite fair as an average.

"Muskmelons will make a light crop, being two or three weeks later than they should be. Even under the most favorable conditions from now to October 1 the crop will be small.

"The acreage of flint corn is less ably enough of the good ones to supply the demand."

PAGE HAS A NOVELTY.

According to a local Des Moines newspaper, "Charles N. Page, of the Iowa Seed Co., has produced a new fruit. It is the 'strawberry-raspberry.' The berries are the size and general appearance of strawberries. The texture is like a red raspberry, but firmer. The seed-like outside is the clear red of wax. Tart and well flavored, the berries are said to be excellent for jellies and preserves. Mr. Page is just putting them on the market. The 'tree-strawberry,' as it is called, grows to about two feet in height. It is hardy and produces the first year. It is a Japanese plant. Unknown as it is here, the fruit has excited much curiosity among horticulturists. Laymen at once think the beautifully transparent red fruit are of wax."

A PERENNIAL BROCCOLI

W. Crisp, of Heathfields, near Colchester, Essex, England, has been successful in raising a perennial broccoli of the sprouting kind, and its many advantages will be apparent, as with its aid there will be no trouble in rearing plants annually after a stock has been obtained, and there will be an opportunity of cutting and coming again, as it is of a sprouting character.

An English gardeners' magazine says it is a cross between one of the single-headed varieties and a sprouting kind and illustrates a four-year-old plant, having produced heads for three years.

This is an example of a half-tone from one of our wash-drawings—gets much more detail than in a retouched photograph. Can bring out any feature, or remove defects.

Now is the Time to get to work on the cuts for your 1908 catalogue. Our artists are the best in the United States on flower and vegetable drawing. We make a specialty of Cuts For Seedsmen. All processes. Quick work if necessary. Satisfaction guaranteed.

The heads are of a light brimstone color, and the first year about four good-sized heads are produced. Sometimes there are as many as nine, but then they are much smaller, but all the heads are quite marketable. When these heads are cut the stump must be allowed to stand, and each year the shoots increase in number. If too many are produced, and are rather weakly, they should be thinned.

This variety produces its heads between the season of the ordinary broccolis and the spring cabbages, and is quite hardy, standing the frost well. After the first year the ground needs forking up between the rows, and a liberal manurial top-dressing applied, and as the winter approaches a dressing of soot is advantageous. As soon as the flower heads begin to appear a plentiful supply of liquid manure is of great assistance. It is difficult to over-feed, and it is impossible to obtain a good crop without good tillage.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

George Hollis, South Weymouth, Mass., peonies; Laxton Bros., Bedford, England, strawberry plants; the Barteldes Seed Co., Lawrence, Kan., special list of bulbs and seeds for autumn planting; the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, Ill., bulbs and seeds for fall planting; F. M. Pattington, Scipioville, N. Y., vegetable plants and seeds.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Sweet william (Dianthus barbatus) brightened the gardens and garden plots of our ancestors and now we are seeing something in it worthy of cultivation. The wonder is we did not see it long ago, but I suppose most of us thought it not high-toned enough for our time. It is a case of merit wins.

I suppose many boys now gardeners beheaded many a beautiful foxglove when unrestrained, untutored and running wild in some part of one or other of the countries across the water, with no idea that some day he would consider the object of his attack one of the most handsome biennial plants in the land of his adoption.

Meadow saffron (Colchicum autumnale) blooms late in the autumn, before the leaves develop. Their rosy or white flowers have a decidedly peculiar appearance. The leaves are not produced until the spring following. This plant is a native of the British isles, where it grows in the fields in large numbers and produces a pleasing effect during the months of August and September.

The wallflower (Cheiranthus alpinus) is another charming plant long a favorite in bygone days, but for some time forgotten, now coming to be fully appreciated on its merits. D. M.

IT DID THE WORK.

We potted up about 6,000 4-inch geraniums as a surplus over the needs of our retail trade to try the REVIEW and see if it would sell some for us. We sent in a small advertisement and in five weeks we were sold out and received orders for 1,000 more than we had. We sent money back to eight different states. When a man gets his offer into the classified department of the REVIEW he wants to be careful or his stock will all be sold and he will have nothing left but empty houses to take care of. The REVIEW is worth dollars a year, instead of $1, to any one in the business. You can use this letter if you want to; it is true. RAGAN BROS.

THE first board of directors of the Joliet Nurseries, Joliet, Ill., has been elected and the certificate of organization filed with the county recorder. The directors are: J. H. Ferriss, George A. Barr, T. C. Shepherd, Sr., T. C. Shepherd, Jr., and Fred Bennitt.

THE nurserymen were the leading influence in the meeting of the Texas State Horticultural Society at College Station, July 25. E. W. Kirkpatrick was elected president. John S. Kerr presented a resolution asking the legislature to make a number of changes in the inspection law to remedy its defects, as viewed by nurserymen, which was adopted.

TROUBLE WITH AUSTRIAN PINES.

Enclosed find two stems of Austrian pine evergreen seedlings. They are infested by a certain kind of worm or bug. Please let me know what kind of insect it is; also give remedy. The seedlings were grown in a nursery.

The shoot enclosed plainly showed the trouble to be the work of one of the pine borers, Pinus Strobus (white pine) and P. Austriaca (Austrian pine) being favorite plants for the pest. The leading shoots of the plants are those usually attacked, the borer tunneling its way down the center of the rather soft growth, causing it to die. The only remedy is to cut off and burn all affected shoots. Examine your other plants closely, and if you see any holes on the leads, either dig out the borer with a sharp-pointed instrument or inject a little carbon bisulphide into the hole and plug it up with putty. This will suffocate the borer. These borers are sometimes very destructive, and vigilance is needed to keep them in control.

PARK SUPERINTENDENTS.

Every member of the American Association of Park Superintendents should be sure to be in Toronto, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, August 15 to 17, for that enjoyable time at our annual convention that we are promised by our Toronto friends. We need your help to make our annual meeting the most profitable and most enjoyable of any we have had. Be sure to come and do the rest of us good by letting us look at you, even if you do not want to look at us. losses amounting to several hundred thousand dollars, we note the remarkable fact that thirty-seven were introduced into this country. Then we begin to realize that our crops are as seriously threatened by introduced pests as by native ones.

Experience teaches us that these introduced pests are by far the worst of all our insect foes. Owing to the similarity of plants and animals in Europe and America it is comparatively easy for most of the introduced pests to find an abundant food supply in this country, while the natural enemies that prey upon them in the east are not introduced into this country with them. Massachusetts is at present handling an appropriation of $750,000 to control the gypsy moth and brown tail moth, both introduced pests. The introduction of the Mexican cotton boll weevil into the cotton growing section of our country is another vivid example of the danger of imported pests.

The horticulturists and nurserymen have also learned the lesson from the spread of the San Jose scale over the great fruit sections since its introduction. The codling moth bores into the fruit of apple and peach, while the sweet potato borer is endangering the sweet potato industry of the south. Were we to take the time to consider them here, we could find many other examples of equal importance.

With the increase of commercial intercourse between the United States and other countries, the dangers of introducing undesirable pests increase. The West India 'peach scale' was imported into Georgia and is a serious pest. It is coming west and will soon be in Texas. The woolly aphis is well distributed in this country and we have it recorded from one locality in Texas. Are we going to check it? The codling moth is shipped into Texas from other states in apples. It is easy to see live purple scale on our lemons and oranges in the show windows and on the sidewalk displays in our cities. If we want to grow citrus fruits we must check these pests.

The Morelos orange maggot, so far as we have been able to ascertain, has not been in our borders. The pest is serious in Mexico. We are forgetting that we have state boundaries that must be closely observed. We may say, perhaps, that the Morelos orange maggot is only an orange pest. Another closely related injurious insect has the habit of working in the fruit of the peach in certain sections of Mexico in the same manner as the codling moth in apple and peach and the Morelos maggot in oranges. How soon will we enable it to be introduced into the peach orchards of Texas?

In Australia they have the apple root borer, the apple fruit beetle, the harlequin fruit bug, and the cherry borer. What protection have we against the introduction of these pests? The coast states have no control of shipments beyond their own boundaries.

A number of years ago the peach crop of Bermuda was almost destroyed every year by the Bermuda peach worm. It is already widely distributed, and it is surprising that we have not met it in Texas.

In Japan they have the apple fruit borer, also the pear fruit borer. We could mention many other examples. The question is, do we know the insects when we see them on a consignment of nursery stock? Unless we are able to detect and recognize them our nursery inspection work is defective.

Let us consider the problem before us. The San Jose scale was introduced into California about 1873 and was not discovered until it had become a serious pest. In 1893 it was discovered in the east. It was at Charlottesville, Va., where it had been introduced from nurseries in New Jersey. Subsequent investigations showed that it had been shipped to New Jersey as early as 1886 or 1887 in a consignment of Kelsey plums from the San Jose region of California. All these years, from 1886 or 1887 to 1893, these New Jersey nurseries had been selling and shipping stock to other parts of the country. Wherever infested plants were received new centers of infestation broke out, and thus the insect spread over the fruit sections of our country.

PACIFIC COAST.

SEATTLE, WASH.—L. P. Walz has opened a retail store at 1608 Second avenue. He has rose gardens in West Seattle.

CHARLES W. HOWARD, who purchased the Chase Rose Co., at Riverside, Cal., has invested in a tract at Hemet, where he will build greenhouses and plant a large quantity of roses.

NORTH YAKIMA, WASH.—Judge Kauffman has refused the application for the appointment of a receiver for the North Yakima and Wapato nurseries made in a suit for an accounting brought against Tim Kelly by J. C. Campbell, his former partner. The suit arose over the transfer by Campbell of his interest in the nurseries to the Washington Nursery Co., a rival of Kelly's in the business, and which transfer Kelly declined to recognize.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Trade continues quiet, but with some signs of a resumption in the near future. The weather has turned cooler, with more or less fog in the evening, and at no time during the day does the temperature rise to over 60 degrees. We have had a markedly cool summer, and from all points of view I am inclined to think that fact favors both the growers and the retailers. An early exodus from the near-by summer resorts can be expected, and with the opening of the schools in a short time we look for an early commencement of fall trade.

The quality of carnations offered is decidedly better than anything shown at this season heretofore. The cooler weather, which has been so long continued, accounts for the fact and the prices have remained very fair, so that the growers have fared very well. There has been so little waste from thrips or any of the summer blights that everything has been well cleaned up. With roses the same conditions prevail, and although the demand has been light, the quality of the stock has been of the highest order and the growers have little trouble in disposing of their stocks. Many houses are now being replanted and this will make a shortage for at least a month. Asters are coming in freely and the quality thus far has been excellent. They cost the stores from $1 to $3 per hundred flowers.

Various Notes.

The Holland Nursery Co., of Elmhurst, is very busy at this time making changes in the carnation houses. The stock throughout looks very well.

P. J. Meyer & Co., of Burlingame, are cutting heavily from their Enchantress houses. The quality is very good and finds a ready sale in town.

D. Raymond, of the Garden City Pottery, San Jose, is in town. Mr. Raymond's company controls fully seventy-five per cent of the output of pots on this coast. He will make an extended trip to the south in a few days.

James O'Neill, the pioneer nurseryman of Haywards, is in town for a few days. Mr. O'Neill will retire from the nursery business at the conclusion of the coming season.

Chas. D. Fellows will leave on an extended eastern trip in a few days. He will visit all the large towns and return early in October.

The aster fields in the vicinity of San Mateo present a healthy appearance at this time. Without exception, they are in better condition than that of last year or the previous years. The long continued cool weather has favored the growers tremendously. G.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

It is a source of considerable satisfaction to the horticultural interests of California that the government has recognized the importance of the fruit, vegetable, seed and allied industries. Under the auspices of the Department of Agriculture the government is maintaining special bureaus in this state for the study of the different elements affecting fruit, vegetable and seed productions.

The Bureau of Soils has headquarters at Sacramento. The soils of various sections of the state have been carefully studied and maps issued, with bulletins. The bulletin tells what each of these areas is adapted to and also gives an accurate description of the horticultural conditions in that section, covering water supply and climatic conditions. A prospective grower may take one of these pamphlets and go to any of the sections described, and if pleased with a certain section of land he can refer to the pamphlet and ascertain the constituents of the soil he is about to locate on, learning also what he can plant thereon and what results he should expect.

The Bureau of Plant Industry during the last winter has been conducting field investigations in pomology throughout southern California, and has tested the packing of oranges and lemons thoroughly, showing which fruit decays when the sound fruit, unbrushed, is packed, when it has been brushed, when it has been washed in clean water, when washed in dirty water and when fruit has been injured. Investigations as to the decay in fruit shipped under ventilation and that shipped under ice and under the new pre-cooling process, together with cold storage experiments, have furnished considerable information for orange and lemon growers.

The department has also waged a tremendous fight against the pear blight, under the direction of E. B. Waite. Three men have been working on walnut investigations, while the experiment station at Chico has employed the time of a number of men.

With the cooperation of the State Horticultural Commission, many of the former pests which afflicted the fruit growers of California have almost disappeared. E. J. Wickson, Elwood Cooper, John Isaac, E. M. Ehrhorn and others have done work in the direction of pest extermination which will mean millions of dollars to the state in years to come. This work has been recognized to such an extent that the Massachusetts state government has made an appropriation to send to California for the services of one of the commission to fight the Egyptian moth which is laying waste many of the coniferous forests of the east. Mr. Ehrhorn was appointed and has gone east to take up the battle.

New industries are being constantly added to our farms, so that the by-products are becoming more valuable than were the staple products formerly. Not only are the crops made more certain, but unquestionably the quality of the fruit in the last five years is on the whole improved fully fifty per cent. G.

ignited in the evaporating pan instead of vaporizing. This trouble was obviated by diluting the fumigant with half its amount of water, the further precaution being taken of placing a wire gauze beneath the pan and over the flame. In the case of some alcohol lamps used for this purpose the flame is apt to be too strong, especially if placed too near the evaporator. This causes the glass to break. Brass or other metal lamps are therefore preferable. Unless the lamps and wicks are of good quality and fit properly, the alcohol is apt to ooze out around the cork and burn on the sides of the lamp and thus, also, cause breakage.

As a general rule it is best not to fumigate in bright sunlight, and not when delicate foliage or flowers have globules of water on them.

The regular monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held in Good Templars' Hall, July 26, President Howard Nichols presiding. OUR EXHIBIT AT THE CONVENTION.

During convention week we will have on exhibition at Horticultural Hall a full line of samples, embracing not only the plants offered above but also many others, some of which are certain to prove useful to you in your business and with which you should become acquainted. Our entire staff of travelers will be in attendance and will be pleased to show samples or to pilot you to our Nurseries at Riverton, where a personal inspection of our many specialties will prove interesting.

AN INVITATION TO ALL.

Wednesday afternoon, August 21st, has been set aside by the entertainment committee of the Philadelphia Florists' Club for a visit to Riverton, and we extend a cordial invitation to everyone to join us on this day. A large steamboat, capable of accommodating 3000 people, has been engaged by us for the purpose. The trip up the Delaware river is a most interesting one and will enable you to gain a good idea of the vast shipping, shipbuilding and many other of Philadelphia's great riverfront industries. We will do all that we can to make this day a memorable one in the history of the Philadelphia convention and we hope that you will be able to join us.

HENRY A. DREER, Inc., 714 Chestnut St., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

NEPHROLEPIS WHITMANI

The Improved Ostrich Plume Fern

Unquestionably the most valuable of this type, superseding Piersoni, Barrowii and Elegantissima, all of which we have now discarded in favor of this variety. Not only are the pinnae on the individual fronds more finely divided, but the fronds are denser, broader and more graceful and the habit of the plant is more perfect.

2½-in. pots, 75c per doz.; $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000.
6 " 75c each.

NEPHROLEPIS AMERPOHLII

This is the latest addition to the Ostrich Plume type and is certain to prove a welcome and popular variety, holding for delicacy and gracefulness the same position among the Nephrolepis that Adiantum Gracillimum does among the Maidenhair Ferns. The pinnae are so finely divided that it reminds one of a piece of fine lace, the fronds are broad and of a depth which gives them a cushion-like appearance. It forms a beautiful specimen and is admired by everyone who sees it.

We are now booking orders for September delivery.
50c each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100; $200.00 per 1000.

NEPHROLEPIS TODEAOIDES

Todea or Filmy Fern-like Nephrolepis

This is an English introduction that has received a first-class certificate both from the Royal Horticultural Society and from the Royal Botanic Society of London, and is likely to become a most important commercial variety. While in a general way it reminds one of an exceptionally well grown plant of N. Elegantissima, it is entirely distinct from this and all others, in its strong yet compact growth and its bold heavy foliage, which is distinctly tripinnate or three times divided. Specimen plants which we now have growing are admired by everyone and we have great faith in its future.

4-inch pots, 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $40.00 per 100.
6-inch pots, $1.00 each.

NEW DOUBLE BLUE LOBELIA. Kathleen Mallard

A charming plant of English introduction, which we are now offering for the first time. It originated as a chance seedling from Lobelia Speciosa and has very large double flowers of an intense, rich, deep blue color. It is a most desirable plant, which meets with favor with everyone who sees it. We offer good plants for propagating purposes, 20c each; $2.00 per dozen; $15.00 per 100.

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE

We are now delivering first-class stock of Begonia Lorraine, 2½-inch pot-plants which have been propagated from leaf cuttings and which will make plants that are much superior to stock grown in the ordinary way. You will make no mistake in placing your orders at once; the stock is certain to please you. $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100; $140.00 per 1000.

Society of American Florists

YOU ARE INVITED TO VISIT US during convention week, any day at your convenience.

ANDORRA presents a unique Nursery—six hundred acres of hilly land, containing over three hundred and fifty acres of Ornamental Trees, Shrubs, Vines and Perennials. OUR LOCATION permits us to grow many varieties, both in deciduous and evergreen trees and shrubs, that cannot be grown to advantage north or south of this latitude, and thus adds to our extensive collection many desirable and decorative plants.

ANDORRA has been called "The Modern Landscape Nursery." The lay-out of our land, with its hills, valleys and woodland, permits the planting of trees and shrubs in natural positions, thus affording planting suggestions at every turn.

ANDORRA is easily and quickly reached from the Convention (Horticultural) Hall by the Pennsylvania Railroad from Broad St. station (at Broad and Market Sts.) to Chestnut Hill station; then by trolley, which passes the depot to the city line. Our office is one block from the trolley terminus at city line.

REMEMBER, this is a personal invitation to YOU.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Flowers are not so plentiful as a few weeks ago. Most of the growers have thrown out their old carnation plants, and just now it is between seasons for flowers. A few asters are now coming in, and these, with plenty of sweet peas, help out a good deal. Funeral work is good, calling for lots of inferior stock.

Various Notes.

R. E. Nofftz has gone to Germany for a rest. Mr. Nofftz has a nice retail store on William street.

W. G. Kroeber's greenhouses are closed.

E. Y. Pierce, on Cottage street, is building a new boiler-pit, with concrete walls. It is thirty feet long, ten feet wide and eight feet deep. He will also build a new violet house.

Wm. Livesey has installed a pneumatic water tank. This forces the water by compressed air to any desired point. A good pressure is obtained in this way.

At last we have had a good rain or two and things are looking better in consequence. W. L.

LEXINGTON, KY.

S. S. Kelley, who was head florist for a number of years at J. B. Haggin's Elmendorf farm, is making extensive preparations for starting in the florists' business at Clifton Heights, in this city. He is already engaged in the building of three greenhouses, each 20x100 feet. As soon as these are completed, he will open a store in the downtown district. Mr. Kelley will not only cater to Lexington trade, but expects to ship flowers to the different towns throughout the state.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Pleasant weather and just enough work to keep them from getting lazy keeps the boys in the retail shops in a good humor and most of them have a few pleasant stories to relate of their vacation trips, as most of them have had their vacations, the last relay getting away Saturday.

In the wholesale stores things do not look so bad this week. There are more short roses, and asters have come in strong, so that there are plenty for all and a few to spare. Gladioli are more plentiful and some good hydrangeas are helping to keep up the show. Harrisii lilies are scarce and bringing a good price. Lilium roseum is abundant.

Growers are quiet these days. Most of them have their roses all in shape and are starting carnation planting. They all have one complaint—labor is scarce and it is hard to get the help just when you want it. This is keeping them back.

Various Notes.

There is considerable talk and good prospects of a large delegation attending the S. A. F. convention from here.

Henry Meischke, of Castle Shannon, is building two houses, each 20x350 feet. They are three-quarter-span houses.

William Lorch is adding a new house for carnations.

Pittsburg has added several new street stands in the last week, and if all start who are trying to locate, Fifth avenue will have a stand every fifty feet.

E. C. Ludwig, with his family, has been trying to get to the seashore for some time, but owing to the rush of business he has been compelled to put it off, but now has arranged to get away August 15.

Howard Carney, of J. B. Murdoch & Co., who is one of the crack sprinters, will compete, with his company, at the firemen's convention at Kittanning this week. They expect to carry off the prize.

George Marshall, of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., has gone to Chautauqua with a party of friends. He says he will stay away until he adds at least twenty pounds, as he has lost that much since Easter.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Things are moving slowly. Still, business has been better the last week or two and the scarcity of stock is marked.

Various Notes.

During the spell when stock fell off, W. J. Palmer & Son had an effective window display of water lilies in basins. The show attracted much attention and was admired greatly.

One of the striking features of the outdoor planting which is contrary to the rules of the florists' trade is a bed of begonias in the open sun. The bed gets no shade whatever and is just one mass of blooms.

J. R. Cloudsley is about to start on his vacation. He is to take the St. Lawrence trip.

As convention time draws near we find that a good delegation is to attend.

Asters indoors would seem to many to be a waste of space and money, but we have one instance where it proved not to be so. John Freesac, a grower of Corfu, N. Y., took possession of some houses in the early spring, and a little later, not knowing how to use the space, planted some asters, namely, Boddington's Queen of the Market and the Early White. The flowers have been in bloom two weeks now, with stems fifteen to eighteen inches long. They find ready sale and at good prices simply because there is nothing else so good. We believe this to be a money-maker if you have the room. R. A. S.

BUFFALO TO PHILADELPHIA.

Daniel B. Long calls attention to the fact that on August 16 the Pennsylvania railroad will sell tickets from Buffalo to Atlantic City and return for $10 round trip. A stop-over of ten days will be allowed at Philadelphia on the going trip, if passengers deposit their tickets with the ticket agent at Broad Street station, Philadelphia, immediately after arrival, and on return trip within 15-day limit, without depositing tickets.

As Niagara Falls excursions at cheap rates are common, Mr. Long suggests that for those who care to leave for the convention as early as August 16, this rate may be attractive.

WASHINGTON.

There is no change in business this week, but stock is somewhat improved.

F. H. Kramer is cutting a fine lot of gladioli.

Hardy hydrangeas and rudbeckias are coming in and are seen in all the windows.

Gude Bros. Co. is cutting some fine Kilmarnock roses. This firm has one of its windows filled with pans of dionaea, Venus fly traps. They attract a great deal of attention. They sell at $1 per 6-inch pan.

Otto Bauer and family have returned from down the bay. O. O.

CATLIN, ILL.—Scott Morris has his greenhouse completed and is preparing to open for business.

SHENANDOAH, IA.—O. B. Stevens has been visiting a brother at Goodland, Kan., where he has not been since 1890.

Beginning with the first year, 1895, with an importation of 100, this Spring, 1907, our importation has swollen to the enormous quantity of 6000 of the 8 best known ARAUCARIAS, Excelsa, Compacta Robusta and Glauca. Our Araucarias are so well introduced that they represent every city, county and state of America, from the Atlantic to the Pacific and as far as Cuba and Mexico. It is always my earnest desire to improve my system in buying, raising, selling and shipping our production to such an extent that it not only benefits us but so that it will yield a fair profit into the pockets of the buyers.

Now is the time to fill your empty houses and make money fast, as the plants will grow into money while you sleep.

Araucaria Excelsa, 5-in. pots, 10 to 12 inches high, 2-year old, 3 tiers, 50c each. Larger sizes 5, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 2, 3 and 4 years old, 60c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Good stock is scarce, sweet peas are about gone, carnations are scarce and of poor quality. Roses are small and off in color. Some fine gladioli are to be seen. Snapdragon is quite plentiful and goes a good ways in helping out on funeral work. Asters are becoming more plentiful and are selling at from $1 to $2 per hundred. Most of the downtown florists are complaining of dull business; only funeral work to help break the quiet spells. Some pretty work was to be seen at a large funeral last week. One design, a wreath, was made solid of double white hollyhocks and Lilium auratum, which was a credit to the artist.

Various Notes.

R. S. Brown & Son have all of their chrysanthemums planted and are growing them one flower to each plant. They are looking fine. They report that their spring trade was double any previous year's business.

Albert Barbe is taking it easy now, after a heavy spring trade. He will not attend the convention this year. It seems that the last year's heat was too much for him. W. H. H.

NEW ORLEANS.

At this time of the year in New Orleans, when planting is out of season and the sale of plants is limited, there is a business which is booming in a lively manner, and the scarcity of labor, and also the number of places newly built, makes it that much more important. It is the work in the gardens. Instead of the few gardeners who were in the business some years ago, there are hundreds now in this occupation and there is a good opening for more.

Beds of tuberose are noticed all around. It has been found one of the best flowers to fill up orders for white cut flowers during the summer.

R. Lockerbie, who had the contract for leveling and keeping the neutral ground of Canal street, has given it up. M. M. L.

Greenhouse Heating.

SOFT COAL OR SEMI-ANTHRACITE?

We have been using soft coal that costs us $3.55 per ton in the bin. We have not storage room for a season's supply, and along towards spring the price is liable to rise 50 cents or more. If we can get domestic semi-anthracite coal at $5 to $5.75 in the bin, we want to know which will be the cheaper. The soft coal is Cherokee, and the dealers say it is the cheaper. It makes a great deal of ashes and clinkers. J. W. M.

It is likely that the actual number of heat units contained in a ton of soft coal is greater than in the semi-anthracite. The cost of firing with the soft coal will be greater and there will be more ash to handle, I suspect, but you are buying heat cheaper in dollars in the soft coal. L. C. C.

HOT WATER PIPING IN KANSAS.

Will you kindly tell me how many feet of 2-inch pipe, water heat, a horizontal boiler, with twenty-three 2¼-inch flues fifty inches long, will take care of? The grate is 23x30 inches. I use gas for fuel.

Please state, also, the number of feet of 2-inch pipe, and the arrangement of flows and returns, which will be required for an even-span house, 24x84 feet, with walls five feet high; twelve feet to ridge; glass gables; three feet of glass in the south wall. Half of the north wall is boarded, and the other half of it joins another house. The house is for lettuce, in solid beds. I have a four-way manifold against the side wall, with the flow entering at the top and the return leaving at the bottom, at the other end. The water does not warm up in the two bottom pipes. Is my connection at fault? L. C. B.

The boiler in question should be able to care for about 1,000 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe.

The house 24x84 can be heated with hot water by using two 2-inch flow pipes from the boiler to the far end of the house, each returning through seven 2-inch returns. These can be arranged in manifolds on the side walls, or a part of them can be thus arranged, and the remainder, say three from each flow, or six in all, can be arranged about twenty or twenty-four inches above the surface of the bench and distributed about equal distances apart across the bed. The boiler in question is hardly large enough to put the house on a safe basis in severe weather.

If your pipes are properly graded and the flow is direct from the boiler to the manifold and not over 100 feet long, the coil should heat up throughout.

L. C. C.

PIPING IN SOUTHERN IOWA.

I am about to install a hot water heating system in my greenhouse and would like to have some information about it. My house is 17x56 feet and runs north and south. The walls are boarded and are three feet high; ten feet from floor to ridge. The door is in the center of the south end. The boiler is in a pit outside of the south end, west of the door. My boiler is a vertical, round steam boiler, 30x60 inches, with forty-three 2-inch flues. My plumber proposes to make two 3-inch outlets, one on each side near the top, and one 3-inch return inlet at the bottom, and he would run one 3-inch pipe to each side of the greenhouse and reduce them to one 2-inch flow under each side bench up to the north end, and there divide each one into five 2-inch returns and join them again into one 3-inch main return into the boiler. He would place the expansion tank at the north end, overhead, and connect to each side with a 1-inch pipe.

This plan might do at present, but I am not quite satisfied, as I intend to raise my glass eighteen inches and put in some side ventilation, and I may extend the house north twenty-five or fifty feet in a year or so. I fear I will not have enough circulation, so I have planned to give each 3-inch main two 2-inch flows and tap the boiler for a 4-inch return, carrying a 3-inch return from each return header and joining them into the 4-inch just inside the greenhouse. I would place a gate valve in each one, near where they are joined together, in order to control the flow as I please. I would also place the expansion tank inside the house, as high as possible, and connect it to the 4-inch return about twelve inches from the boiler. But my plumber tries to make me believe that I cannot control the flow with these valves and that I will have trouble. I cannot understand why my plan should not work, and would like to have the opinion of some one else before I go any farther. Which plan would be the better? The climate here, in southern Iowa, is very changeable.

P. A. M.

Your ideas are correct, but you have been planning for much more than is necessary. A single 3-inch flow will be sufficient to carry the eleven 2-inch returns which will be required to heat your house and the addition which you contemplate. The expansion tank should be connected to the main return near the boiler, which should be the same size as the opening for the flow, i. e., three inches. The gate valves can be used to throttle the flow, but it will be better to place valves in two or three of the returns, so as to cut them out of the system, than to attempt to regulate the temperature by throttling the flow. Place the expansion tank eight or ten feet above the highest point in the system, if possible.

CLAY CENTER, KAN.

A visit to Clay Center, Kan., found the florists all busy planting their mums.

Scott Brant has about 20,000 feet of glass. Everything is kept in clean shape. His carnations were in full bloom and his young roses were fine. He also had one house of cucumbers which were full of bloom and small cucumbers. Mr. Brant also raises a good many vegetables for his home trade. His tomatoes were extra fine. But he aims to go into the rooted cutting business more than ever before. His stock pelargoniums are the largest collection of different varieties that we have seen. His wife helps him a great deal, doing

Clay Center is a good shipping point for early vegetables. It is 174 miles west of Kansas City, and the early truck from the south does not reach there to compete in the supply. Therefore they get good prices and cannot produce enough to supply the demand.

Using Steam From Outside Sources...

The Simonds Improved Vacuum Steam Heating Systems allow of using exhaust or live steam from mills, electric light or pumping stations, even if such are located at quite a distance from the houses to be heated.

Also allows of smaller mains for such than other systems, as well as the reduction to the minimum of the pressure carried in such mains, which is an important factor when exhaust steam is used.

We found Charles Humfeld, the verben king, busy with funeral work. Part of the work was to be shipped out to a nearby town. Mr. Humfeld grows quite a good many Kansas double white petunias and it is profitable for design work. He grows his roses and carnations in solid benches and is well pleased with that method. He has three large houses planted in roses. One house of double petunias for stock was in fine condition. Judging from the number that he has, he will be able to supply the most of United States with rooted cuttings of these. He also plants a good many acres of sweet potatoes, which he stores under the greenhouse benches. He then sells these out at a good price during the winter. Mr. Humfeld's stock of verbenas in the field is worth seeing. Rudolf von der Ruhr is head grower and is kept busy. He is also quite an artist in design work.

Mr. Humfeld says that he could not nearly supply the demand for rooted cuttings this spring. The warm weather in March interfered a great deal. H.

The Market.

There seems to be plenty of business for the supply of good stock, roses, asters, sweet peas, and lilies being used up quite regularly. Funeral work shows up every day, more or less, with some very heavy days. Last week being rather cool helped the cut flower business generally.

Various Notes.

George W. Davis filed a petition in bankruptcy August 5, giving his debts as $2,013.87. His assets are an equity in the real estate, valued at $1,000 and claimed as exempt, and $150 worth of household goods, also exempt.

Hailstones as big as walnuts, which fell August 1, were too much for the greenhouses of A. Harvey & Son, Orion, Mich. Between 2,000 and 3,000 panes of glass were broken. Harvey & Son figure their loss at $1,000. At Highland Park, Frank Holznagel lost between 1,000 and 2,000 panes. J. B. Dinser lost close to 1,000 lights. Frank Burtenshaw also was a heavy loser. At Hamtramck the greenhouses of Al Schwartz, G. Blaess and Ferdinand Kolbe were relieved of many lights of glass.

The bowling element among Detroit florists rolled five games August 5, with Norman Sullivan high man, he reaching 232. Louis Charbot was next, with 178. Will Hielscher is coming strong. At the next workout there will be more members present.

FIGHT THE THRIPS.

Thrips, which have in recent years become such a pest in Beauty houses, will now claim our attention. As soon as the crops begin to develop, the presence of thrips becomes apparent by the buds assuming a blood red appearance and instead of nicely pointed buds we have deformed buds which look as if they had been cut off or shortened by a knife. As such a bud develops the petals will be crumpled and off color.

On the first appearance of this pest no time should be lost in effecting its eradication, as thrips increase very rapidly and if not checked will take entire possession of the house.

Fumigating lightly, frequently and persistently will in most cases keep them so much in check that the damage will be light. This insect, being practically a night feeder, leaves its shelter at sundown and any remedies, to be effective, should be applied while the pest is at work.

All buds which show signs of having been attacked should be picked off and destroyed. The benches, walks and ground under the benches should be kept clear of weeds and rubbish, as all these are only places of shelter and breeding spots for the pest.

This insect, in its perfect state, is easy to destroy, as it succumbs to very light fumes of tobacco, but the greatest trouble is that the larvæ are hard to reach. These have the habit of secreting themselves in the mulch, soil or, in fact, anywhere where the fumes cannot reach them.

Spraying the bushes after sundown with kerosene emulsion, to which should be added one-twentieth of brown sugar and one-sixtieth Paris green, will help to keep the young broods in check. There are many other preparations which are equally effective, but persistence in their application is the only means of effecting a remedy or keeping the pest within bounds.

RIBES.

RHEA REID ROSE.

The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., always has a pet, and usually scores of them. Just at present the center of the stage there is occupied by Rose Rhea Reid, which will be the firm's next introduction. In sending the photograph from which the accompanying illustration was produced, Fred Lemon wrote: "Rhea Reid, our new red rose, is showing as early and free blooming characteristics as any rose with which we are familiar, these blooms having been cut August 10, from young stock planted May 15 from 3-inch pots. The house is a beautiful sight."

CUTWORMS ON GERANIUMS.

I never knew, until this year, that geraniums had any pest to trouble them. I have a large bed on the west side of my house that the cutworms have about times eaten by cabbage worms during the latter half of August and early part of September.

Hand picking at night is one remedy, but a slow and tedious one. As the worms with you do not hide in the day time, it will pay to pick off all you can see. Mix up a mash of bran, powdered sugar and either white arsenic or Paris green and scatter around their haunts. This will poison many. Lime the ground well in the fall on any land where the pests have troubled you. C. W.

ENGLISH IVY.

There is a constantly growing demand for English ivy. All sizes of plants are marketable for one purpose or another. Now is about as good a time as any to put in as many cuttings as possible. The sooner they are put in the sooner they will root, of course, and the easier they are to root, too. There are several methods pursued in propagating ivy, but perhaps the best method at this time of the year is that of putting them in the soil ruined. They do not drop to the ground in the morning, but I find them curled up on top of the leaves. They have badly eaten the border of Salleroi as well, and they seem to stay longer than usual this year. What can I do to get rid of them? L. C. P.

Geraniums are not usually attacked by cutworms, as your plants have been. The white variegated, Mme. Salleroi, is somein coldframes, taking care to shade them for a week or more after they are in. By this method the cuttings will all be well rooted by early fall and ready for potting. Later, or even now, for that matter, cuttings may be placed in flats close together and the flats put in a shady, sheltered place outdoors or in coldframes. Ivy may also be propagated from rather long shoots by placing one or more in small pots. D. M.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Care of New Planted Stock.

After setting the plants in the bed, and watering each plant well, you will have to watch them carefully for a week or more. On your success in keeping the plants in a fresh condition will depend the quality of your early crops, and to some extent, in fact, the whole winter. Plants which are reestablished without much suffering will go right into a strong growth and the next six weeks are when the plants usually make their largest gains. If, on the other hand, the plants are allowed to wilt badly, so that they will hang in the balance for some weeks, and many are lost and much foliage is lost on those that do take hold, it will take them all this time to get to growing, and no early blooms of any consequence need be expected.

Keep the house as cool as you can and keep the atmosphere charged with moisture during the warm part of the day. Be careful not to get too much water on the soil, however, lest it become soggy and sour. Root action is always more rapid in soil which is only fairly moist, and that is what you are after at this time. As soon as the roots get a good hold your plants are established. There must be enough moisture, however, to keep the soil in good growing condition, so do not err on the other side, either.

Syringe six or eight times a day if the weather is warm. Spray high over the plants and let it come down like a mist. This can be done best with the water turned only partly on, so the volume will not be too great. Keep the walks thoroughly dampened during the day.

The most critical time usually is during the first four days after benching, and if these are very warm it will take a day or two longer. If, on the fourth day, the plants are crisp in the morning and they stiffen up nicely as soon as the sun begins to lower again in the west, you may feel sure that root action has begun and you may begin to lessen the syringing, but keep the walks dampened during the middle of the day as long as the days are warm. First let up on the syringing in the afternoon and reduce to one spraying about 9 o'clock and another right after dinner, as soon as you dare. Too much moisture on the foliage brings on the spot diseases and rust and it takes fine judgment to know where enough stops and too much begins. Stem-rot, too, delights in a humid atmosphere, and that is why it so often takes so many plants soon after housing, when but little was seen in the field.

A. F. J. BAUR.

SPRAYING FOR THRIPS.

We now employ the method of dampened tobacco stems in a pipe, as a means of destroying green and black aphids, but desire to change from this to some more up-to-date and less laborious way. Would you kindly tell us of an effective and more economical way? A. E. R.

I have for several years, and on numerous occasions, advocated the use of tobacco extracts in liquid form for destroying all such insects as tobacco fumes will destroy. While they are, perhaps, not any more economical in cost than the tobacco stems needed for fumigating, yet when taking into consideration their effectiveness, the saving on blooms, convenience, etc., the spraying method will be found to pay for itself over and over again.

Get one of the compressed air sprayers and a gallon of one of the extracts which are advertised in the REVIEW, and if you have not over 10,000 square feet of glass, and if you will spray intelligently and systematically, you will be fixed for nearly the whole season.

Begin as soon as your plants are established, which should be a few weeks after benching, and spray once each week at the strength recommended. We find that with the sprayer two gallons of the solution will be sufficient for a bed 5x250 sprayed from both sides. If found necessary, you can spray oftener, but usually once each week will be sufficient. Do not syringe too soon after the spraying. Leave it on at least a day and night, and longer will be still better. You can pick your blooms any time, just as though you had sprayed with clear water. A. F. J. B.

LEAF-SPOT.

Enclosed you will find a few leaves from my Boston Market and Enchantress carnation plants which are growing in the field. Up to about ten days ago the Boston Market were the strongest and best looking plants in the field. The disease has spread rapidly over the patch of Boston Markets and many plants are brown and every leaf covered with spots like those on the sample. Some of the Enchantress also are affected. I will not house the Boston Markets, but what can I do to prevent the disease from spreading to other varieties? C. A. M.

The leaves you send are affected with one of the common leaf-spots. This is a fungous disease and usually starts in a humid atmosphere. Excessive rains followed by hot weather frequently bring it on and, if such weather keeps up, it spreads very rapidly.

If you do not expect to use the Boston Markets I would advise you to pull them up and burn them at once, also any other plants that are too far gone to recover properly. Then spray the others with the Bordeaux mixture or with formaline, the latter at the rate of 400 parts of water to one part of formaline. Then, if possible, go over the plants and pick off the affected leaves and burn them. If you use formaline, spray every third day. The Bordeaux use once each week, unless it is washed off by rain. To dust the whole patch with slaked lime will help. Do not house these plants until they have entirely outgrown the disease, else you will have more trouble on account of the humid atmosphere which must be maintained for a few days after housing and which suits the disease exactly. This same disease played havoc with the Lawson tribe in some localities last season, many growers losing practically all they had of those varieties. Cultivate frequently to help keep the plants growing as strongly as possible. They will then be able to throw off the disease better.

A. F. J. B.

VARIETIES FOR TEXAS.

Please give me the names of a few carnations that will stand the highest temperature in the climate of Texas. We have most trouble fighting against heat and dry winds. Crane was the only one that gave me any results this year and I hope to be able to increase the list, as I shall endeavor to make the conditions more favorable another season. H. B. B.

It comes as a surprise to me to hear that G. H. Crane has stood the heat of your climate better than other varieties you have tried. In our climate it is one of the poorest warm weather carnations we have. The blooms do not keep and the plants begin to die off as soon as hot weather sets in, so that for a number of years we have used it for fall and midwinter blooming entirely. So in view of this fact I would hesitate to recommend any varieties as being especially adapted to your climate. Varieties which seem to stand warm weather best here are: The Queen, The Belle, Flora Hill, Indiana Market, Candace, Wm. Scott, Ethel Crocker, Flambeau, Victory, H. Fenn, Fair Maid and Beatrice. Enchantress and its sports hold up well in growing and blooming, but the blooms keep only fairly well in hot weather as compared with the others mentioned. I would advise you to try as many varieties as you can get hold of, in limited quantities, as it is quite evident that their behavior up here is no criterion of what they will do in your climate.

A. F. J. B.

CYCLAMENS.

I have a number of small cyclamen plants from seed sown last fall. Many of them have just the small corm or bulb protruding from the ground. They are in 2-inch pots. Will you kindly inform me if these corms will eventually grow into plants? W. F. B.

If your cyclamens were sown last fall and are now only in 2-inch pots they will not, I am afraid, give satisfactory returns the coming winter. Such plants, had they been well cared for and potted along as needed, should now be in 5-inch or 6-inch pots. We are afraid the little plants must have been badly starved and potbound. To give them a chance, shift into 4-inch pots without delay. If the balls are badly matted with roots, scratch and loosen the roots somewhat with a pointed stick. For compost, turfy loam, leaf-mold and dry cow manure will be found suitable. Use a good dash of sand in the soil, to keep it porous. After potting, place in a coldframe and cover with shaded sash. Water moderately until the plants root freely around the sides of the pots, then more liberally. Keep air on night and day and throw off the sashes altogether on cloudy days. Leave in the frames until October, then place in a cool, light and airy greenhouse.

C. W.

THE CONVENTION SETTING.

It seldom is possible to so well illustrate the scene of the S. A. F. convention as is done in the photograph, looking down Broad street, reproduced on this page. The picture shows that Philadelphia affords conveniences for such a great meeting as we shall have this year second to no city in the United States. No more convenient a situation could be had if the committee of arrangements had the making of the facilities, instead of being compelled to choose of those at hand the ones best adapted to their purpose.

At the left of the picture is Horticultural hall, where the trade exhibition is to be staged on two floors, with the headquarters of the Philadelphia Florists' Club in the same building, where open house will be kept convention week. The hall is one of the most attractive which has ever been available for an S. A. F. trades' display. It is the scene of the Philadelphia flower shows and a building in which a more attractive display can be arranged than is possible in such rough structures as have been used at many previous conventions.

Across the street is Broad Street theater, where the business sessions will be held. Here we have a building designed for the comfort of large numbers of people. The acoustic properties are excellent and everyone should be able to hear every word of the convention discussions. This is a feature which will be especially appreciated, for it not infrequently has been the case that few could hear.

Next beyond the Broad Street theater is the Hotel Walton, where many of the members will be quartered. The rate here is from $1.50 per day upward, European plan. Across the street, the tall building on the left is the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, which is one of the world's famous establishments. It is comparatively new and will compare favorably with any other hotel in the United States. The rate here is from $2.50 per day upward, European plan. There is a roof garden on top of the hotel. One of the attractive features is the retail store of Habermehl's Sons, in the hotel, which will appeal to retailers.

The Public building stands at the end of the street, with William Penn overlooking the city. The Pennsylvania depot is at one side and a couple of squares in the other direction is the Reading terminal, so that every visitor easily may locate himself by the Public building.

Philadelphia is making large preparations for the entertainment of the convention and the present indications are that the attendance will be the greatest in the history of the Society of American Florists.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Cyclamens.

The time for sowing seeds of cyclamen has again arrived. Cyclamen, when even moderately well grown, is among the best selling of flowering plants. From the comparative ease of culture and the fact that the blooming period is quite protracted, good plants being on sale from Christmas to Easter, and the added fact that they make splendid house plants, we have several reasons why florists cannot make any mistake in growing a good batch.

As seen on the markets they are not, as a rule, creditable. More plants are seen in 4-inch and 5-inch pots than in any other size. While fine plants can be flowered in 5-inch pots, a size larger makes a better market plant.

Procure the new crop of seed, which should now be in the hands of seed merchants. This can be had either in mixtures or separate colors. Do not buy cheap mixed seeds if you cater to critical customers. It will be better to buy so many dozens, hundreds or thousands of pure white, salmon, soft pink, red and any other salable colors. There are now many fine strains obtainable. The C. giganteum or grandiflorum types have magnificent flowers, a vast advance on the ordinary C. Persicum. Do not haggle over the price of cyclamen or any other choice greenhouse seeds. The best will always be found the cheapest and most profitable in the end.

Flats three inches in depth, or pans, may be used to sow the seeds in. If any considerable quantity is to be sown, flats are the best. Put in good drainage and over this place a little rough turf or moss. Half each screened turfy loam and leaf-mold, with some powdered charcoal and sand added, makes a suitable compost. Smooth the surface over with a light piece of board before sowing the seeds.

The general plan is to sow the seeds quite thickly, transplant to other flats when large enough to handle, and later pot on. A better method is to sow the seeds one and a half to two inches apart each way, singly, and allow them to grow into nice little plants in the flats before shifting them. Try this plan and see if it does not prove more satisfactory than the one generally adopted. The seeds need little covering. A fine dusting of sand over them will be found sufficient. Water through a fine sprinkler after sowing, and place the flats in the propagating house or any structure where they can be well up to the light but shaded from the sun. Cover the flats with newspapers, or hang some scrim cloth over them until the little seedlings germinate. Then, if possible, place on a shelf well up to the light, but shaded. A moderately warm and moist of the plants becoming potbound before you can bench them. There is no need to keep the plants in the greenhouse. They will do better in a frame and when well rooted may be stood outdoors for some six weeks, taking care to water them properly. If you have a bench unoccupied you can plant out at any time and thus get in a nice crop for Christmas and January trade.

Do not make the mistake of planting on a low side bench. Snapdragons need not less than four to five feet of headroom if first-class spikes are wanted.

Cuttings may still be put in where plants are desired for spring blooming. Take cuttings from the plants carrying the finest spikes. The advantage of cuttings over seedlings is that the former are absolutely true to color and strain, while the latter usually come considerably mixed. A good plan is to sow seeds in February or March. Set the seedlings outdoors in May, mark the most desirable plants and cut these back a short time before you need a crop of nice cuttings. In the case of antirrhinums, pure white, pink, bright red and yellow prove the most popular market colors. Mixed bunches will be found hard to sell unless the grower has a retail trade, where he can utilize them. Antirrhinums make a good succession crop to chrysanthemums. If the soil in which the latter have been grown is mixed with a coating of well-are now arriving and no time should be lost in getting in a good batch, as recommended in these notes in a late issue.

Lilium candidum will arrive in a few days. More of it should be grown, but it wants radically different treatment from Harrisii or longiflorum. Do not plant it in a greenhouse bench or failure will result. A successful method is to put three bulbs in a 7-inch or 8-inch pot, according to the size of the bulbs. Let the soil come an inch or more over the tops of the bulbs. After potting, stand outdoors in full sun, soak with water and keep fairly moist all the time. The bulbs will commence to root and make leaves at once. Keep outdoors until quite sharp frost threatens to break the pots, then stand in a coldframe and house about January 1, if you want your flowers for Easter. A temperature of 50 degrees at night is ample. Bulbs may be grown in boxes or singly in 6-inch pots, but larger pots will give better results.

Planting Evergreens.

From the middle of August to the end of the month is a suitable time to move evergreens. There is an increasing tendency to somewhat relieve the spring pressure by doing as much of the work as possible in August. The work should not be attempted in dry weather unless there are facilities for soaking the balls before lifting and after planting. As frequently happens, however, we get damp, cloudy spells in August, which are ideal for the replanting of evergreens. In digging evergreens every effort should be made to get as nice a ball of earth as possible. Cover the ball with burlap to prevent drying out at the root. Of course, it pays to prepare a hole of generous size for all trees and shrubs, substituting loam for gravel, sand or stones. It is better not to use manure, but if any is mixed in the compost it should be old and well decayed.

After the shrubs or trees are placed in their new locations and a little soil has been carefully tramped about the roots, soak well with the hose or by pouring several pails of water in. Let this settle before filling in the balance of the soil. Be sure to tramp firmly. Loosely planted stock will never thrive. Mulch with old manure, straw or leaves. After planting leave a saucer-like cavity so that you can give them additional soakings if droughty conditions prevail, and a hosing overhead each evening will be beneficial.

Evergreens can be made to grow without so much fussing, but attention to these little details will make success much more certain. In addition to pines, spruces, arbor vitas, retinosporas and other coniferous evergreens, kalmias, rhododendrons, Azalea amœna and andromedas do as well transplanted at this season as in spring if they are not kept long out of the ground.

Brief Reminders.

Poinsettia cuttings should not be put in after this date. Keep rooted stock potted on, finish any bench planting and get a good supply of serviceable sized pans filled. Grow the plants cool for some time yet.

Show pelargoniums should all be on their sides resting and can be pruned back towards the end of the month and restarted.

Keep plying the hoe constantly among growing crops. Notice how fast they grow after stirring among and how they atmosphere will assist germination. Later cooler and airier conditions are essential.

Antirrhinums.

Cuttings of antirrhinum put in late in June or early in July should now be growing nicely in 2½-inch or 3-inch pots. Keep them pinched and give a further shift with 4-inch pots if there is danger rotted manure or fertilizer it will grow splendid snapdragons.

Early Bulbous Plants.

stand still where the ground is hard^a and baked.

Do not forget a batch of myosotis cuttings to plant around the edges of the benches.

Take advantage of any leisure time you may have to glaze and paint cold-frame sashes requiring an overhauling.

Give more light to Cœlogyne cristata as the growths develop. Syringe the plants on warm afternoons.

Gardenias now grow rapidly in the benches. Be sure to keep them pinched and you will have bushy, stocky plants.

Keep transplanting biennials and perennials as weather permits, choosing cloudy days for the operation.

If you have not sown pansies, do so without delay, also any other biennials or perennials you may have overlooked.

Look closely after Smilax and Asparagus plumosus and see that they do not become entangled. They should all be provided with strings by this time.

Pot on the little Lorraine begonias, pinch out the tops of the leading shoots and remove all flowers.

Keep late tuberous begonias and gloxinias in frames under lath shadings. Give air both top and bottom. They will keep better there than in the greenhouses.

Do not allow primroses to become pot-bound. They should go into their flowering pots as soon as possible.

THE ART OF POT MAKING.

We publish in this number of the REVIEW reproductions of three photographs, one illustrating the ancient, two the modern art of pot making. The first picture shows the method of making pots as practiced in 1851, when the Whilldin Pottery Co. started in business—the slow and laborious pedal working machine, capable of turning out twelve dozen 6-inch pots in a day, and no more. The second and third pictures show the machines now in use, the former for all sizes up to 8-inch, the latter for sizes from 9-inch to 18-inch.

These machines are capable of producing eighteen pots to the minute. Or, putting it comparatively, a man today with one of these modern machines can produce just seventy-five times as many pots of a given size, say 6-inch, in ten working hours as he could produce with the machine of fifty years ago.

I am indebted for these pictures and these data to J. G. Whilldin, treasurer of the Whilldin Pottery Co., originator of the standard flower pot, which was adopted by the Society of American Florists in convention at New York in 1888, and one of our most successful business men.

BUD ON DUCKHAM.

What is the proper bud to take on William Duckham chrysanthemum?

F. B.

The proper bud to take on William Duckham is a crown bud taken from August 18 to 30. If a bud is taken much earlier the flower is short-petaled and the individual petals are green at the tips, making the flower unattractive. If the later bud is taken, in September, while the petal is large and of good color, the flower comes hollow in the center and in some cases drops its petals. If F. B. gets it as near as possible to the dates I have mentioned he will have little cause to complain of the size or finish of this variety.

Flats three inches in depth, or pans, may be used to sow the seeds in. If any considerable quantity is to be sown, flats are the best. Put in good drainage and over this place a little rough turf or moss. Half each screened turfy loam and leaf-mold, with some powdered charcoal and sand added, makes a suitable compost. Smooth the surface over with a light piece of board before sowing the seeds.

The general plan is to sow the seeds quite thickly, transplant to other flats when large enough to handle, and later pot on. A better method is to sow the seeds one and a half to two inches apart each way, singly, and allow them to grow into nice little plants in the flats before shifting them. Try this plan and see if it does not prove more satisfactory than the one generally adopted. The seeds need little covering. A fine dusting of sand over them will be found sufficient. Water through a fine sprinkler after sowing, and place the flats in the propagating house or any structure where they can be well up to the light but shaded from the sun. Cover the flats with newspapers, or hang some serimp cloth over them until the little seedlings germinate. Then, if possible, place on a shelf well up to the light, but shaded. A moderately warm and moist of the plants becoming potbound before you can bench them. There is no need to keep the plants in the greenhouse. They will do better in a frame and when well rooted may be stood outdoors for some six weeks, taking care to water them properly. If you have a bench unoccupied you can plant out at any time and thus get in a nice crop for Christmas and January trade.

Do not make the mistake of planting on a low side bench. Snapdragons need not less than four to five feet of headroom if first-class spikes are wanted.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The feature of the market this week is the immense quantity of asters, chiefly of the poorer grade. These are difficult to sell and prices have declined, the number in the select class being comparatively small. Gladioli are also on the downward track. The white and lighter shades are in demand, but the red and dull shades are difficult to sell at any price. Beauties are in demand, with the supply increasing and improving in quality. Kaiserins are good, and sell fairly well. The market for greens was active for several days lately.

Indications point to an increase in the finer grades of asters during the next few days. It should have been mentioned that rose-pink and lavender and purple are the best sellers, with fancy whites, while poor white and the dull, or old-rose, shade of pink do not sell. Valley has been scarce. Harrisii are fine.

Novelties.

Through the courtesy of the members of the firm of M. Rice & Co. REVIEW readers will be given an advance view of some of the novelties already in their warehouse. Mr. Rice first pointed out a new raffia scarf, a pleasing and simple thing, admirably adapted for creating a background where a light effect is desired. These scarfs are perhaps 2x12 feet, flowered, and come both in the natural raffia color, which is preferable, and a deep green. Next came the natural willow tree stumps, an original idea of Mr. Eschner, and one that has found favor with a few of our bright retailers who have already seen it. These stumps are from two feet six inches to six feet in height, the larger sizes having a greater number of pockets than the smaller. These pockets are each fitted with a fiber vase. No two stumps are exactly alike, the pockets coming in different positions in stumps of the same size. The special use for which the stumps were intended is to decorate a store window, but they may be used advantageously in any form of decoration.

An asparagus wreath, of natural asparagus, prepared to insure durability, has already met favor. It is a pretty thing, capable of effective combinations for funeral or Christmas work. The skeleton leaves, resembling a delicate mosquito netting, so popular last season with a few of the leading retailers, are given a prominent place, Mr. Rice feeling that this is a thing of merit that should be generally used. One of our leading retailers, Robert Kift, used these leaves last season on top of a box of flowers, and added a delicate touch by writing with a brush dipped in gilt over the surface of the green veined leaf the words "Bon voyage" or "Compliments of the season" or some other appropriate sentiment.

A new line of oak wood vases, handsome and substantial, ornamented with iron bars, was shown, and then Mr. Eschner took up the role of cicerone. His first novelty was an improved plant mat, Porto Rican style, less clumsy than the standard mats so long in use. These come in all the flower colors, and seem a decided acquisition. The wedding gates, kneeling stools, and electroliers, with their many-colored silken shades, are a more and more important product of the factory. Reed is the principal ingredient in the gates and stools, with their high backs, or arm-rests. Many of our first-class florists always keep a set or two of these on hand.

The natural effects in plant baskets occupy a large space in the show-room. Natural willow, natural rush, and chip are seen in a great variety of pretty shapes. Cocoa fiber baskets are another novelty that will surely win admirers. These natural effects are not confined to the plant baskets, they are also in those intended for cut flowers. Some choice ferneries of, I think, birch, are ornamented with snake effects in gilt, rather odd and pleasing. Another style is a fernery made of rattan, very tough, the natural and deep tones of color being strictly adhered to, to the exclusion of anything bright that might detract from the color of the flowers or foliage.

An improved Westphalian waterproof crepe paper is lighter than the standard and more easily adapted to medium and small size plants. In ribbons, M. Rice & Co. are even more largely interested than in the past. They have this year added a Richmond rose shade, exactly matching the new and popular variety of that name. They have had for some time an American Beauty shade, at one time so difficult to secure. A novelty in this department is the waterproof maline, invaluable because of its ability to withstand moisture. It can be had in widths from six and one-half to thirteen and one-half inches, in all the flower shades of color.

These few notes, gathered from an immense selection of florists' supplies, may be of interest to some of our readers, and will at least convey the idea that M. Rice & Co. are wide awake and fully abreast, or perhaps a little ahead of the times.

Final Convention Arrangements.

The chairmen of the various committees report everything in readiness for next week's convention. Members are earnestly requested to register promptly at the secretary's office, as much of the success of the arrangements for the earlier entertainments will depend on knowing exactly how many may be expected. A large gathering at each and every entertainment is the aim.

William Graham, chairman of the bowling committee, has secured the Olympic alleys, Arch street below Broad, for the ladies' and the men's individual bowling matches. There are twelve alleys at this place. Mr. Graham is particularly anxious for entries of teams to consist of five ladies each in the ladies' team matches. The intercity team match will, as stated before, be rolled on the Terminal alleys, on Filbert street below Thirteenth. Both these events take place on Thursday afternoon, probably at 1 o'clock.

A. B. Cartledge, chairman of the shooting committee, is out of town, but all arrangements for a good shoot, with handsome trophies, are perfected.

Charles D. Ball, chairman of the ladies' committee, has secured open cars, which will be in readiness at Broad and Locust streets, at 1 o'clock sharp on Thursday afternoon, to take the ladies on their outing to Willow Grove, where they will first go to the music pavilion, and then to the Lakeside cafe for luncheon. Mr. Ball particularly desires to call the attention of the ladies to the fact that his arrangements with the Rapid Transit company make it necessary that the cars be moved between 1 p. m. and 1:15 p. m.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co., who will give a luncheon on their roof garden from 12 until 4 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, have made elaborate preparations for the pleasure and comfort of their guests. An imported orchestra has been engaged, and a capable caterer will be in attendance, with a large staff of assistants.

The Henry A. Dreer Co. especially wishes to impress on its guests, who will leave Arch street wharf by the steamer Columbia at 1 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, that the trip is purely one of pleasure, their only desire being that all should enjoy an afternoon on the river and at Riverton, where so much for the advancement of horticulture has been accomplished. A luncheon will be served at Riverton, and the party brought back to the city by 7 o'clock, which will be in good time for the evening session of the convention.

The final arrangements for the outing at Belmont mansion could not be learned from Chairman Fred Hahman when this report was written. Suffice it to say that no effort will be spared to make the day pleasant.

I have omitted to state that the president's reception, to be held at Broad Street theater on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, will be a handsome affair. Robert Craig is chairman of the committee, and that his geniality will make everyone feel at home goes without saying.

Go West, Young Man.

You have probably all heard this old adage, and as so many of our hustling western florists will disregard it next Monday, and come east, there is no danger of creating a stampede by announcing that W. E. McKissick, one of our prominent wholesalers, has completed arrangements for removing his establishment to 1619 and 1621 Ranstead street, Philadelphia, November 1. Mr. McKissick will occupy the ground floors of these two buildings, amounting to a space of about 30x51 feet. The ceiling, being over twelve and a half feet high, will enable him to put in a gallery, to be used for supplies and requisites. He will have a fine cold storage room, to be supplied with air from a large machine in a nearby cold storage plant. Mr. McKissick is a hard worker, and has thoroughly earned the success which he has achieved.

Some More Bayersdorfer Novelties.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have had even their large resources taxed by the incoming tide of cases this week. The Menomonic brought many large cases; the Palazoe eighty-seven, the Sandam 202. Despite this tremendous onrush of work in receiving and storing imports, both partners contrived to find a few minutes to show Phil the latest novelties, just unpacked, now briefly described for the benefit of REVIEW readers. Mr. Berkowitz pointed out an immense rattan root urn, fully eight feet high, and five feet spread, a superb thing, which he suggested would look well at the national flower show filled with long-stemmed American Beauties; some exquisite silver ferneries and jardinières with enameled bowls to match. These were in various chaste designs, some with open panel, beautifully ornamented, others solid silver with grape-vine edging, others of oxidized silver. The ferneries were of a medium size that would grace the handsomest table. The jardinières were suitable for a cocos or small fern. Mr. Berkowitz also showed a new style of two-toned pleated waterproof crepe paper with one color, or shade of color, on each side of the paper, so that when folded back the shading or change of color could be seen, thus enabling the user to show as much or as little of the second color as he might desire. Mr. Bayersdorfer then pointed out a row of exquisite bouquet holders, rainbow effects in satin, silk and lace, some French metallic wreaths of wonderfully perfect workmanship, the flowers so well done that they appeared to be growing, one of pansies and violets being exceptionally well done. Mr. Bayersdorfer also spoke with pride of the handiness of his employees who had refitted the show-room during the summer.

Holmesburg.

A prominent retailer once assured me that when he wanted quality in his palms he went to Charles D. Ball. Probably other prominent retailers may go to other favorite growers, when bent on like quests. Be that as it may, the words of my friend the retailer recurred after a trip through Charles D. Ball's place one morning recently. The houses are clean. That is saying a good deal, as any grower, of no matter what kind of plants, will admit at this season of rapid growth. Dirt is almost synonymous with growth. To keep a place clean requires great care and vigilance. I was especially impressed with the systematic, orderly way in which the plants were arranged. I do not mean by that that I am accustomed to houses where things are higgledy-piggledy—quite the contrary. But among the growers who have clean places, where order and system are apparent, I would place Charles D. Ball in the front rank.

He has a fine lot of kentias, the 10-inch size in Forsteriana being conspicuous. Every size of both varieties is strongly in evidence, particularly the smaller ones. Latania Borbonica in 8-inch and 6-inch pots were very prettily done. Also Areca lutescens in 6-inch pots. Among ferns, Cibotium Schiedel in 8-inch were preferred. Quite a lot of small ferns in half a dozen of the best varieties, including Cyrtomium falcatum, Pteris Mayii, and P. Wilsoni, are grown for offering in 3-inch, when ferns become scarce in the winter. A variety of other choice foliage plants, such as Pandanus Veitchii, Draçena Sanderiana, Cocos Weddelliana, etc., complete a general assortment. Mr. Ball's residence is beautified by two perfect beds of crotons, and a specimen hydrangea on which one of the employees endeavored to count the blooms. He reached 150, then desisted, being uncertain whether his task was or was not completed.

Some choice ferneries of, I think, birch, are ornamented with snake effects in gilt, rather odd and pleasing. Another style is a fernery made of rattan, very tough, the natural and deep tones of color being strictly adhered to, to the exclusion of anything bright that might detract from the color of the flowers or foliage.

An improved Westphalian waterproof crepe paper is lighter than the standard and more easily adapted to medium and small size plants. In ribbons, M. Rice & Co. are even more largely interested than in the past. They have this year added a Richmond rose shade, exactly matching the new and popular variety of that name. They have had for some time an American Beauty shade, at one time so difficult to secure. A novelty in this department is the waterproof maline, invaluable because of its ability to withstand moisture. It can be had in widths from six and one-half to thirteen and one-half inches, in all the flower shades of color.

These few notes, gathered from an immense selection of florists' supplies, may be of interest to some of our readers, and will at least convey the idea that M. Rice & Co. are wide awake and fully abreast, or perhaps a little ahead of the times.

Final Convention Arrangements.

The chairmen of the various committees report everything in readiness for next week's convention. Members are earnestly requested to register promptly at the secretary's office, as much of the success of the arrangements for the earlier entertainments will depend on knowing exactly how many may be expected. A large gathering at each and every entertainment is the aim.

William Graham, chairman of the bowling committee, has secured the Olympic alleys, Arch street below Broad, for the ladies' and the men's individual bowling matches. There are twelve alleys at this place. Mr. Graham is particularly anxious for entries of teams to consist of five ladies each in the ladies' team matches. The intercity team match will, as stated before, be rolled on the Terminal alleys, on Filbert street below Thirteenth. Both these events take place on Thursday afternoon, probably at 1 o'clock.

A. B. Cartledge, chairman of the shooting committee, is out of town, but all arrangements for a good shoot, with handsome trophies, are perfected.

Charles D. Ball, chairman of the ladies' committee, has secured open cars, which will be in readiness at Broad and Locust streets, at 1 o'clock sharp on Thursday afternoon, to take the ladies on their outing to Willow Grove, where they will first go to the music pavilion, and then to the Lakeside cafe for luncheon. Mr. Ball particularly desires to call the attention of the ladies to the fact that his arrangements with the Rapid Transit company make it necessary that the cars be moved between 1 p. m. and 1:15 p. m.

House of Araucarias at Godfrey Aschmann's, Philadelphia.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co., who will give a luncheon on their roof garden from 12 until 4 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, have made elaborate preparations for the pleasure and comfort of their guests. An imported orchestra has been engaged, and a capable caterer will be in attendance, with a large staff of assistants.

The Henry A. Dreer Co. especially wishes to impress on its guests, who will leave Arch street wharf by the steamer Columbia at 1 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, that the trip is purely one of pleasure, their only desire being that all should enjoy an afternoon on the river and at Riverton, where so much for the advancement of horticulture has been accomplished. A luncheon will be served at Riverton, and the party brought back to the city by 7 o'clock, which will be in good time for the evening session of the convention.

The final arrangements for the outing at Belmont mansion could not be learned from Chairman Fred Hahman when this report was written. Suffice it to say that no effort will be spared to make the day pleasant.

I have omitted to state that the president's reception, to be held at Broad Street theater on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, will be a handsome affair. Robert Craig is chairman of the committee, and that his geniality will make every one feel at home goes without saying.

Go West, Young Man.

You have probably all heard this old adage, and as so many of our hustling western florists will disregard it next Monday, and come east, there is no danger of creating a stampede by announcing that W. E. McKissick, one of our prominent wholesalers, has completed arrangements for removing his establishment to 1619 and 1621 Ransstead street, Philadelphia, November 1. Mr. McKissick will occupy the ground floors of these two buildings, amounting to a space of about 30x51 feet. The ceiling, being over twelve and a half feet high, will enable him to put in a gallery, to be used for supplies and requisites. He will have a fine cold storage room, to be supplied with air from a large machine in a nearby cold storage plant. Mr. McKissick is a hard worker, and has thoroughly earned the success which he has achieved.

Some More Bayersdorfer Novelties.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have had even their large resources taxed by the incoming tide of cases this week. The Menomonic brought many large cases, the Palazoe eighty-seven, the Sandam 202. Despite this tremendous onrush of work in receiving and storing imports, both partners contrived to find a few minutes to show Phil the latest novelties, just unpacked, now briefly described for the benefit of REVIEW readers. Mr. Berkowitz pointed out an immense rattan root urn, fully eight feet high, and five feet spread, a superb thing, which he suggested would look well at the national flower show filled with long-stemmed American Beauties; some exquisite silver ferneries and jardinières with enameled bowls to match. These were in various chaste designs, some with open panel, beautifully ornamented, others solid silver with grape-vine edging, others of oxidized silver. The ferneries were of a medium size that would grace the handsomest table. The jardinières were suitable for a cocos or small fern. Mr. Berkowitz also showed a new style of two-toned pleated waterproof crepe paper with one color, or shade of color, on each side of the paper, so that when folded back the shading or change of color could be seen, thus enabling the user to show as much or as little of the second color as he might desire. Mr. Bayersdorfer then pointed out a row of exquisite bouquet holders, rainbow effects in satin, silk and lace, some French metallic wreaths of wonderfully perfect workmanship, the flowers so well done that they appeared to be growing, one of pansies and violets being exceptionally well done. Mr. Bayersdorfer also spoke with pride of the handiness of his employees who had refitted the show-room during the summer.

Holmesburg.

A prominent retailer once assured me that when he wanted quality in his palms he went to Charles D. Ball. Probably other prominent retailers may go to other favorite growers, when bent on like quests. Be that as it may, the words of my friend the retailer recurred after a trip through Charles D. Ball's place one morning recently. The houses are clean. That is saying a good deal, as any grower, of no matter what kind of plants, will admit at this season of rapid growth. Dirt is almost synonymous with growth. To keep a place clean requires great care and vigilance. I was especially impressed with the systematic, orderly way in which the plants were arranged. I do not mean by that that I am accustomed to houses where things are higgledy-piggledy—quite the contrary. But among the growers who have clean places, where order and system are apparent, I would place Charles D. Ball in the front rank.

He has a fine lot of kentias, the 10-inch size in Forsteriana being conspicuous. Every size of both varieties is strongly in evidence, particularly the smaller ones. Latania Borbonica in 8-inch and 6-inch pots were very prettily done. Also Areca lutescens in 6-inch pots. Among ferns, Cibotium Schiedei in 8-inch were preferred. Quite a lot of small ferns in half a dozen of the best varieties, including Cyrtomium falcatum, Pteris Mayii, and P. Wilsoni, are grown for offering in 3-inch, when ferns become scarce in the winter. A variety of other choice foliage plants, such as Pandanus Veitchii, Draena Sanderiana, Cocos Weddelliana, etc., complete a general assortment. Mr. Ball's residence is beautified by two perfect beds of crotons, and a specimen hydrangea on which one of the employees endeavored to count the blooms. He reached 150, then desisted, being uncertain whether his task was or was not completed.

Various Notes.

Joseph Heacock left for British Columbia Saturday evening, August 10, to ascertain the fate of his second son, Edward Heacock, who was upset in the Columbia river while canoeing with a companion some days ago. The companion succeeded in getting safely ashore, but young Heacock has not been heard from. The sympathy of all florists will go out to Mr. Heacock and his family in their distress.

Myers & Samtman are increasing their shipments of Beauties to the Leo Nielsen Co. The addition of these new crop flowers is a great help at this season.

Howard M. Earle, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., reports favorably so far on the crops, excepting corn. Mr. Earle says that the trial grounds at Fordhook are open to visitors at all times.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. is completing the changes which give them 500 additional square feet of space in their salesroom, an improved cold storage plant more economically run than the old one, an additional cellar for galax and fern leaves, and more office space. The use of Indurine, the cold water paint on the walls, has pleased Mr. Pennock.

Fred J. Michell, the genial treasurer of the Henry F. Michell Co., has gotten up an attractive convention souvenir in the shape of a score-card, which assures poned until some time in September, owing to the delay in the completion of their new building.

J. K. Allen, of New York, was here a few days. He visited Hillside and North Wales.

A local daily states that H. M. Hughes, gardener at the Norristown Insane Asylum, has an Agave Victoria regina (sic) in bloom, the flower stalk being of great length. Among the distinguished people who saw this rarity were Edwin Lonsdale, of Girard College, and William Kleinheinz, of Lynnwood Hall.

A letter from Ocean City, N. J., says that many Philadelphia florists were detained there last week. The wind died out during a yacht race Saturday afternoon, August 3, and the boats were in danger of drifting out to sea. Rescuers hauled the J. Liddon Pennock, last year's champion, to safety. Among its crew was Samuel S. Pennock, president of the Philadelphia Florists' Club.

Answers to Correspondents.

Review readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia, to Phil, in care of ature of 60 degrees under the benches, being placed on the table and given more air when the flower spikes are well drawn up.

No. 83.—Should later forced bulbs of the same varieties be treated in the same way?

Ans.—Yes, excepting that where left outside after severe frost they require more protection. It is better to place the boxes in a frost-proof shed, using slats between the layers. PHIL.

PEAT AS A POTTING SOIL.

I have a lot of peat that seems to be good. What proportion should I use with good loam of rather heavy clay for potting soil? L. C. P.

Peat is excellent for many plants, but is not suitable at all for some. I cannot recommend its use for bedding plants or soft-wooded plants, loam and leaf-mold being preferable. For ferns, palms and many ornamental greenhouse plants it can be used in the proportion of two parts loam to one of peat. In the case of ferns, many sorts will grow splendidly in peat, leaf-mold and sand. Hard-wooded plants, such as azaleas, rhododendrons, ericas, acacias, etc., do well in a peaty soil. Many growers use nothing else but peat and sand, but I would suggest equal mixtures of loam and peat, which will give you a nice compost. Much depends on the character of the peat. If soft and crumbly, a small proportion of it could be used for nearly any plant. If rough and fibrous, it will be especially good for hard-wooded plants, and, with the finer particles screened out, will do for orchids. Peat is not so rich a soil as fibrous loam for the general run of pot plants. A little experimenting will teach you what plants thrive best in it. C. W.

HEN MANURE AND ITS VALUE.

A bushel of grain fed to a hen would give no more nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash in the shape of manure than a bushel of grain fed to a pig, says a writer in a European gardeners' magazine. The manure from the pig, however, taking the liquid and solid excrement together, contains eighty-two per cent water, while that from the hen contains only fifty-six per cent water. Moreover, hens pick up worms and insects, and their food in such case would contain more nitrogen than the usual food of pigs, and the manure would be correspondingly richer in nitrogen. Hence it happens that 100 pounds of dry hen manure would usually be richer in plant food than 100 pounds of dry pig manure. But feed pigs on peas, and hens on grain, and the dry pig manure would then be much richer in nitrogen, and hence in plant food, than the dry hen manure.

The value of the manure, other things being equal, depends on the food, and not on the animal. One hundred pounds of dry hen manure is equal in value of plant food to half a ton of cow dung with straw, but the hen manure would act much more rapidly than the cow manure. The nitrogen being obtained from richer and more digestible food is in a much more active and available condition than the nitrogen in the cow manure.

A ton of horse manure contains about nine pounds of nitrogen, a ton of cow manure about six pounds, a ton of sheep manure eleven pounds, a ton of pig you that you will get the winning score by using Michell seeds.

J. and I. F. Leonard, of Iona, N. J., have fifteen acres planted in gladioli. Their stock is handled by Berger Bros.

Early shipments of Lilium Harrisii are already in and out. These bulbs are said to be the finest Bermuda-grown lilies which have been received for some seasons. Early Roman hyacinths, Paper White narcissi, freesias, and callas, have also arrived. This information comes through J. A. Smith, of the Henry F. Michell Co.

Alex B. Scott is enjoying an outing at Lake Placid in the Adirondacks.

The date of removal for the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., which was given in this column as August 21, has been post-any of the leading seed or commission houses. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

No. 82.—How should Roman hyacinths and Paper White narcissi be treated for early forcing?

Ans.—Place the bulbs in shallow boxes of soil that are from three to five inches deep. The former will do for Romans, the latter is better for Paper Whites. Use rich soil, covering the bulbs lightly. Place the boxes outside, preferably on slats. Water thoroughly and cover with light litter, after the second or third watering. The early bulbs may be brought into the greenhouse about October 25, provided they are well rooted. They can be forced easily in a temper-manure twelve pounds, and a ton of fresh hen manure about thirty-two pounds of nitrogen.

In regard to potash and phosphoric acid the hen manure would be twice as rich in potash as horse droppings, eight times as rich as cow manure, five times as rich as sheep droppings, and three times as rich as pig dung. While in the proportion of phosphoric acid, hen manure would be four times as rich as horse droppings, ten times as rich as cow manure, five times as rich as sheep droppings, and four times as rich as solid pig dung. We have to remember that with most farm animals the liquid manure is far richer in plant food than is the solid excrement, while in the manure of the hen, the solid and liquid excrement are in combination, which accounts for the high value of hen manure; it is quite equal in value to many of the lower grade guanos.

Hen manure should be carefully preserved in a dry shed, so as to be kept free from rain; mix a little dry soil or sand when breaking up, pass through a quarter-inch mesh sieve, and sow broadcast.

CALLA BULBLETS.

I have about 2,000 calla bulblets from $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch to $\frac{5}{8}$ -inch in diameter and about an inch long. I was wondering if they would bloom this winter if they were planted on the bench now. Could not some of the brother florists enlighten me on this subject? Any information will be greatly appreciated. C. S.

Probably some of the largest of the bulblets would bloom a little the coming winter if placed in benches, but at the low price for which blooming bulbs can be procured it will hardly pay you to bother with them. I would suggest planting some of the strongest in boxes six inches deep, which have been well supplied with drainage. These will make fine flowering bulbs another season. Or place a number in 8-inch or 10-inch pots. You will get some flowers from these next winter, but not of the size or quality that bigger bulbs will produce. C. W.

"If your business is not worth advertising, advertise it for sale."

DETROIT wants the S. A. F. convention in 1908 and Cincinnati has spoken for it in 1909. They are splendid convention cities.

THE Alaska daisy, one of Luther Burbank's "creations," has been adopted as the official flower of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition at Seattle in 1909.

Results bring advertising.
The REVIEW brings results.

TURN a little fire heat into the rose houses on the cool nights following these hot days, and keep the ventilators open, if you would avoid mildew.

THE manufacturers of pipe and heating specialties find their facilities taxed to the utmost this season. Better not procrastinate in the matter of placing orders.

AN English grower has been given judgment for damages sustained because the street in front of his place was paved with creosoted blocks, the fumes of which injured his stock.

PALM seeds have sold well, Kentia Belmoreana especially so, but the state of affairs with the palm growers indicates that it will be a couple of years at least before there is stock enough to affect prices.

THE proposition to change the name of the S. A. F. and O. H., to Society of American Horticulture, will afford those who feel that the society should be strictly a trade body a chance to divest the old name of its caudal appendage.

IN the last few years the convention bowling tournament has not been the 'rah-rah time it once was; but with five good teams, from Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, New York and Flatbush as a starter, this year's contest should develop some old-time enthusiasm.

THE indications are that the annual autumn pressure to move Boston ferns will this year be greater than ever. But the heavy supplies in autumn always have been taken by the public by the time spring has arrived. The trouble is in autumn everyone wants to sell the summer's crop of ferns to get house-room for other stock.

ALEXANDER DICKSON & SONS, Ltd., of Newtownards, Ireland, who are known as the raisers of at least two of our profitable forcing roses, and as the raisers of a number of promising candidates, have brought an action in British courts of law to restrain another family of Alexander Dicksons from using their own name as the title for a business at Dundrum, Ireland. They ask that anyone using the name Dickson be required to take reasonable precautions to clearly distinguish the business from that of the plaintiff.

PROPOSED CHANGE OF NAME.

One of the interesting propositions to be brought up at the coming Philadelphia convention will be a report from the committee appointed to consider the desirabilities of changing the name of the Society of American Florists. I understand the committee has voted to recommend a change of title to the Society of American Horticulture, a substitution of the letter H for the letter F. While there is certain to be much opposition to any change of name, there is no question but that the time has come when some such departure is necessary if the society is to broaden its policy sufficiently to take in private gardeners, wealthy amateurs and others connected with the various branches of horticulture who now take practically no interest in the S. A. F. and its doings.

The coming convention is to decide whether the society is to continue as in the past, as practically a bona fide trade organization, or if it shall become a recognized center of horticultural interests. It is universally agreed that the addition of the "Ornamental Horticulturists" tail caused much ridicule and did the society no good. It is equally certain that the mere adoption of a new title will not immediately put the S. A. F. on Easy street numerically and financially. The popular opinion of conventions rightly or wrongly is that they are annual good times, where a little business and much pleasure may be derived by the attendants.

I think the conventions of late years have been conducted on a higher plane, with more practical business and less buffoonery. It is generally agreed, however, that the membership grows painfully slowly. Many florists are interested in the doings of the special bodies, like the carnation, rose and peony societies, much more than in the S. A. F. If the latter society is to hold its position as a leader in horticultural progress, this must be changed and some connecting link joined with the various other societies.

If the S. A. F. votes to retain its present title, it virtually means that it is to remain a trade organization and some other society will in the near future fill the center of the horticultural stage. Much hard work must necessarily follow a mere change of title before the S. A. H., or whatever new name may be chosen, is recognized as the main trunk of the horticultural tree. A new title will, however, prove that the society is in earnest in desiring to cover a broader field and will induce many thoughtful men to support it who now hold aloof.

Members voting on the proposed change should bear in mind that their votes may mean either that the S. A. F. remains as it now is, a mere branch of the tree horticultural, or that by a bold forward move it can fill the center of the stage and become the main trunk. Progress should be the order of the day, therefore let every thoughtful member who goes to Philadelphia support the proposed change. W. N. CRAIG.

KANSAS CITY.

Kansas City will have both a flower show and a horse show this fall. They will be two of the many strong features of the interstate fair and exposition which opens at Elm Ridge September 23 and continues to October 5.

Arthur Newell is superintendent of the flower show and floricultural exhibits at the interstate fair. Quarters will be provided for a large display of cut flowers and plants of all kinds, and some of the Kansas City florists have arranged already to make large displays of flowers and plants.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The wire strike has paralyzed the market. In summer the retail trade is so erratic that not many of the outside buyers have regular orders in this market. Instead, it is their practice to wire for their daily requirements. As there has been no telegraph service since August 9, the outside orders have been much curtailed. The telegraph company is able to transmit a number of messages, but has no delivery facilities in Chicago, where the messenger boys are on strike, and consequently after the telegrams reach the main office here they are mailed to the addressee. Buyers are advised that instead of telegraphing they should place 10 cents extra postage on letters and write across the face, "For special delivery." Such orders will go through much quicker than those wired under existing conditions.

There is little, if any, increase in the supply of stock. Beauties, which constitute the item most in demand, are possibly a little more abundant than a week ago and quality is somewhat improved. They are selling well at prices entirely satisfactory to the growers. Of other roses, Kaiserin is the best seller, with Richmond second. Killarney also does well and Kate Moulton, though with short stems, sells briskly. The Mrs. Field rose also goes well. Brides and Maids yet leave much to be desired.

The absence of carnations is making a market for asters, which are sold in large quantities, but at cheap prices. Some strictly fancy asters do fairly well, but the majority are disposed of in cheap lots.

There are considerable quantities of auratum lilies, which are not moving any too rapidly. Easter lilies are not as abundant as they have been and are bringing better prices. Rubrums seem about over. Gladioli are received in increasing thousands. Some of the finest sell for $4 to $5 per hundred, with America making higher prices, but the bulk of the stock sells for from $1 to $2 per hundred, and there is some waste. Dahlias have made their appearance. Water lilies are abundant, cheap and useful for show windows. The flurry in valley was of short duration. Green goods are abundant.

Chicago to Philadelphia.

The Chicago Florists' Club, and the visitors who can join them either at Chicago or on the way, plan to use the following route, Pennsylvania railroad:

Leave Chicago, Sunday, August 18, at 3:15 p. m.; arrive Philadelphia, Monday at 6:10 p. m. The fare, including trip to New York City, is $26.70 for the round trip. These tickets are good for thirty days. On them we are entitled to ten days' stop over in Philadelphia, after which the one using this ticket must go to New York and have the ticket vised there and certified to by C. A. Thorley, 1173 Broadway, a member of the New York Merchants' Association.

Delegates can then return, if they desire, via Washington, where they may stop over ten days, making a side trip to Norfolk, or they can return direct to their destination in the west.

Delayed members who cannot take the above train can leave Chicago at 10:05 a. m., Monday, August 19, via Pan Handle and arrive at Philadelphia at 12:17, Tuesday noon. Fare by the Pan Handle is $2 less than the above, or $24.70.

For further information address George Asmus, 897 West Madison street, or J. C. Vaughan, 84 Randolph street, Chicago.

Various Notes.

E. C. Amling says that the wire strike serves to show what he has long pointed out—the superiority of the long distance telephone for ordering stock. In most cases the cost is not greater than where a telegram requires an answer and the buyer has the advantage of knowing that his wants are fully understood.

A straggling bunch of peonies still is occasionally seen. There is no sale for the fag end of the crop still in storage.

Mrs. James Hartshorne, of Joliet, called on some of her friends in the market August 10.

A. L. Vaughan, of Vaughan & Sperry, reports growers largely turning to commercial fertilizers because of the difficulty of getting manure.

George Reinberg is rapidly finishing building nine short houses at the north end of his range next to Rose Hill cemetery.

L. Baumann & Co. report a big sale for imported mosses and say the price has been advanced materially by the milliners adopting this material.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Summer conditions still prevail. Judging from reports of the large retailers, business is very quiet in everything except funeral work, of which there seems to have been plenty last week, and one can see from the buyers at the commission houses that all the lighter shades in everything are bought up and the colored stock is generally dumped.

The roses that are coming in are poor, especially Bride and Maid. Some good Kaiserin and Carnot were seen last Monday morning from Miss Bell Miller, of Springfield, Ill. Good long Beauties are out of the question. Fairly good shorts are coming, but not many. Carnations are a poor lot. Few good flowers can be found at any of our commission houses. Of the outdoor stock, tuberose, asters, gladioli, hollyhocks and hydrangeas are selling fairly well, but only the light colors. The wholesalers promise us better stock by the end of the month, from the young plants. Everything in greens is to be had. Good smilax is quite plentiful and in good demand.

Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held its regular meeting on the afternoon of August 8, at the Missouri Botanic Garden. The attendance was large. President Irish escorted us through the garden, which never looked better. This was of great interest, the greenhouse men looking over the new varieties of bedding plants. The march ended at one of the large houses, in which the meeting took place. The ladies were present during the meeting and took great interest in the proceedings.

Chairman Smith, of the trustees, reported that the expense of the picnic amounted to $103.80, which was allowed. State Vice-President W. C. Young reported a good delegation for the convention and stated that the party will leave here Sunday, August 18, at noon, over the Pennsylvania railroad in a special sleeper and arrive at Philadelphia Monday, August 19, at 3:30 p. m. The round trip fare would be $30.60 to Jamestown, with stop-over at Philadelphia, good for sixty days. Berths, $6 each way.

Applications for membership were made by Dominic Bova, a retailer, and L. M. Van Hook, a grower at Ferguson. After this the election of officers took place, in which great interest was displayed. Three candidates for the presidency were placed in nomination. W. C. Young won out. For vice-president, Geo. H. Angermueller won. A. J. Bentzen had no opposition as secretary. For treasurer, Fred H. Weber was elected. Charles Schoenle was elected a three-year-term trustee. This makes an entirely new set of officers and one that should receive the support of all the members.

W. C. Smith and James Dunford made a hot race for the club's choice for state vice-president of the S. A. F. Mr. Smith won out after five ballots were taken. The other candidate was C. A. Juengel.

President Irish announced that Paul Reper, the club's scholar at the garden, had resigned and the new applicant, Edwin Nyden, of Kenosha, Wis., was then recommended for the position and will be accepted by the trustees if his examination proves satisfactory.

The guests were served with ice cream, cake and lemonade. A photograph was taken of all present and, after another stroll through the gardens, all went home much pleased with the entertainment of the afternoon. The ladies especially voted it a most pleasant afternoon.

Various Notes.

Mrs. A. C. Canfield, of Springfield, Ill., was a caller last week, making the rounds of the commission houses.

S. B. Wertheimer, of New York, was in town last week. He is working his way to the convention city.

Robert F. Tesson, who went to Philadelphia to attend the wedding of his brother, Ernest, reports great preparations for entertaining the S. A. F. during the convention, and all who can should attend the meeting.

had great success in the plant line. He is the same one who had charge of the French exhibit at the world's fair.

The Riessen Floral Co. put in a busy week with funeral work. Mrs. Buechel reports that since the appearance of the little item in the REVIEW about her collection of leather postal cards, every mail brings one or more from friends in the trade.

W. H. Kruse reports that the newcomer in his family will not keep him from attending the convention. Mr. Kruse says his summer trade has been good.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, will not be able to attend the convention this year, as the several buildings he has in course of erection will keep him too busy at home. He is one of those who never misses a club meeting in St. Louis.

Will Smith, John Burke, Charles Schoenle and George Angermueller will spend ten days on a camping trip in the Ozark mountains.

Henry Ostertag is still booming the new coliseum, which will be opposite his place. He furnished quite a large wedding in South St. Louis last week.

John Cannon and his wife, of Webster Groves, attended the club meeting last week. He reports that work on his new houses is far enough advanced so that he and Mrs. Cannon will attend the convention.

Among the visitors who arrived in this city last Monday morning was George M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill. He left Tuesday for Chicago and from there will go to visit friends in Massachusetts and take in the convention. He will be accompanied by his two daughters and grandson.

Miss Schnell, East St. Louis, Ill., is visiting in the east and will meet the St. Louis delegation at Philadelphia next week.

State Vice-President Young reports that nearly all the berths have been taken up in our special Philadelphia sleeper. No upper berths will be sold in this car. The delegation will leave next Sunday at 1 p. m. over the Pennsylvania railroad and arrive at Philadelphia at 3:30 p. m. Monday.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The wholesalers are all going to make convention a holiday week and call it their outing. You would not blame them if you could take a trip through the wholesale section and view the tremendous residue each day and the enormous shipments coming in, especially the asters and gladioli. These latter have simply overwhelmed the market. "No business" is the verdict, and the retailers, of course, are blamed. How can there be any results when they are asleep? And how can they be awake when there are no dinners, weddings or funerals? We will have to just wait till the children come back to school and the brides grow in numbers. Society is making merry at mountain and seaside resorts and flower buyers are evidently all out of town. They have a Swedish prince at Newport who is booming things for the summer florists there.

Beauties are in demand. Prices for good stock have advanced to 30 cents. Few other roses are yet up to the standard. The new stock is short-stemmed and unsatisfactory, but every day shows improvement and the lowest prices have been seen. From now on the tendency will be upward.

No good carnations are yet arriving. Valley has asserted its value and prices have advanced. Gladioli hold firm at 50 cents to $1 the first day, but the surplus goes at any price. The best asters seldom go above 50 cents a hundred. Before we realize it the chrysanthemum will be knocking at the door.

In both wholesale and retail stores there is abundant evidence of enterprise and expectation. Improvements are proceeding daily and by September 1 everybody will be spick and span and ready. The outlook is optimistic. There will soon be enough doing to keep everybody busy.

The Convention Trip.

If there is as much humidity and heat in the four days of the convention as we had here on Monday, August 12, the S. A. F. will have "a hot time." But we are running a torrid condition of things east this week, so that we may have it cool and comfortable in Philadelphia. All arrangements are now completed for the special train. It is not necessary that one be a member of the club to get a hearty welcome on the special. The catering committee, Messrs. Nugent, Rickards and Schultz, will provide refreshments on the way and there will be enough and to spare. Remember, you can join the special at any of the

The seventy-sixth fair of the American Institute will be held at the Berkely Lyceum building, 19 to 21 West Forty-fourth street, September 24 to 26. The prize list is large and liberal and the classes include agricultural implements, cereals, farm crops, vegetables, fruits, ornamental plants and cut flowers. There is a prospect that the New York Florists' Club will make its new home in this building, and a most desirable place it will be.

The eloquence of President Nicholas, at the Greek outing last week, in his own and the English language, and his impassioned plea for harmony and character in his countrymen was a feature of the day.

Brooklyn streets and florists' stores are doing a lot of educational work just now when flowers are so abundant. Some of the florists there buy in wagon-loads and at such prices as to make possible a liberal distribution. Instead of the rubber plant, the daily papers now picture the Brooklynite going homeward in the crush with an armful of gladioli.

One of the biggest flower buyers in Brooklyn is A. Hanig, of Fulton street and Gallatin place, whose business has grown rapidly during 1907.

R. H. Cathcart, Jr., of Newburg, N. Y., president of the Yucca Gardens Co. and one of A. M. Henshaw's growers, was in the city August 12.

L. W. O. Tuthill and wife are enjoying a two weeks' vacation in the Catskills.

C. H. Totty and family are making their annual pilgrimage to Canandaigua, N. Y.

Joseph Fenrich and family are at Asbury Park, N. J. Miss Levitt, bookkeeper for Mr. Fenrich, is back from a two weeks' stay at Rockaway.

Alex McConnell will be away until the middle of October. England, Germany, France and about every place worth visiting in Europe will shake hands with the genial veteran of retaildom. His old home, on the Isle of Man, will, however, get the bulk of his attention while away.

John B. Nugent, Jr., has been flirting with the sun and waves at Long Branch and no lobster can show a better color or surer evidence of broiling.

D. S. F. Adam, of Thorburn's, is rusticated in the Catskills and C. R. Gloeckner is holidaying at Woodland Beach. M. B. Faxon, of Boston, is now one of the Thorburn forces.

Maurice Kleinman commences his vacation at Long Branch, August 17, and Henry Luehrs has returned from Hightstown, N. J. Both are employees of Myer, on Madison avenue.

C. W. Ward has returned from Michigan and Charles Schenck returned Saturday from a six weeks' tour of Europe, visiting Switzerland, France, Germany and England. Both he and Mrs. Schenck were enthusiastic over the splendid weather of the continent.

Patrick O'Mara will start his vacation this week, so as to be at the Philadelphia convention.

H. E. Froment goes to the Catskills August 17, taking in the convention as a side issue, as do many of the wholesalers who are summering out of the city.

Robert Monroe, bookkeeper for Walter Sheridan, is back from two weeks' recreation at Rockland Lake.

John Egenbrod and Myer Othile, of A. J. Guttman's force, are in the Catskills and Miss Langer, of the same house, is at Hunter, N. Y.

ANDORRA has been called "The Modern Landscape Nursery." The lay-out of our land, with its hills, valleys and woodland, permits the planting of trees and shrubs in natural positions, thus affording planting suggestions at every turn.

Railroad Rates to Annual Meeting.

Members are advised that the Trunk Line Association, in whose territory Philadelphia, our meeting place, is located, has granted a special rate of one and one-third fare on the certificate plan. This rate has been concurred in by the following associations:

New England Passenger Association, Southeastern Passenger Association, Eastern Canadian Passenger Association.

Members are advised that the Central Passenger Association will not join in the reduced rate of a fare and one-third, for the reason that a number of states have provided by law for a standard rate of 2 cents per mile, particularly in the territories covered by this association. It has, however, made a special concession to our society in that it will sell a round trip ticket to Philadelphia at the rate of 2 cents per mile each way in the territory covered by this association, and at the reduced rate of a fare and one-third through the territory covered by the Eastern, Canadian and Trunk Line Associations. This special concession is only for those attending the session and not for the general public. These special tickets can be obtained only on card orders secured direct from P. J. Hauswirth, secretary, 232 Michigan avenue, Chicago. The Central Passenger Association has furnished the secretary with these card orders, and should you reside in the territory covered by the Central Passenger Association and desire to take advantage of this special concession you MUST obtain from the secretary a card order. In writing for card orders be sure to give the number required, as each person must have one.

The secretary has received the following letter from the Western Passenger Association:

Referring to your application for reduced fares account above named occasion:

We have been requested by the individual lines interested in Western Passenger Association territory to refer you to the revised one-way or summer tourist fares in effect to Chicago and St. Louis, with the understanding that persons can repurchase from those points and take advantage of the reduced fares authorized therefrom.

In order that you may fully understand the situation, beg to state that the fares to Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis from a large part of our territory at the time of your meeting will be on the basis of 2 cents per mile; hence if persons desiring to attend same will purchase tickets to those points and then rebuy at the reduced fares authorized therefrom, they will secure practically the same reduction in the territory of this association as would be accorded by fare and one-third on the basis of the old rates. Summer tourist tickets will be on sale to Chicago and St. Louis from points west of the Missouri river and east of and including Denver and Cheyenne, Wyo., at approximately fare and one-third of the fares in effect February 1, 1907. These fares will no doubt satisfactorily take care of persons desiring to attend your meeting from the territory mentioned.

It is suggested that the delegates residing in Western Passenger Association territory be furnished with Central Passenger Association card orders, so as to enable them to take advantage of the reduced fares authorized from Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis.

The secretary recommends that members living in this territory purchase summer tourist tickets to Chicago or St. Louis, and then avail themselves of the rates mentioned above as offered by the Central Passenger Association.

Prize Essays.

Samuel Murray, of Kansas City, offers two prizes of $30 and $20 for the following essay to be presented at the convention: "Comparative Worth in the Community and to Horticulture and Floriculture."

First.—The man who is a gardener and florist, having a store and conservatory in the city, conducts a high class business; has greenhouses in the suburbs; grows plants and cut flowers for his store; has a good business in spring bedding plants and does all in his power to increase the sale of hardy perennials, setting forth to his patrons on every occasion possible the beauty and charm of the hardy flower garden plants, shrubs and trees and bulbs in the fall.

Second.—The man who conducts a store and conservatory in the city, has a high class business, but does not have any greenhouses, buying all his plants and cut flowers at wholesale.

BOWLING TROPHIES.

For the bowling contest which will take place during the S. A. F. convention at Philadelphia a long list of trophies is offered. For the team contest there are the Kasting cup, Whilldin cup, Michell trophy, silver cup for third prize; also the Philadelphia cup, for the team making highest total score in three games (excluding Philadelphia), to belong to team winning it at this tournament. A silver cup to man making high individual game; silver cup to man making high three games; silver cup to man making greatest number of strikes; silver cup to man making greatest number of spares. To each member of team making high total score, a safety razor; to each member of team making second high score, gold cuff buttons; to each member of team making third high score, scarf pin.

The individual championship medal is to be competed for by the man from each team who makes the highest total score for his team, in the three tournament games, to be bowled for at the close of the team contest.

The ladies' team prizes consist of two silver cups. For each lady on the winning team there is a silver chain purse and for each lady on the second team there is a silver belt buckle. For the lady making the highest total score in two games there is a silver cup and for the lady making the highest score in one game, silver cup.

These contests are open to teams of ladies, who must be wives or daughters of members of the S. A. F., five ladies to each team, to bowl under the name of the Florists' Club, of which the husband or father is a member.

There are also long lists of trophies for the individual matches for both men and women.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Despite the warm weather we have been having, business remains quite brisk. Several of the stores even had some wedding work last week. There is little good stock available at present. In roses Kaiserin, La Detroit and Killarney are the only good varieties on the market. The price ranges from 3 cents to 6 cents. Asters are arriving in fairly large quantities; the flowers are of good quality, but rather short-stemmed. The best asters are bringing 2 cents. Shorts for work can be had at 75 cents per hundred. Carnations are really out of the question; that is, the flowers are so small that they are not worth the mention. Achillea, phlox, sweet peas, and in fact everything available, meets with a ready sale, which is saying a good deal for this season of the year.

The Club's Annual Outing.

Something doing every minute is about the best way to put it concerning the Detroit Florists' Club's outing, held at Bois Blanc island, August 9. The weather was exactly what the doctor ordered. The bulk of the crowd took the morning boat, about 200 strong; that is, including all the children, wives and sweethearts. Dancing was immediately begun on the dancing deck and kept up until the island was reached, when there was a grand skirmish for seats. As this was about noon, the lunch boxes suffered severely; in fact, it is claimed that some of the boys ate boxes and all.

Of course the leading event on the program provided by the entertainment committee, headed by such an able person as William B. Brown, was the ball game between the east siders and the west siders. Louis Charvat, baseball player and commission house clerk, pitched for the east side and practically won the game for them. The score was 14 to 7 in favor of the east side. Herman Knope acted as umpire and it is rumored that he received all the gate receipts as his share. William Dilger was kept busy keeping tab on William Hiescher's base running. Automobiles are to be provided for the fielders next year. William B. Brown captained the winning team to victory and after the game divided the $5 cash prize donated by Frank Holznagle equally among his team. A box of cigars, donated by A. T. Bodding-ton, was presented to the west side team as a consolation prize.

After the ball game the crowd lined up near the race track, to compete for the long list of prizes. The program was run off in the following order, with the winners as mentioned:

Girls' race, 10 years or under, forty yards handicap, with one yard for each year, first, Marjorie Hedder; second, Mildred Hiescher.

Boys' race, 10 years or under, forty yards handicap, first, Charley Burrell; second, Robert Burrell.

Women's open race, forty yards, first, Miss Foy; second, Miss Hutter.

Boys' race, 16 years or under, fifty yards handicap, first, Robert Damerow; second, H. Greenan.

Open race for men, 100 yards, first, Louis Charvat; second, Andrew Ferguson, Jr.

Three-legged race, fifty yards, first, Hubert Pierce and Fred Miesel.

Quoits, first, Harry Smith; second, James Taylor.

Fat men's race, first, Fred Pantke; second, Harry Bunyard.

Running broad jump, first, Robert Watson, Jr.; second, Louis Charvat.

Tug of war, Harry Smith's team.

The afternoon boat brought another crowd of belated florists and friends, who made up for lost time by dancing at the park and on the return trip.

Club Meeting.

A well attended meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was held on the evening of August 7. Several gentlemen representing the different transportation companies were present, and before other business was begun they gave the members an assortment of rates to the convention city. These rates varied all the way from $18.85 to $26.25 for the round trip, including the Jamestown exposition. After considerable discussion, it was decided that the official route would be to Buffalo by boat on the D. & B. line and then over the Lehigh Valley to Philadelphia, returning the same way. It is a hard matter to state at present how large the Detroit turn-out will be, but a good attendance is already assured.

Prof. L. R. Taft, of the Agricultural College, asked co-operation in making the next Michigan State Fair at Detroit a success horticulturally. He spoke of the fine facilities for housing the floral exhibits in the new horticultural building and also ran over the large list of premiums offered this year, something like $400 being down for plants and about $275 for cut flower exhibits. It is the intention to have separate judges for the plant and flower exhibits; this was so decided after a suggestion by Hugo Schroeter. The fair will be held from August 29 to September 6, 1907. Plants must be in place, ready to be judged, at 10 o'clock August 30. Flowers must be in place to be judged at 10 o'clock August 31.

Two new members were elected, as follows: Albert A. Frey and Frank Walling, both unanimously.

The meeting was called to order at a late hour, and as some of the members present had to catch suburban cars, the election of officers was postponed until the meeting of September 18. In the meantime there will probably be little doing, as most of the regulars are going to Philadelphia.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Extremely hot weather has not benefited the cut flower business to any great extent. There is more stock than there is demand for, especially of lilies, roses and gladioli. Asters are a glut; the half of what come in would more than supply the demand, and as a result they are being sold for any price that is offered, and even street men turn up their noses at anything that is not fancy. The sweet peas coming in are not of much account and most of those shipped are worthless when they arrive. The result is that the wholesalers are working overtime handling junk and trying to get something out of it.

Various Notes.

I. S. Crall, of Monongahela, is building one house on the old place and will not commence building on his new place before next year, when he will give all of the present range over to vegetables.

The Zieger Co., a new concern, with capital stock $30,000, is breaking ground on Baum street for a store and conservatory 40x90 for palms and ferns, which they expect to open this fall. Ernst Zieger, who will have charge, was formerly manager for the Charles T. Siebert Co.

Randolph & McClements are putting the finishing touches on their new store and storehouses. The houses are built back from the street and along the ends of the houses they have built a fancy show house even with the store on the street, giving them 200 feet of show window, without doubt the greatest frontage as well as the handsomest of any retail store in the world. They have in a sense rebuilt the old Siebert greenhouse, which they bought, besides putting up new houses for palms, ferns and other decorative stock. This has kept them busy all summer and it will be well into the fall before they get through.

Harry Graves, of Randolph & McClements, and Miss Maud White, were married and started on their wedding trip last Monday night. After visiting Detroit and Mr. Graves' home they will go to housekeeping in the east end.

The greenhouse on the Ames estate, one of the landmarks of this city, said to have been the third greenhouse erected in the state and where the late Dexter Snow was for a long time gardener, is being taken down. The ventilators were of cast-iron, 2x3 feet, and were evidently cast for their places; they weighed about seventy pounds each. The family has a Cycas revoluta which was once the property of Washington and which has been in the possession of the present family for ninety-seven years.

BOSTON.

The Market.

There is little to report from the flower market this week. Business remains exceedingly dull, with ample arrivals of flowers for all requirements. Roses, excepting summer varieties, like Carnot and Kaiserin, are small and poor, while carnations are at their lowest ebb, no good flowers of the latter arriving. Asters are now in overabundant supply and satisfactorily fill the gap caused by lessened carnation supplies. Queen of the Earlies is the variety mostly in evidence. Values on asters have gone down the last few days. Sweet peas are holding out well, but have short stems. A nice supply of White Warden is arriving. Pink, white, lavender and dark blue are the best selling colors. Gladioli are in abundant supply. They are not, however, in good demand. The retail florists depend on these and water lilies a good deal for window decorations. There are some fine longiflorum and speciosum lilies, which only sell moderately, also a miscellaneous assortment of other seasonable flowers which only meet with an irregular sale.

Visit to Plant Estate.

A committee from the Massachusetts Horticultural Society paid a visit to the Plant estate, Groton, Conn., August 9. The estate is entered for the Hunnewell triennial premium, this being the third year it has been examined. Arriving at New London, the committee was met by Thomas W. Head, the superintendent gardener. After lunch, at the handsome new Griswold hotel, the grounds and greenhouses were inspected. Considerable improvement has been made since the visit in 1906. Additional land has been reclaimed, trenched and planted and further additions are in progress.

The flower garden presented an attractive appearance, the herbaceous perennials being especially good. Among bedding geraniums, Jacquerie was notable. It carried immense trusses and quite outclassed S. A. Nutt, which it closely resembles in color, the trusses of single flowers being, however, several times as large as on the older variety. Sweet peas were extremely good and included such good novelties as Frank Dolby, Queen Alexandra, E. J. Castle, Ian Bolton and Nora Unwin. Quite a number of large gingko, purple beech, white birch, maple and other deciduous trees were moved last winter a distance of twelve miles and are doing well.

In the greenhouses two houses of single-stem chrysanthemums looked promising. Others were devoted to roses and carnations. In the various houses a good miscellaneous assortment of orchids was noted. Two divisions devoted to peaches and nectarines were ripening. Good crops in the grape houses, some well finished Muscat of Alexandria, Gros Colman, Black Hambro and other grapes were seen. A roomy house for the storage of bays, hydrangeas, etc., has recently been constructed. Everything in the estate was in good condition and reflected credit on Mr. Head.

Various Notes.

Everything at this time points to a good delegation starting next week for Philadelphia, the best Boston has sent out for some years. The exact number cannot yet be estimated, but it is safe to count on Boston being well represented.

Mann Bros. and Frank T. White are sending in quantities of extra fine longiflorum and speciosum lilies.

S. D. Wax has returned from a pleasant vacation in New Brunswick. E. Jackson Rogean is also at his usual stand after a sojourn in the same cool territory.

A. F. Calder, of Stoughton, has had good success with tomatoes the present summer, Comet and Hubert's Marvel being his favorite kinds.

S. J. Goddard finished housing carnations last week. His stock this season is in splendid condition.

Tomatoes have made extra good prices this summer and large growers of them under glass have done well. Prices are now falling with the arrival of the outdoor crop.

H. H. Barrows & Son have an unusually fine stock of nephrolepis this season. In addition to Scottii, Bostoniensis and the beautiful Whitmani, their new sports promise to be heard from later.

W. N. CRAIG.

MOLINE, ILL.

The Tri-City Florists' Association met August 8 with John Staack and the meeting was well attended. One new member was admitted into the society and one application received. The auditing committee reported that the books of the treasurer and financial secretary were found to be in good condition. The bills of the annual picnic which the florists had July 8 were paid and the picnic was reported a success in every way.

The remainder of the evening was given over to a general discussion of greenhouse construction and the culture of carnations.

THE READERS' CORNER.

To Remove Lime Shading.

In the REVIEW of August 8 there was a note from A. E. Boyce recommending cider vinegar for removal of lime shading. As the greenhouse glass has not a palate to be tickled by the fruity flavor of the cider vinegar, and only the acetic acid does the trick, I would suggest that one wishing to use that method should obtain from a dealer in chemicals a bottle of Acetic Acid No. 8, and dilute it with seven volumes of water to bring it to the strength of ordinary vinegar. It is much cheaper and more reliable.

Acetic Acid No. 8 was the name originally given in the trade to this strength of acid because "one pint of it will make eight pints of vinegar." As the No. 8 contains thirty to thirty-one per cent of real acetic acid, and ordinary vinegar has about four per cent, this statement is true, so far as acetic acid is concerned, and many a grocer has made his dilution in this proportion, and put the mixture for a few weeks in a cider barrel to get a product which he has afterward sold as "cider vinegar." The conventional form of bottle contains about five-sixths of a gallon, and is sold as containing six and one-half or seven pounds of the acetic acid of that strength. For large establishments the acetic acid can be bought by the barrel at much lower rates.

Muriatic acid suitably diluted can also be used for the purpose. A two per cent solution will be as effective as the vinegar. The commercial acid usually runs nearly forty per cent strength, so it could be diluted about twice as much as the acetic. Inasmuch as putty is usually made with whiting, acids always attack the constituents of the putty, and if used strong, or not promptly washed off, may seriously unsettle the glass. W.

TROUBLE WITH TOMATOES.

Will you kindly tell why tomato plants drop their blooms? They are strong, healthy plants. It does not rain, but I have watered them freely. C. H. K.

Tomatoes will lose their flowers if they are not fertilized, but in southern climate and out of doors, where there is a free circulation of air and bees and other insects to carry the pollen, it is hardly possible that this is the cause. I know of but one other cause which might fit the case, and that would be too much water thrown on the plants. They should be watered at the roots only, and the foliage kept dry, as it is liable to cause disease and also keeps the pollen washed off the blooms and sometimes rots the flowers off at the stems, just back of the flower, where water is liable to collect. BOREALIS.

STERILIZING SOIL.

What is the most practical way to sterilize soil in greenhouses that are used for growing lettuce? We have two houses, seventy-five feet long, that are used for growing lettuce in solid beds. Would it be best to lay the pipes in the walks and shovel the soil over them, or should the pipes be laid in the soil on the beds? I thought of using a 1½-inch pipe as a flow and two 1-inch pipes as returns in each walk, with a ten horsepower traction engine at the end to furnish steam. How many pounds steam should be carried and how long should it be kept up? Would it make any difference if the soil is wet or dry? A. S.

We are pleased to answer this letter, because we feel sure of benefiting at least one person; i. e., the inquirer. If A. S. should use common steam pipe with returns to the boiler as in ordinary greenhouse heating it would do more harm than good to the soil by baking it dry, which seems to take the life out of it. It would be better to leave the soil in the beds so that the heat would kill all insects, etc., down below the bottom of the beds, where they might seek refuge if the top soil were shoveled off to sterilize it. The pipes do not require a return, but should be drilled full of holes and plugged at the farthest end. A set of second-hand pipes will do for this, and when through using them they can be laid away for future use. The pipes should be laid about one foot apart and nearly that deep. Have plenty of water in the boiler and fifty to sixty pounds of steam on before turning it into the sterilizer. Cover the bed over with canvas or some other material to hold the steam and heat in it while cooking. The steam escaping from the many holes in the pipes thoroughly penetrates the soil and soon heats it to a very high temperature, and also keeps it moist. About twenty to thirty minutes will be sufficient to thoroughly sterilize the bed if everything is working right and the steam can be held up to at least thirty pounds.

One-inch pipes would be large enough for short houses. Many growers use common drain tile, turning steam into a header at the end, to which each run is connected, and the steam escapes from the cracks where the tile meet. The best arrangement we ever saw was a system of pipes like a farm drag, with large hollow teeth perforated to allow the steam to escape. This drag-like sterilizer is placed on the bed and pressed down in as far as it can go and is then ready for use. It is called the Sargent sterilizer and is made by G. M. D. Sargent, Belmont, Mass. BOREALIS.

STRAWBERRY-RASPBERRY.

I note in the REVIEW of August 8 that this very old plant is being introduced as a novelty in some sections. Many of our old herbaceous perennials have been similarly reintroduced and others, no doubt, will be in the years to come. The strawberry-raspberry, Rubus roseifolius, is a native of the Himalayas and is also found wild in China and Japan. It was introduced to England as long ago as 1811, and has been grown in America nearly as long. Not until recent years have the merits of the plant been exploited. Only three years ago a traveling salesman called and offered me small roots of this nearly century old "novelty" at $1 each, or $10 per dozen.

As a shrubby plant, it is one of the best of the rubus family. The plant dies to the ground each winter, but sends up shoots in spring which attain a height of two to three feet, or even more in rich ground. The large, white flowers, which are carried either singly or in loose panicles at the tops of the shoots, are in themselves attractive in July and August, but the plant's chief charm is in the light orange-red fruit which starts to ripen late in July and continues for two months. The fruit is far more brilliant in color than that of either strawberries or raspberries and is so attractive that one is instinctively tempted to taste it. The flavor is flat and few seem to relish the fruit in a raw state. Stewed with sugar, it makes a splendid sauce. The fruit bottled whole is also excellent, fully as good, in my estimation, as that made from strawberries or raspberries. It may also be used as a salad.

I do not anticipate an extensive call for the fruit, although one or two growers have marketed fruit in Boston, New Bedford and other cities in Massachusetts for some years and have secured satisfactory prices. If the raw fruit only had the true raspberry flavor it would be of great commercial worth. Possibly by some intercrossing this may be secured. A fortune should await the one who can secure flavor and still keep the size and color.

This plant needs no winter protection and it should be planted in some out of the way corner of the field or garden, for when established it will run and send

As a forcing cucumber is one of the largest and most profitable crops of the Market Gardener, it is essential that the very best possible strain should be sown. With this idea in view we have made selections for the past few years from our Rawson's White Spine, which have resulted in a strain about two inches longer and a darker green in color, with a few light spines showing at blossom end. This new strain we confidently believe to be superior to any other on the market. All their bedding stock was cleaned up long ago.

THE DEATH ROLL.

George R. Reuter.

George R. Reuter, aged 77, one of the former florists of Pittsfield, Mass., died at his home in that city August 3, after a long illness resulting from a complication of diseases. He was born in Germany, but had been a resident of Pittsfield for fifty-two years. He was for many years engaged in the florists' business, with greenhouses on Elm street, but six years ago, on account of failing health, he sold the property to R. Engelman. His wife died six years ago. He leaves four daughters, three of whom—Mrs. C. E. Clements, Mrs. Charles Smith and Mrs. James Bowe—live in Pittsfield, while the other, Mrs. William H. Clements, is a resident of Hartford. He is also survived by three sons, Nicholas, of San Benito, Cal.; Jacob, of Hartford, and George J., of Newark, N. J.

Mrs. Mary E. Stewart.

Mrs. Mary E. Stewart died at her home at Dolphin street and Pennsylvania avenue, Baltimore, Md., August 10, after a long illness. She was one of the oldest florists in the retail business and handled some of the best trade there up to the time of retiring. She will be long remembered by many members of the trade, among whom her death has caused sincere regret.

Francis H. Milburn.

Francis H. Milburn, a well known gardener of Bengies, Md., died August 8, at St. Joseph's hospital, after a lingering illness. He was 69 years old, and had lived in Middle River Neck most of his life. He is survived by a widow, who was a Miss Mary Rollins, and six children.

John C. Teas.

John C. Teas, who passed away July 29, at his home near Carthage, Mo., was well known among the veteran nurserymen of the country, especially among those of a generation now almost past. He was the originator of the weeping mulberry which bears his name, and in his earlier years he was intimately associated with Charles Downing, John J. Thomas, Dr. John A. Warder, Andrew S. Fuller and many other prominent workers for the advancement of horticulture, and in many of their works his name is given as having assisted in their preparation.

He was born in Indiana in 1827 and began his life-work in childhood, his first achievement being a bed of Sanguinaria Canadensis and a plant of white clover. His early school days were spent in a log schoolhouse in the "big woods" of the Hoosier State, and his first trees were small seedlings collected in an orchard through which he passed on returning from school, and carried home in his dinner pail. The lack of advantages in those early days was not the only obstacle to be overcome by a young man whose ambition was horticulture. The wise ones were free to give the advice that when the trees already planted should come into bearing, the fruit could not be consumed or sold, and of course people would not buy and plant more trees. And as the best apples could hardly be sold at 10 cents a bushel, and trees of the best sorts were 3 cents to 5 cents, the outlook was not encouraging. Nothing daunted by opposition and discouragement, the boy went on with his chosen work. In 1850 he went to Rochester, N. Y., and worked for Ellwanger & Barry, to learn more of the business. He had to go 100 miles to the nearest railroad station, on foot and on the old stage coach, then a ride on the cars, and across Lake Erie on a steamboat.

He conducted one of the most extensive nurseries and greenhouses in Indiana until 1869, when he moved to Carthage, Mo., where he continued the business up to the time of his last illness. He brought from Indiana a very extensive collection of the choicest varieties of both fruits and ornamentals, which have since been largely distributed in every state and territory in the Union, as well as in many foreign lands.

Until about 1878 there was utter confusion and uncertainty among tree men in regard to the different kinds of catalpa trees. With the assistance of the late E. E. Barney, Mr. Teas carefully examined these trees over a large area of territory where they grow, devoting several years to the work and traveling many thousands of miles. In this way he discovered and made known the native habitat of the hardy western catalpa which was named speciosa by Dr. Warder, and Mr. Teas was the first to publish that name and send out trees under it. He also originated and disseminated the well-known Teas' Japan Hybrid Catalpa, noted for its rapid growth and large panicles of flowers.

He was one of the founders and charter members of the Indiana State Horticultural Society, and was made an honorary member when he left the state.

To his skill, energy, and life-long devotion to the profession are due many important additions in trees, fruits and flowers, most notable among which are the weeping mulberry, Japan Hybrid Catalpa, and his last introduction, Teas' White Flowering Red Bud or Judas tree, Cercis Canadensis alba, which he regarded as one of the most important additions in recent years to the list of hardy ornamental trees, and of which he had propagated a large stock.

The deceased leaves a widow and two daughters at the old homestead; also two sons, W. C. Teas, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Edward Teas, of Joplin, Mo., and two brothers, E. Y. Teas, of Centerville, Ind., and T. S. Teas, of Salem, O.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

VISITED CHICAGO:—J. G. Peppard, Kansas City, Mo.

P. H. GAGE has left S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich., with whom he has been for three years.

THE South Texas Gardeners' Association will hold a meeting at Brownsville, Tex., August 16 and 17.

AN average crop of onion sets is reported at Chillicothe, O.; quality excellent; harvesting completed.

THE states of Kansas and Nebraska have not reported their onion set crops as yet. It is understood that they have a few, however.

IT is reported that the Louisville crop of onion sets contains a large quantity of smutty onions. It is feared that this will have a bad effect and will cause a heavy shrinkage when time to ship arrives.

A. C. NELLIS, well known to the seed trade, is manager of the departments of agriculture, horticulture and floriculture at the fair of the Richmond County Agricultural Society to be held near Midland Beach, S. I.

ANSWERING several inquiries: Yes, the article relating to the history of the onion set industry at Chicago, by S. F. Leonard, was originally written for the REVIEW and appeared in our columns some two years ago.

REPORTS from the bean growers are not as good as they were a week ago. The general statement is that the freakish spring weather did not permit of getting the ground in proper shape. The ground has hardened, making it difficult to cultivate, and the weeds are getting beyond the capacity of the average farmer's facilities for killing them.

EARLY varieties of peas are harvested and the reports have it that the crop in some places meets expectations but in others is quite short. It has been hinted that the canners' sorts will be scarce. This is being realized and there is a possibility that the threshing, which will begin shortly, will show more of a shortage than the cut straw in the stacks gives indication of.

THE initial number of the Market Growers' Journal is on seedsmen's desks. C. F. Wood, of Wood, Stubbs & Co., the Louisville seedsmen, is president of the company. The issue to hand contains S. F. Leonard's story of the origin and development of the onion-set industry at Chicago printed in the REVIEW some two years ago and since copied by many European and American publications.

THE onion set harvest at Chicago is progressing nicely. The weather is all that could be desired. An uneven ripening is causing some trouble, as it makes shifting from one place to another necessary. A uniform ripening is the most desirable thing that can happen to a set crop, as it insures a good quality of bulb. When, as is the case this year, sets do not all ripen up at the same time on the same bed, trouble in the keeping quality

HOLLAND SEED CROPS.

Sluis & Groot, Enkhuizen, Holland, have prepared their annual summary covering the season's seed crops. Although made at a time when growth is not past the danger point, still it is possible to give a fairly accurate idea of what the outcome will be.

In general the condition of crops is not promising. Although the winter was not unusually severe, the frequent changes of temperature wrought havoc on all biennial crops and even perennials suffered much. Those which fared the worst among the vegetable seed crops were cabbage, turnip, chervil, kohlrabi, parsley and rutabaga. All the growing crops are three or four weeks behind, and with late ripening crops the prospects are far from being promising.

Cauliflower promises a good crop. Of red cabbage, Savoy, Brussels sprouts and borecole the acreage is small. Prices will vary greatly, for quite a few sorts, will be very scarce, while there will be sufficient quantities of others. With the exception of a few sorts, turnips were practically annihilated by frost and Swedes are next to a failure. A good ise a middling crop. Both summer radish and winter radish are fairly promising, though of the latter not much was planted. Onions are a small acreage and much blight appears. A small area of parsley was planted and even this is not promising. Spinach looks good but is somewhat late. Dwarf and runner beans are somewhat under the average.

Neither do the fields of flower seeds look especially promising, for these articles are also backward and as a consequence a great many sorts have developed poorly, but with a warm, late summer and autumn average crops will be produced. Of mignonette there will be at least no more than an average crop, for insects have destroyed many plants. Nasturtiums are flowering poorly and crops are not likely to be good. Pansies are less than the usual area and hardly any seeds could be gathered until the early part of August. Ten-weeks stocks

DUTCH BULBS.

The Dutch Minister of Agriculture recently issued a report on the bulb crops in Holland. The report is dated June 16, and it appears from the details given that, on the whole, the bulbs harvested are of good quality, but that the harvest is late and shipment will be delayed somewhat beyond the usual time. Owing to the cool weather the bulbs remained longer than usual underground, thereby increasing their weight. Tulips are good in most districts, but in some, red tulips are not as fine as was expected. The same may be said of some varieties of double tulips. This is mainly attributed to the excessive heat at the beginning of May, and the frost during the latter part of that month. Damage from disease is reported to hyacinths and narcissi, but the conditions as regards hyacinths are on the whole very good. In south Holland the narcissi are universally good, and in north Holland they are also satisfactory, except in one or two districts where they are only fairly good.

TRADERS VISIT DARMSTADT.

On their annual continental tour about twenty-five members of the British Horticultural Traders' Association visited Darmstadt, Germany, the well-known center for grass and tree seeds, July 25, under the management of J. S. Brunton, editor of the English Horticultural Trade Journal.

Arriving at 11 a. m., the Englishmen inspected the seed establishments of Conrad Appel, under the guidance of the head of that firm, L. Heyn, counselor of commerce, and paid special attention to the desiccating establishments for the production of evergreen tree seeds, to the seed cleaning and dressing department and to the well-fitted seed testing laboratory of Conrad Appel.

The gentlemen then accepted an invitation to lunch in the hospitable home of Mr. Heyn, and in the afternoon took a drive round the town in carriages, decorated with flowers, which had been arranged by Mr. Heyn and the garden architect, Mr. Henkel. Then they visited the nurseries of Mr. Henkel and the seed establishments of A. Le Coq & Co. and started for Frankfort-on-the-Main at 6:30 p. m., to visit on the following day its famous palm garden.

THANK YOU.

An old subscriber writes: "Here is the subscription of a friend of mine in the trade. He says he wants to keep up with the times, so I told him to get the REVIEW and it would be easy for him."

The REVIEW receives many similar courtesies at the hands of its readers and hopes to continue to merit their recommendation.

IT DID THE WORK.

We potted up about 6,000 4-inch geraniums as a surplus over the needs of our retail trade to try the REVIEW and see if it would sell some for us. We sent in a small advertisement and in five weeks we were sold out and received orders for 1,000 more than we had. We sent money back to eight different states. When a man gets his offer into the classified department of the REVIEW he wants to be careful or his stock will all be sold and he will have nothing left but empty houses to take care of. The REVIEW is worth dollars a year, instead of $1, to any one in the business. You can use this letter if you want to; it is true. RAGAN BROS.

We are comparatively new in the business and some of our best work has been done by following the advice given in the REVIEW.—F. D. HARTSHORN, Augusta, Me.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 83d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

THE apple crop of Kansas is estimated at only four and one-half per cent of a full crop.

AN interesting account of the life of John C. Teas, who died July 29, will be found in the obituary column this week.

NEARLY all the creditors of the Albaugh Nursery & Orchard Co., of Tadmor, O., which was forced into bankruptcy June 28, have filed consents in the district court to have the involuntary bankruptcy proceedings dismissed and allow the company's affairs to be administered by a receiver.

THE NEW HYDRANGEA.

The free flowering habit of the new American hydrangea, H. arborescens sterilis, or H. arborescens grandiflora, is something very unusual in a hardy flowering shrub. Spring-set plants have been in bloom since the latter part of June and seem likely to continue to produce fresh flowers until toward frost. Finely formed flowers nine to eleven inches in diameter are now seen, as white as flowers ever are.

As to the hardiness of this plant, we learn that small plants set last October on a bleak prairie in northern Illinois passed through the winter safely, without any protection, while weigelas and other shrubs were killed to the ground.

It should be a matter of pride to Americans that we have a native hydrangea equal in every respect, in beauty and value, to the well-known Hydrangea paniculata gradiflora. T.

NECESSITY FOR INSPECTION.

[The following is a portion of an address by A. F. Conradi, professor of entomology at the Texas Agricultural College, before his State Horticultural Society.]

It is not necessary to confine ourselves to international and interstate shipments to convince ourselves of the importance of the employment of experts to guard our horticultural interests. A few reminiscences from the writer's experience when a nursery and orchard inspector will serve to illustrate how these pests may be disseminated after they have been established in the state.

One morning the writer, when on an inspection trip, rode by a railroad station where several men were unloading nursery stock from a freight car. The entire shipment contained 18,000 trees.

Upon examination it was found that fifty per cent of this stock was infested with San Jose scale and scurfy bark louse. When the consignee was asked to produce the inspection certificate, which by law was required to cover the stock, he gladly consented. The certificate read as follows:

"This is to certify that the nursery and premises of Mr. J. T. B. were in-

We offer for fall sales more than 30,000 salable named plants of our own growing. We have over six acres of plants, densely planted. We have been growing Peonies since 1869, years before some now growers were born and claim to know something about Peonies. We always give satisfaction with the size of our plants, and the correctness of names when they come into bloom speaks for us. We do not claim to have 1000 varieties or 1200 varieties, as this number is nonexistent. One variety frequently doing duty under 20 different names. This occurs even among the new high-priced kinds. Please send for our list and prices of same.

We also offer the New Double White Baby Rambler spected and found to be apparently free from dangerously injurious pests and fungous diseases."

This was signed by one of the best living state entomologists, whose sincerity and good intentions are not doubted by any one. The consignee himself was innocent, as he did not know the insects when he saw them. The shipment was at once traced, and it was found that it never came from the place where the certificate showed the inspection to have been made. Further investigation showed the consignor to be a nursery broker or tree jobber. In order to secure the inspection certificate, he had a lot of clean trees inspected. Under this certificate he sent out over the state any infested stock that could be procured cheap, owing to its worthless, infested condition.

In another case specimens of infested twigs were sent by a party whose trees were infested with San Jose scale. Upon visiting his place it was found that they were young trees set out the preceding winter. The address of the nurseryman from whom these trees were obtained was procured, and soon after this nursery was examined. On one block of trees the scale was abundant; active young were crawling about on the bark. This nurseryman is conscientious, and I would not be afraid that he would knowingly send me bad trees. He had a certificate of inspection, issued only a short time previous, and made remark as follows: "I paid for the inspection because I felt that the inspector knew more about this than I did. What did I pay the inspection fee for? Was it not to permit me to sell stock? What good does it do me to have this permission if that is not a reasonable guarantee that my stock is safe to send? I have sent out considerable stock from the block and it does me an endless amount of harm."

We know of one orchard that has only two trees seriously infested. They are in an angle nearest badly infested orchards, and both have bird nests in them. We have examined bird nests and have captured and examined birds in an infested orchard to convince ourselves that they carry scale.

[To be continued.]

PORTLAND, ORE.—Max W. Smith last spring opened a retail store at 150 Fifth street and reports himself well satisfied with the business done this summer.

OUTDOOR FLOWERS IN WINTER.

Should the coming winter be not particularly severe, by the presence of an excess of cold considerable easy money can be made by the grower who has a few spare rods of ground to plant to hardy annuals. Sweet peas, although a spring and summer flower, can be made to produce heavily in the middle of winter if the seed is sown at this time and the weather continues as mild as it has been for the last few years in this locality. In planting the seed, care should be taken to select a place where there will be no excess of moisture and not in too close proximity to buildings or trees. The southern exposure along a high fence is an ideal place, and it is surprising what a quantity of flowers can be marketed through the middle of the winter.

200,000 MORE Calla Bulbs

We have just dug 200,000 Calla Bulbs from a rich, sandy loam, three years from planting; they have large crowns, ripe, and of a rich brown color, full of vitality, and I warrant them to be the Finest Calla Bulbs that ever left California. In three sizes only. Freight prepaid over 100 lbs.

I have found Blanche Ferry the easiest variety to handle at this time, with Mrs. Gladstone and Emily Henderson close seconds. These are among the older varieties and not as delicately shaded as many of the newer sorts, but I have found them to be the hardiest of any of the kinds I have planted, and as there is no difficulty in using flowers of any description in the middle of winter, they have paid handsomely for the trouble.

Some experimenting has been done here in growing sweet peas under glass, and the same varieties I have mentioned have proven to be the best bloomers under all conditions. They are not considered money-makers for greenhouse growing, however, as their season of flowering is too short, but outside they require but little attention and the blooms are almost equal in quality to those produced during the natural season. Such stock is a good article to have on hand during the cold months, and seed planted at this time can be depended on to commence blooming early in the winter. It stands a considerable degree of frost and, if the bed is well drained, will flower through the entire winter. There is always a dearth of white material after the heavy cut of chrysanthemums is finished, and anything in the line of a cheap white flower is eagerly snapped up.

For a showy colored flower, a few beds of gaillardias come in handily and they pay many times for the trouble expended on them. They are not partial as to soil, but do not want too much moisture at the root. This rule applies to practically everything in the winter flowering line and demands more consideration than the possible cold weather. Too much shade, either from trees or buildings, is, of course, undesirable, but the protecting shelter of a fence allowing a southern exposure is of advantage.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business continues quiet, but with some signs of an early awakening. The weather is cool, and from all appearances will continue to be so for the present. There is quite a scarcity in some varieties of carnations, especially of the large white sorts. This is accounted for by the fact that a majority of the growers are changing their houses at this time, and as a result there will be no surplus of stock for some time. Asters are now in fair supply and will be at the height of their season in about two weeks. The quality, owing to the very favorable climatic conditions, is first-class and all the leading colors are well represented. They cost the retailers from $1 to $2.50 per hundred blooms. Roses are even scarcer than they have been for some time. There are practically no good whites to be had and but few pink sorts. Beauties are not to be had, unless short-stemmed flowers are to be reckoned with.

Amaryllis is being brought into town in large quantities and finds a ready sale at from $3 to $4 per hundred stems. Both Lillium album and L. rubrum are in fair supply and are good sellers. Valley is more plentiful, but does not sell well at this time. Gladioli and other outside stock are a glut and with the exception of long-stemmed sweet peas, there is nothing in the line of outside stock that is moving quickly.

There is quite an influx of town people returning from the country at this time and we can look for an early resumption of fall business.

E. W. McLellan, of Burlingame, who has been absent from home for a month in the northern portion of the state, is expected home in a few days.

The Pacific Nurseries have finished budding a large block of roses at their Millbrae grounds.

The Sievers Floral Co. reports a good trade for July and August. Funeral orders have been very heavy, necessitating the handling of a great quantity of white material.

P. McDonell, of Alden, is cutting from a splendid crop of Enchantress. His stock is in good shape and he is at present changing a large portion of it. G.

The Market.

Business is fair and what retailers I have seen have no reason to complain. At present funeral work is steady and many designs are gotten out. The death of Mary E. Stewart, who is more particularly mentioned in the obituary column, has called for many designs.

We have had remarkable weather, with severe storms, but little damage was done. Roses are plentiful. Carnations are getting short in supply. Gladioli are coming in heavily. Dahlias are arriving slowly. Golden glows are plentiful. Phlox is plentiful and various kinds of garden blooms are enough to meet the demands. The early asters are nearly done and the late variety is coming in. Hydrangeas have made their appearance. Ferns in pans are now ready for the market. Smilax plants are scarce, while asparagus is plentiful. Greens are enough to meet the demands.

The bulb situation here is drifting somewhat and, from reports, many will not grow any at all.

Various Notes.

Erdman & Ulrich, of Belair road, are building a new house, 25x150 feet.

John P. Willheim, of Gardenville, is making his fourth tie on some of his mums.

James Glass, of Brehms lane, has a fine collection of ferns, seedling and in flats. His stock at present is about 50,000 plants.

B. Stoll, of Brooklyn, has just completed planting 1,200 carnations inside, and the plants are in fine condition.

Thomas Vincent, 834 and 836 West Baltimore street, has sold out his Baltimore street store to the Flower Garden. Geo. F. Lurssen will be the proprietor. The store will be thoroughly overhauled and will be made up-to-date; electric lights will be installed. Mr. Vincent, who has carried on the business since 1881, is a brother of the well-known dahlia king at White Marsh, Md. It is understood he will continue business as usual at his North Charles street store.

Martin Duckstein and wife, of Brooklyn, Md., last week spent a few days at Ocean City, Md.

G. A. Lotze, of Glen Burnie, Md., has 8,000 carnations planted inside and will grow mums this year on a large scale, as in previous years. Mr. Lotze has some extra fine young seedlings of Harrisii lilies. J. L. T.

OUR EXHIBIT AT THE CONVENTION.

During convention week we will have on exhibition at Horticultural Hall a full line of samples, embracing not only the plants offered above but also many others, some of which are certain to prove useful to you in your business and with which you should become acquainted. Our entire staff of travelers will be in attendance and will be pleased to show samples or to pilot you to our Nurseries at Riverton, where a personal inspection of our many specialties will prove interesting.

AN INVITATION TO ALL.

Wednesday afternoon, August 21st, has been set aside by the entertainment committee of the Philadelphia Florists' Club for a visit to Riverton, and we extend a cordial invitation to everyone to join us on this day. A large steamboat, capable of accommodating 3000 people, has been engaged by us for the purpose. The trip up the Delaware river is a most interesting one and will enable you to gain a good idea of the vast shipping, shipbuilding and many other of Philadelphia's great riverfront industries. We will do all that we can to make this day a memorable one in the history of the Philadelphia convention and we hope that you will be able to join us.

NEPHROLEPIS WHITMANI

The Improved Ostrich Plume Fern

Unquestionably the most valuable of this type, superseding Piersoni, Barrowii and Elegantissima, all of which we have now discarded in favor of this variety. Not only are the pinnae on the individual fronds more finely divided, but the fronds are denser, broader and more graceful and the habit of the plant is more perfect.

2½-in. pots, 75c per doz.; $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000.

6 " 75c each.

NEPHROLEPIS AMERPOHLII

This is the latest addition to the Ostrich Plume type and is certain to prove a welcome and popular variety, holding for delicacy and gracefulness the same position among the Nephrolepis that Adiantum Gracillimum does among the Maidenhair Ferns. The pinnae are so finely divided that it reminds one of a piece of fine lace, the fronds are broad and of a depth which gives them a cushion-like appearance. It forms a beautiful specimen and is admired by everyone who sees it.

We are now booking orders for September delivery.

50c each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100; $200.00 per 1000.

NEPHROLEPIS TODEAOIDES

Todea or Filmy Fern-like Nephrolepis

This is an English introduction that has received a first-class certificate both from the Royal Horticultural Society and from the Royal Botanic Society of London, and is likely to become a most important commercial variety. While in a general way it reminds one of an exceptionally well grown plant of N. Elegantissima, it is entirely distinct from this and all others, in its strong yet compact growth and its bold heavy foliage, which is distinctly tripinnate or three times divided. Specimen plants which we now have growing are admired by everyone and we have great faith in its future.

4-inch pots, 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $40.00 per 100.

6-inch pots, $1.00 each.

NEW DOUBLE BLUE LOBELIA. Kathleen Mallard

A charming plant of English introduction, which we are now offering for the first time. It originated as a chance seedling from Lobelia Speciosa and has very large double flowers of an intense, rich, deep blue color. It is a most desirable plant, which meets with favor with everyone who sees it. We offer good plants for propagating purposes, 20c each; $2.00 per dozen; $15.00 per 100.

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE

We are now delivering first-class stock of Begonia Lorraine, 2½-inch pot-plants which have been propagated from leaf cuttings and which will make plants that are much superior to stock grown in the ordinary way. You will make no mistake in placing your orders at once; the stock is certain to please you. $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100; $140.00 per 1000.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

A week of warm weather has put the lid on business and it is on the quiet side at present. With the increase in the supply of flowers there is a glut on in some varieties. This is especially noticed in asters. This flower is coming in by the thousands and only the best grades find a market at anything like a fair price. The poorer grades go for whatever is offered, and quite a few go to the barrel. Gladioli are a close second and, if anything, they sell poorer than the asters, but there are not quite so many of them. Dahlias are beginning to come in and there are some good ones, too. They sell well. Carnations are few and not of good quality. Roses are in heavier supply, but sell out. Smilax is in good demand and common ferns are also selling well.

Various Notes.

Frank Huntsman is not only interested in raising seedling roses and carnations but also has a seedling peach which is really a first-class thing. It is a free-stone of fine color, form and size and of excellent flavor. But by far the best quality this peach possesses is that it is a great producer and exceedingly hardy. This variety is producing a good crop this year and on thousands of other peach trees in this locality only a few bushels will be produced. William Murphy says that from some 2,000 peach trees in his locality, back of Price Hill, scarcely a bushel of fruit will be gathered. This is due, of course, to the very late and cold spring this year. So you can see that Mr. Huntsman's peach possesses exceptional qualities.

J. O'Malley is spending a couple of weeks at West Baden. He was called home suddenly at the beginning of his vacation by the severe illness of his young son, who now is much improved.

Gus Adams, grower for Crabb & Hunter, Grand Rapids, was a visitor. He seemed well pleased with the outlook for that Michigan city for the coming year.

Park Superintendent J. W. Rodgers will attend the convention of park superintendents in Toronto this week. On his way home he will stop at Philadelphia to be present at the meeting of the S. A. F.

Cincinnati will be poorly represented at the S. A. F. convention. But two or three will be present.

Gus Adrian has decided to join Max Rudolph for the trip to the Snow Islands. William Murphy will not go until he is forced to leave here on account of the hay fever.

Miss White, of Lexington, Ky., was a caller. She is still figuring on moving to Los Angeles, where she owns some real estate, but has not as yet fully made up her mind.

C. A. Peters, of Huntington, W. Va., and George H. Mellen, of Springfield, O., were callers. C. J. OHMER.

A FLORIST'S INVENTION

BY A SUCCESSFUL CARNATION GROWER

DESCRIPTION.

No. 1.—The rings can be immediately removed from the stakes by a simple twist of the wire ring. The stakes alone can be used, like the regular galvanized stakes. No. 2.—Rings attached and placed to fit any size plant. Open and closed. No. 3.—The Support as it appears when in use. H—A broad base that holds firmly to the soil—keeps the support standing always erect. E, F, G—Rings closed. C—Ring open.

WITH COMMON SENSE—A CLOSE APPLICATION of economy in the growing of his products, by a successful Carnation grower, has resulted in the invention of our Common Sense Carnation Support.

Figure it out as he did, and prove to yourself that the stringing method of supporting your Carnation plants is not quite the right method. In a measure it does its work, but it leaves plenty of room for an improvement.

It's costly in material and time taken to put it in place, and in appearance it's behind the times.

Let us prove to you that our Common Sense Carnation Support is perfect and practical. They serve the purpose at a lower cost. They do the work you want them to do. They fit every size plant.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Current Comment.

Next week the Association of Cemetery Superintendents will meet in Providence. It is doubtless due to the fact that Newport is famous for its horticultural charms that the association will devote one day to sight-seeing here. The superintendent of the Island cemetery, Col. A. K. McMahon, is an enthusiastic member and an ardent horticulturist. An old-fashioned clam-bake is on the program.

John Barron has been appointed gardener for Col. De Lancey Kane, and William Anderson has succeeded his brother, the late Alex. Anderson, as gardener for Mrs. Thomas J. Emery in Middletown.

This has been one of the driest seasons on record. Many lawns are already burned up, despite the liberal use of water. An idea of the efforts made to keep the grass green during the month will be obtained with the knowledge that Wm. B. Scott & Co. sold over 4,000 feet of hose in three weeks. In Newport the grass, from early in summer until late in the fall, is kept cut close down to the bare turf by mowers with grass-catching attachments; or, in the absence of these latter, there are sweepers to clean up every bit of grass mowed. This process leaves the roots of the grass exposed to the drying influences of the sun and air. When a very dry spell comes and continues, the lawns are inevitably scorched in consequence of this close shaving and the sweeping away of what would act as a mulch if allowed to remain and settle at the roots.

WASHINGTON.

The Club Meeting.

There was a good attendance at the club meeting Thursday evening, August 1. It was gladiolus night and a sort of love feast. The members present expressed themselves freely and could not say enough for the outing committee. The outing was just the thing at the right time and has done more than anyone ever dreamed of to bring the boys together. The committee received a rising vote of thanks from the club. George Schaffer, chairman, was tendered a personal vote of thanks for beautiful and tasteful decorations on the trains, he having done this of his own accord and as a surprise to the boys.

The schedule committee for the chrysanthemum show made a report, the present schedule naming 134 classes. The show will be held November 12 to 14. An entrance fee of $3 will be charged all exhibitors, not members of the club, who compete for prizes; those not for competition will be free. The admission fee will be 25 cents, all profits to be turned over to the Associated Charities. Monday will be chrysanthemum day, Tuesday rose day, and Wednesday carnation day. Mantel and table decorations will constitute one exhibit. The judges for tables and mantels will be some of Washington's society ladies. The report was referred back to the committee, George Cooke, F. H. Kramer and George Fields, and the committee was increased to six by adding George Schaffer, Charles McCauley and William F. Gude. The committee has full power to act, and assures us that the show will be the finest ever held in the capital.

Mr. Summers thanked the club for the certificate given him for his new yellow daisy.

The gladiolus exhibition was fine. Arthur Cowee, of Meadowvale Farm, Berlin, N. Y., showed a great many choice blooms, not named. F. H. Kramer had a fine showing of mixed varieties. J. Lewis Childs, of Floral Park, N. Y., showed a fine lot, all named.

The S. A. F. Convention.

W. H. Ernest, vice-president of the S. A. F. for the district, has called a meeting for Thursday, August 15, at 7:30 p. m., at 1214 F street, for all who are going to the convention. A large delegation will go from here and every florist who anticipates going to Philadelphia should attend this meeting. Mr. Ernest will make arrangements with the railroad company and have a special car.

Various Notes.

F. W. Clark, special agent for the Department of Agriculture to Pierce, Tex., was present at the last club meeting.

Wish You All A HAPPY CONVENTION

What are you seeking, brother mine?
Is it to learn where plants are fine?
Look at my Araucarias fair:
We searched the world to bring them here.
Excelsa! Glauca! Look at these!
They make you think of those strange trees
That grew in Eden long ago
With perfect form and lustrous glow.
Of Nephrolepis live a lot:
Boston Whitman and Scott.

Elegantissima and Barrowall—'tis as well
I of their beauty need not tell.
Fronds green like grass when spring is here,
As bridal veils o'er faces dear.
Plants in general we grow
Of perfect shape, before all they bow.
Our palms, with healthy, glossy leaf:
Come see them all—I am the chief.
Warmly I hope that while you are here
Each hour may yield a pleasure dear.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Club Organized.

A meeting was held August 7 at the office of A. Wiegand & Sons, to organize an Indianapolis Florists' Club. There were quite a number present, considering the short notice. Twenty-six names were given in and it is hoped that at the next meeting this will be increased to fifty. The object of the club is purely social and it is intended to make each meeting as attractive as possible, so that all members will enjoy coming. The next meeting will be held at the same place, on September 11, and all florists employed in the city are welcome. This is a go, and all should get on the bandwagon.

Various Notes.

John Bertermann and family are enjoying farm life during the heated period. They are at the Cumberland place.

Wm. Billingsley and John Hartje are with us again, after an extensive tour of the western and northwestern states.

E. A. Nelson and wife are back again. They have been fishing and resting at Cedar lake.

Quite a party will attend the S. A. F. convention. Among them will be Irwin Bertermann and wife, Homer Wiegand and wife, A. Wiegand, H. W. Rieman and wife, Herman Junge and wife, John Rieman and A. Pahud.

H. Heller, of Newcastle, was in town this week, also Mr. Hill, of Richmond. Fred Myers, of Kalamazoo, stopped over a few hours.

SOUTHINGTON, CONN.

Nelson Bavier has just completed a 100-foot violet house.

Olson & Lunden have finished painting their place and it looks "all to the good."

C. W. Blatchley, the south end carnation man, is sporting a big new touring car, which goes to show that business here is on the gain.

E. S. Bavier, designer for Olson & Lunden, and Fred Anderson, of the same firm, are going to spend their vacation at Fairweather Island, camping.

HYDRANGEAS

FOR SUMMER BLOOMING

WE have a magnificent lot of Hydrangea Otaksa grown especially for August Flowering. The plants are now in bud and bloom, and will be in elegant shape during August, when they are in great demand at watering places and other summer resorts. There is nothing showier or more satisfactory for lawn decoration. We make a specialty of them, and find an increasing demand for them from year to year. They can be shipped anywhere safely by freight.

Large plants in tubs, $2.00 to $3.00 each, according to size.
Very large specimens, in half barrels, $5.00 and $7.50 each.

Greenhouse Heating.

A HOUSE WITH A LEAN-TO.

I should be pleased to get some advice as to heating a greenhouse with hot water. The length is 200 feet, running east and west. The width is twenty-seven feet, with a 5-foot lean-to along the north side. The height to the gutters is seven feet and the height to the ridge is thirteen feet ten inches. The length of the sashbars on the south side is fourteen feet and on the north side sixteen feet. There are movable sashes, about two feet and a half deep, in the south wall. There is no partition between the lean-to and the main house.

I wish to run two mains across the center of the house, large enough to supply another house like the foregoing later on, with the flow pipes overhead. I should like to use 1½-inch pipe for the returns. How many and what size of flow pipes shall I use and how many returns? The desired temperature is 55 degrees, with the outside temperature sometimes 15 degrees below zero. I should like to have as many of the returns as possible along the walls, and also a few under the bench in the lean-to for bottom heat. How many feet below the ground should the return opening on the boiler be? C. B.

In order to successfully heat the 200-foot house with hot water it will be necessary to locate the boiler at one side and 100 feet from either end; this will then give the maximum efficient length of piping for hot water. If I understand the dimensions of the room to be heated it is $27+5=32$ feet in width by 200 feet in length. If this is the case there should be a 4-inch flow pipe leading from the boiler in either direction to the far ends of the house, and there dividing to return by twenty-two 1½-inch returns or eighteen 2-inch returns, arranged on the side walls and under the benches. If the boiler can be located so the top of the shell of the boiler is below the level of the return pipes in the house, the return opening on the boiler will be low enough. L. C. C.

HEAT FOR ADDITIONAL HOUSE.

I am going to erect a new house, 40x120 feet, sixteen feet to the ridge, six feet to the gutters. There will be two feet of foundation and four feet of glass in the side walls. The house will run east and west. The temperature runs to 10 degrees below zero, and once in a great while to 16 degrees below. I have a tubular boiler, 36x72 inches, containing thirty-six 4-inch tubes, and carrying 1,300 feet of 4-inch cast-iron pipe. I wish to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees. How much additional pipe will I require and will the boiler carry it? In horse-power the boiler will rate fourteen to fifteen; it has two inlets and two outlets for hot water. Can I run one or two flow lines overhead and place the returns under the benches or on the side walls? The boiler will be located at one end of the range and can be sunk as low as necessary. Would two or three flows overhead and five or six returns under the benches or on the side walls be practicable and what would be the best way to arrange them? B. P. G.

It is possible to give you only a partial answer from the data given. The boiler has a capacity to carry about 1,950 square feet of radiation. Your house requires about 1,800, so you have only a small margin on the right side.

In order to maintain the temperature you desire, about 500 feet additional 4-inch pipe will be necessary. With pipe of this size, it would be well to plan, if possible, to arrange it all under the benches. Four-inch cast pipe does not lend itself well to the overhead style of piping.

CHARCOAL IRON FLUES.

We are using a tubular boiler and have to put new flues in it this year. We have just been told that charcoal iron flues are more durable than steel. We should like your opinion.

M. J.

The charcoal iron was formerly extensively used for boiler tubes, but in recent years steel has almost entirely replaced it, so much so that charcoal iron tubes are hard to get and much more expensive. The charcoal iron tubes are undoubtedly superior, but whether the difference will justify the trouble and cost is a question.

L. C. C.

LOCATION OF MAIN RETURN.

We are planning to heat with steam, with coils of 1-inch pipe for returns on the side walls of the houses. Each group of these would be joined together at the end of the house and then connected to the return main, which would run on the ground across the ends of the houses and then to the potting shed and boiler room. This return main would empty into the receiving tank, from which the condensation would be returned to the boiler by a steam trap. Must this return main be below the water line of the receiving tank, or will it do to leave it on the ground level and then place the receiving tank in a shallow pit or well beside the boiler and low enough so that it will be below the level of the return main, thus keeping the return main drained all the time?

W. H.

If you have a good drop from the coils into the main return and can place the receiving tank low enough so the return will drain into it, there will be no difficulty. Do not arrange it so there can be any back pressure by water rising in the main or secondary returns.

Gunnar Teilmann has bought out J. W. Bernard, purchasing the greenhouses, stock, store, fixtures and all that goes with the business. He is intending to remodel the entire place and run it in connection with the Maple Heights Greenhouses, which he has made well-known by his success with chrysanthemums, especially with the early flowering of Monrovia. The purchase will give him the best location in the town and a glass area of about 30,000 square feet. He says he expects to more than double his retail business. August 12 Mr. Teilmann had a number of Monrovia with well developed blooms of good size. He has three or four benches of early varieties of chrysanthemums, among which is an early white, named Princess Elizabeth, which he considers especially promising. August 12 several plants were showing color in the buds. It is an

NEW ORLEANS.

Current Comment.

The florist in New Orleans who is supplied with an unlimited quantity of water is lucky. It is the misfortune of our city, situated on the banks of the longest river in the world, to have the poorest accommodation with our waterworks system. The price is high, the pressure of the water is low and lately the drainage system, established all over town, seems to make matters worse. Consequently our gardens have been suffering during a hot, dry spell.

The chrysanthemum crop seems to be growing well enough, but it is too early to give a final opinion.

Peter Kaul is heels over head with garden work. He is a genuine hustler and is well assisted by his wife. During the last season he kept five wagons going all the time, to different markets and peddling plants around town, and he says he was quite satisfied with that new department, obtaining better prices than at his stands, where competition was sometimes too keen. He is now a lively buyer to replenish his stock, which he sells at the uptown markets.

T. Oubre, at the corner of Tchoupe-toulas and Valmont streets, grows nice ferns and other stock, which he sells at the uptown markets.

All the bids for the hothouse to be erected at the City park were rejected. Julius Roch, the architect, and one of the commissioners of the park, assisted by Frank E. Broucker, the head gardener, will erect the buildings. M. M. L.

August 8 was a gala day at the nursery of the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., being the birthday of Harry Papworth, the popular president, and the employees presented him with a fine silver-mounted umbrella, with the following inscription: "Presented to Mr. Harry Papworth, August 8, 1907, by his employees." C. Baker, who made the presentation in behalf of the employees, spoke very highly of Mr. Papworth as a kind employer, etc., and stated that the men, appreciat-

The Market.

There is a good demand for stock, especially white, owing to heavy funeral work. Flowers are scarce just now, carnations being almost done and asters just coming into bloom. Sweet peas are quite plentiful, but, owing to such dry weather, the stems are rather short. However, we have had one or two good rains recently. This will help out wonderfully, as everything was looking limp.

Emptying and filling benches is now the order of the day. Young carnations in the field are looking fine after the heavy rains. Roses are scarce and of poor quality. There are plenty of outdoor colored flowers, but white is scarce just now. A few small-sized carnation blooms are yet to be seen. One street vender last Saturday was selling them in front of the Parker house for 20 cents per dozen. They were more fit for the rubbish heap than anything else. Sweet peas sell all the way from 15 cents to 50 cents per hundred retail. One grower is advertising them at 15 cents per hundred, 25 cents for 200; also 15 cents per dozen for aster blooms. I hope he will get rich off the proceeds.

THE PHILADELPHIA CONVENTION

THE TWENTY-THIRD ANNUAL MEETING OF THE SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

THE NEXT MEETING WILL BE HELD AT NIAGARA FALLS

OFFICERS FOR 1908:

President, F. H. TRAENDLY, New York, N. Y.

Vice-President, GEO. MCCLURE, Buffalo, N. Y.

Secretary, PHILIP J. HAUSWIRTH, Chicago.

Treasurer, H. B. BEATTY, Oil City, Pa.

The twenty-third, or skidoo, convention, as some of the irreverent ones called it, of the Society of American Florists, at Philadelphia this week realized in fullest measure the sanguine expectations of those who have worked so hard for its success. Philadelphia is a splendid convention city in every respect save its slightly tropical August climate, and for those who were at Dayton last year this had no terrors, so that it was a foregone conclusion that the attendance would be up to the best previous record. With this fact in mind the Florists' Club of Philadelphia set out to provide an entertainment which should be in keeping with the prestige of the city as a horticultural center. The arrangements were ideal, with the meetings in Broad Street theater, the trade display in Horticultural hall across the street, and the two halls in the center of the hotel district of the city. It was the best location for a convention the society has had in all its twenty-three years.

The attendance was large, but the west was not strongly represented, except for the larger cities, like St. Louis, Chicago and Detroit. The larger part of the attendance came from east of Pittsburg, and hundreds visited the convention merely for a day. William Scott's face was missed and many were the inquiries as to his health. J. A. Valentine, of Denver, missed his second convention in succession. Other familiar faces also were absent, but there were dozens of young men, many of whom had never before attended a convention, and the society's membership roll was added to in a very pleasing manner.

It often has been said that the trade display is not only possibly the predominating feature of the S. A. F. conventions, but that Philadelphia is largely to be credited with making it as important as it is. Whatever has been due to Philadelphia enterprise in the past, certainly this year it would have been a slim affair were it not for the home exhibits. Evidently outside people thought it would be a case of carrying coals to Newcastle to take large exhibits to compete with Philadelphians on their home ground. Several New York houses came over, however, two or three of them with the largest displays they ever had made.

The trade display has been so large that not since the Milwaukee convention has it all been on one floor. While Horticultural hall is a large building, all its rooms were filled and more space could have been used to advantage. It is a beautiful building and the show made a better general appearance than for several years. David Rust's management was most efficient.

Harry Bunyard was sergeant-at-arms and he had a hard job clearing the exhibition hall when the hour for opening arrived on Tuesday. After he had shifted all the crowd across the street, Broad Street theater was comfortably filled. Vice-president John Westcott called to order and in his characteristic way introduced Samuel S. Pennock, president of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, who read a letter from Governor Stuart. Mr. Westcott then introduced Mayor Reyburn, who delivered an address of welcome which, while not as flowery as some the society has listened to, left no doubt of the mayor's sincerity; that Philadelphia was glad to see us he made quite clear.

W. W. Castle was introduced to respond to the mayor and first, on behalf of the S. A. F., presented His Honor with a big bunch of Beauties. Col. Castle is a comparatively recent acquisition, but he is able to voice the sentiments of the society, upon an occasion of this kind, as few of its members can do. The pearly drops of oratory fall from his silver tongue like the mellow notes of the lark upon a glad spring morning. He hails from Boston, called the Hub, but he said he was free to admit that Philadelphia is the axle of the horticultural world. He is a welcome addition to the ranks of our spellbinders.

President W. J. Stewart, being introduced, was greeted with hearty applause. He delivered his address, as follows:

President's Address.

The occasion which we inaugurate so auspiciously today is a notable event in the life of the organization whose passing years these annual conventions mark. Contemplating the horticultural advancement in this country since the founding of the Society of American Florists, we can feel justly proud that in all the high achievements which adorn and signalize this period as one of unprecedented progress in the science and practice of horticulture this society has had an honorable participation. From the start its roll-book has borne the signatures of the leading spirits in the craft to whose uplifting it has been pledged, and in whatever community it has presented itself it has invariably been accorded a welcome and high place in the public esteem.

Standing here in this fair city, where horticulture has ever been honored and beloved, where from the day of its birth this society has been steadfastly championed—a community the home of not a few illustrious exponents of our art in the days gone by, a community which can boast horticulturists, florists, plant growers, seed establishments and nurseries second to none in the world today, a people wide-awake and enterprising, yet warm-hearted and companionable—here, in this City of Brotherly Love, as we voice our gratitude to the pioneers and extend our hand to the coming generation, we may well stop and take a survey of our field, note conditions as we find them, lay plans and invoke continued success for our society and all that it represents.

Horticulturists' Mission.

To clothe the earth with loveliness, to co-operate with Nature in her most beautiful functions, to instill into the affections of the people an appreciation of our art and zeal for his products and to serve them and gratify this desire is the mission of the horticulturist. The materials in which he deals were once classed among the luxuries of life, but the world is fast coming to recognize them as necessities of healthful and rational living, and, as this sentiment grows, so also will grow the importance and influence of the horticulturist in the public eye.

To aid the horticulturist through the influence and power of concentration by the gathering together, molding and assimilating of the concrete wisdom of the many, and to bring the profession to a lively sense of their duties and privileges and a better realization of what is possible through the medium of a well-supported central organization is the task of this society. Its aim and its purpose have ever been to stimulate emulation, to broaden the channels of business, to promote the fraternal spirit, to help the gardener and florist in making for himself an honored position in the commonwealth and to inspire the profession with a more correct understanding and better appreciation of the nobility of their calling, which, as Downing tells us, "is intrinsically the parent and superior of them all," because agriculture is the basis of all wealth, and horticulture is the refined essence of agriculture.

Our Land of Promise.

Agreeably to custom, it becomes my duty to ask your attention at this time to such suggestions and advice as seem to me sound and wise and conducive to the growth and continued efficiency of this society. First, let us take a look at the situation. We find a vast country, possessing the widest range of climate, topography and soil, affording homes for ever-multiplying millions of people ambitious, enterprising and prosperous and now reaching that stage where the finer sentiments begin to develop and the desire for beautiful home environment commences to kindle.

On the extent that the gardener and florist grasp the situation and act upon the opportunity thus presented depends much of the future welfare of our horticultural industries and of gardening art. One thing is indisputable: If the horticulturist is to do his part in directing and developing the garden-hunger of the people he must first make good use of every means to fit himself to do this intelligently.

These are times of unprecedented rush and enterprise. Timorousness and parsimony have little part in the policies that lead to success nowadays, and he who would excel must follow modern methods, taking full advantage of the horticultural literature of the day and of personal intimacy with his fellows in the societies and clubs; he must travel, visit exhibitions—in short, he must use every avenue of publicity and every opportunity to sharpen his wits and enlarge his knowledge. The day when a paying business can be done with untidy grounds, neglected store windows, decrepit greenhouses, badly grown plants, misrepresented trees and shrubs and haphazard financial methods has gone forever.

Our Opportunity.

Modern suburban transportation facilities have given a tremendous impetus to the rural home idea. It is to the man skilled in horticulture that the homemaker will turn for advice, assistance and material needed, and for those who grasp the opportunity in the right spirit there will be found abundant scope and full recompense for cultural knowledge and artistic talent. Nothing comparable to the present demand for hardy garden material has ever been experienced in this country, and no horticultural enterprise intelligently and diligently conducted can fail of success if existing conditions are understood and provided for. Tender material, also, will get its full share of the prosperity if used with better discretion as to its adaptations and limitations. For the ambitious, earnest young man, blessed with an artistic temperament, no department of horticulture offers brighter emolument or higher honor than that of outdoor gardening in all its branches. Within the scope of our vision today the field seems practically unlimited and the young generation may safely go into training for large responsibilities—every one will be needed. Under pressure of exigencies prevailing in the past the gardener has in too many instances been acquiring a one-sided experience and some of our most talented indoor growers find themselves badly handicapped through deficient education in the fundamental operations of general gardening. The horticulturist who makes his mark in the future will not have these limitations, but will combine a thorough equipment for outdoor planting, grading, management and executive ability, with a fine knowledge of indoor operations and proficiency in the production of flowers and fruits under glass that will stand the test of comparison with the products of the specialist. Several of the agricultural colleges are doing good work on this order and turning out trained young men from whom we may expect much.

Room for Improvement.

Too many greenhouses are devoted to crops for which neither the houses nor their owners are competent. We see acres of nursery space filled with antiquated stock; well grown flowers sacrificed through careless handling or through inefficiency in the sales department; the once-prosperous flower shipping business prostrated by shortsighted methods; the trade subjected to criticism because of the trumpeting of undeserving novelties. Our exhibitions are crude in method, faulty in manner of making awards or interesting the public. In every branch of activity there is room for better system. The arrangement of flowers, the planting of garden beds or the larger operations of beautifying an estate or creating a landscape picture, in many of which, as we see them from day to day, the qualities of originality and artistic intelligence in form and color harmony are conspicuously lacking, show conclusively the need for study and self-education in artistic taste before we are properly fitted to instruct the public.

It is the province of the florists' club to seek out and apply the remedy for all these deficiencies and it becomes the duty of the craftsman in justice to himself and his fellows to uphold in every possible way his local organization and do his share toward the general advancement which is sure to follow the fraternizing of congenial spirits whose material interests are identical.

Work for Community Interests.

No better evidence of progressiveness in a given locality or in any special branch of our industries can be adduced than a full representation on the society roll books and at the regular meetings, yet how pitifully small in the aggregate is the proportion of the horticultural craft represented in the membership of all our local or national bodies! The power of organization when all stand behind it, for whatever is just and right, the tremendous advantage in being able to command unity of sentiment and action when any evil menaces, is a lesson that is being learned with exasperating slowness.

While on the subject of societies it may not be amiss to call attention to the efforts that are being made for the protection of what is left of our forests—a heritage of greater intrinsic value to the health and prosperity of our country than all the gold mines on the continent. Devastation by soil erosion, floods and droughts, bird extermination, insect plagues, and many other evils are following in the wake of the wanton forest destruction which has been going on. Few interests are more seriously affected by all this than is horticulture, and every movement, local, state or national, for forest preservation should have our zealous support individually and collectively.

The School Garden Movement.

Chief among the instrumentalities for the upbuilding of our industries is the education of the public to a fuller appreciation of our products. The majority of American homes fall short of the home ideal in their lack of any setting of living green. Consider the possibilities—the millions of house plants, the hundreds of thousands of porch and window boxes for both summer and winter, the innumerable little table ferneries, the tons of lawn and flower seeds, the cargoes of spring and summer bulbs, the garden implements, the vast quantities of evergreens and shrubbery and border and bedding plants for which a demand can be created, not to mention the conservatories and conservatory plants, or the small fruits and products of the kitchen garden which every home lover likes to indulge in, once the appetite of the people for such things has been thoroughly aroused. Large as the demand already is, numerous and prosperous as we know the craft to be, yet who can say that our country is not well able to furnish business sufficient for many times the present number of our commercial establishments and employment for good gardeners in far greater numbers than they can be supplied today? With these facts in view I know of nothing which promises so rich a return as the school garden movement. In addition to its services in the cause of good citizenship it must be obvious to all that activity on this line is also good business policy and assures the interest of the coming generation in parks and gardens, tree-lined highways, horticultural exhibitions and plants and flowers everywhere.

Object Lessons.

Again, every florist's home should be a shining object lesson. Show neighbors and passers-by the possibilities with spring bulbs, with easily grown plants in bed and border, in piazza box and window; excite their dormant perceptions with rose and clematis and honeysuckle-bowered porch and pillar; impress them with the dignifying effect of ornamental trees and shrubbery, the cheery picture of evergreens in winter time. See that they are wisely instructed in the selection, planting and care of material and that they realize that the time is probably not far distant when bare yards and flowerless windows will pass as an evidence of ignorance and squalor within. The public are in the mood to welcome such activity on the part of the florist, the newspapers are at all times disposed to assist, and the more the florist does in this direction the higher position he will occupy in the esteem of his townsmen.

The Society's Sphere.

Having thus hastily scanned our field in a few of its many phases, the question comes as to what part this society should assume conformably to its avowed aims and through what channels best results can be reached. It is the business of an organization such as this to help men to help themselves and then to conserve and safeguard the results of their work so that those who come after them shall have as their heritage the sum total of the efforts of their predecessors.

It has been my conviction for a long time that there is nothing more to be desired to place this organization in a position of greatest usefulness than some system of direct affiliation with existing or prospective special and local organizations. Far from regarding these societies as a possible menace, I look upon their multiplication as distinctly to our advantage. The field is practically limitless and we can well afford to nourish any and all well-meant efforts to build up horticulture in any of its branches. There is an infinity of specialized detail and local work which the smaller and more compact bodies can care for with an efficiency far beyond the reach of a society constituted as this is. Let them do it if they will, and wherever and whenever the time comes that they find their burden heavy and the road rough let us put our big shoulder to the wheel and help them. On the other hand, there are movements where a successful consummation is only possible under the capacious mantle of a large national organization. Events of the past year have indicated to us how at any moment we may be called upon to champion the cause of some branch of the trade where strength of numbers and national incorporation become elements of great strength and where the existence of a powerful representative body serves as a restraint and defense against corporate plunder. I believe we should keep working on this problem of closer relations until some feasible plan of affiliation and intelligent coöperation has been evolved and a system of specialized work established through these auxiliary bodies.

Registration and Other Duties.

A well regulated system of plant nomenclature is needed. It would be an element of great stability if all registration of varietal names could be recorded in one universally recognized bureau. Whether this should be done direct by the owner or first pass the scrutiny of a specialized society, where such exists, is of little consequence provided it finally comes into the custody of a central authority having the power to follow up infringement and extend the fullest protection within the law to the originator or owner. This central authority, I believe, should be the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists.

The time seems now ripe for us to insist that horticulture be made a regular course in our public school system. There can be no question of the wisdom of this society's taking an advanced position on this matter and fostering liberally all movements for the dissemination of garden knowledge through this means. Every argument on physical, mental and moral grounds is on our side.

As a society we should lend aid and encouragement to any investigation or experimentation for the purpose of stimulating the production of any horticultural material for which we have hitherto been obliged to depend upon foreign sources of supply. "Made in America" is an inscription too seldom seen on horticultural goods. How can this organization best assist to that end? In the case of those goods which we must import, there is room for a better system and improved facilities in the appraisers' department, and I hope our legislative committee will give this question the attention it should have.

Cheaper Transportation.

The project of a parcels post is a reform worthy of our hearty support. A cheaper and more reliable means of distribution for packages of limited size and weight, such as is enjoyed in most European countries, would greatly benefit the plant and bulb trade and provide the means for supplying the public at small cost with plants of a size that might be seen without the aid of a microscope and might be nurtured into lusty specimens without the use of an incubator. Were it not for the express companies a parcels post would have been a reality long ago—so we are told. The express companies and the S. A. F. have been making one another's acquaintance of late and find they don't think alike on some things.

P. J. Hauswirth, Re-elected Secretary Society of American Florists.

H. B. Beatty, Re-elected Treasurer Society of American Florists.

Outdoor Exhibitions.

It is much to be regretted that the executive board found conditions so unpropitious for an outdoor exhibition of planted material in connection with this convention that the project had to be abandoned. It was hoped by many that the humble beginning made in Dayton might be followed up and that in time an outdoor exhibit might be made a regular feature of our conventions, but in a large city the difficulties seem almost insurmountable. Wherever circumstances permit I believe it will be good policy to provide at least for a planting of such novelties as cannot be properly presented in an indoor exhibition.

I am satisfied that the present system of selecting state vice-presidents to represent this society sectionally might be improved upon and would suggest that you consider the adoption of some system whereby, in those localities where any organization exists, we might through mutual arrangement confer upon the presiding officer the honor of representing the S. A. F. in his territory during his term of office.

National Flower Show.

As the national flower show project will be reported on at the proper time by the very competent committee of fifty under the chairmanship of my predecessor, I will not take your time now with any reference to it other than to submit that it would be a grave mistake to make any change from the time-honored date for holding our annual convention. If it is thought wise to have a meeting at Chicago at the time of the exhibition, let it be a special meeting called as provided for in the by-laws. The proposition to merely meet formally in August so as to comply with the constitutional requirements and then adjourn over until the time set for the flower show would, I firmly believe, very seriously affect the prosperity of the society.

The Society's Record.

The birth of the Society of American Florists was the outcome of a conviction on the part of its promoters that the horticultural interests of America were ready to get together for mutual advantage and the uplifting of their art. The young society found the commercial florist, as a rule, isolated and provincial because of the lack of opportunity for any but the most limited intercourse and interchange of opinion and experience. Not one society, club or periodical devoted primarily to the interests of floriculture existed on this continent. The best test of the wisdom of the founding of any institution is what it has been able to accomplish. Do you not think that the seed sown twenty-three years ago has borne pretty good fruit? The yield might have been increased many fold had every one in the profession who needed just this help taken advantage of it; still it is not too much to say that the S. A. F. has been the underlying force which has in this brief period placed American floriculture on an eminence where it commands the respect of the world and that the splendid confidence of its founders in the future magnitude of their profession has been well justified. The spirit of progress which prompted them to break the shackles of past isolation and secretiveness and throw wide open the doors for a general intellectual and material advancement is still our best asset. We must allow free scope to the mighty reserve forces of American horticulture and be constantly on the alert to see and act upon every opening for strengthening our hold upon the heart-strings of the profession.

Unselfish, hard-working loyalty to the organization and its principles, on the part of every member, is the winning combination in all club and society affairs and this I would especially plead for at this time, as we near the close of my official labors. My dearest ambition during these many years has been to contribute with all my heart toward making this society the great leader in every work tending to the ennobling and enriching of our profession. I know, by intimate contact with those associated with me in the society's service, how faithfully they have done their duty and how unselfishly the members generally have responded when called upon for any assistance. These are the qualities that make for success in any organization and I earnestly hope they will be continued and strengthened in the years to come.

What Conventions are Good For.

The society is to be congratulated on the magnificent attendance at this meeting. Conventions are always an incentive and encouragement. They give zest to work, feed the intellect, enrich our literature. They are a unifying force, establishing and cementing friendships and bringing into advantageous contact those who, although widely separated, are actuated by a common purpose in life. I pity the man who sees nothing to interest him here and finds no inspiration in such gatherings, no strength to help him surmount the daily recurring difficulties which are our common lot, no advantage in the opportunity to inspect this great industrial exhibition. Little he realizes how great is his loss.

And now let us proceed to business. We have diversions innumerable, entertainment after entertainment awaiting our pleasure; the bowlers and their henchmen are eager to pounce upon that tempting aggregation of honor and silverware, but with all their vociferation they are among the best promoters in the society's service; the ladies, indispensable always, have organized a little side auxiliary of their own; a magnificent exhibition across the way justly claims much of our attention. But with all these allurements let us not forget that the eye of the world is upon us and that important business awaits our attention first.

Secretary Hauswirth presented his report, as follows:

Secretary's Report.

As your secretary, I submit this, my first annual report, for your consideration.

By instructions of the executive committee I proceeded to Boston the first week in January, to have the property of the society transferred to me by my predecessor. It was to be expected that a vast amount of material had accumulated in the number of years that the position of secretary was held by our president, William J. Stewart, and the committee instructed me to destroy all documents that were of no value to the society.

Considerable difficulty was encountered this year in procuring reduced rates from the various passenger associations, on account of the enactment of a 2-cent rate in a number of states. This was especially true in the territory governed by the Western and Central Passenger Associations and they refused to grant us the usual concessions. The rate of a fare and a third was granted by the following associations: Trunk Line Association, New England Passenger Association, Southeastern Passenger Association, and Eastern Canadian Association. The Central Passenger Association granted us card orders which empowered their agents to sell through round-trip tickets to Philadelphia at the rate of 2 cents a mile each way in the territory controlled by them and the rate of one and one-third fare in the territory controlled by the associations that granted us the latter rate. This concession enabled a member to procure a round trip ticket that would only have to be validated at the ticket office when he was ready to return, within the time limit of his ticket. The Western Passenger Association would not grant any concession, but referred us to the one-way tourist rates in effect in their territory to St. Louis and Chicago, and advised our members to buy to those points and then use card orders. In addition to the above, the cheap rates from all points to the Jamestown exposition and the merchants' rate to New York, with very liberal stopover, were in effect.

The executive committee at Philadelphia instructed me to continue the badge book, providing it could be supplied to the members at an expense not to exceed $75. I could not procure it at that price and therefore did not issue the book.

The membership statistics, as they appear on the books to January 1, 1907, are as follows: Total number of life members, 124; total number of annual members, 696; total, 820.

The membership is credited as follows to the different states:

Life.	nual.	Life.	nual.
Alabama	8	Missouri	8 29
California	5	Nebraska	2
Colorado	8	New Hampshire	4
Connecticut	14	New Jersey	8 20
Delaware	1	New York	22 102
Dist. of Columbia	7 16	North Carolina	2 5
Florida	4	Ohio	8 82
Georgia	1 10	Oregon	1
Illinois	7 81	Pennsylvania	17 96
Indiana	2 27	Rhode Island	8
Iowa	10	South Carolina	1
Kansas	1 4	South Dakota	1
Kentucky	3 8	Tennessee	1
Louisiana	9	Texas	1 1
Maine	1	Virginia	5
Maryland	2 22	West Virginia	4
Massachusetts	19 43	Washington	1
Michigan	9 30	Wisconsin	1 16
Minnesota	3 9	Canada	7
Mississippi	1	Holland	1

The question of how to retain our membership, after getting their names enrolled, is one that needs our attention.

In looking over the records of past years I find that a great number have allowed themselves to be dropped from membership who ought to be numbered on our list. The various vice-presidents can accomplish considerable in retaining these names and I am pleased to note that a number of them have made efforts in that direction.

Since the last report we have lost five members by death, three being life and two annual members, as follows:

Lewis Ullrich, Tifton, O., October 29, 1906.

J. L. Dillon, Bloomsburg, Pa., October 30, 1906.

Jas. Braik, Buffalo, N. Y., January 16, 1907.

J. F. Kretschmar, Flatbush, N. Y., June 8, 1907.

Samuel Henshaw, New Brighton, N. Y., July 23, 1907.

Since last report the following new plant names have been registered:

September 29, 1906.—Canna Sunburst, by Central Park Nursery, Topeka, Kan.

October 27, 1906.—Rosa rugosa magnifica, by Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa.

October 27, 1906.—Canna Meteor, by Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa.

October 27, 1906.—Lælio-Cattleya Washington A. Roebling II, by C. G. Roebling, Trenton, N. J.

November 24, 1906.—Carnation Toreador, by H. Weber & Sons Co., Oakland, Md.

November 24, 1906.—Chrysanthemum Weber's Chadwick, by H. Weber & Sons Co., Oakland, Md.

September 22, 1906.—Canna Magnificent, by Central Park Nursery Co., Topeka, Kan.

February 6, 1907.—Chrysanthemum Golden Dome, by John A. Macrae, Providence, R. I.

February 28, 1907.—Sweet Peas Le Marquis, Mrs. George Lewis, Mrs. A. Zvolanek, Mrs. Charles H. Totty, by A. C. Zvolanek, Boundbrook, N. J.

March 18, 1907.—Rose White Killarney, by Waban Conservatories, Natick, Mass.

August 10, 1907.—Rambler Rose Newport Fairy, by Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.

August 17, 1907.—Rose President Roosevelt, by Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa.

In closing I desire to state that having assumed the office of secretary after January 1, several of the subjects covered were during the term of my predecessor.

Other Reports.

The state vice-presidents' reports were presented and referred to a committee for consideration and publication.

Benj. Hammond, for the committee on legislation, made a report, which has previously been published in the REVIEW, relating to the duty on glass. The report was accepted and the subject was about to be dropped when W. F. Gude said that it was a shame to dismiss so good a committee in so perfunctory a manner and that he was sorry to see so little apparent interest in the work of the society as was indicated by the rapidly clearing hall. This precipitated a lively discussion, which, as E. V. Hal-lock said, narrowly escaped being political argument. Messrs. Gude, Lenker, O'Mara, Kasting, Hill, Beatty, Farenwald, Fulmer, Peck and others gave their ideas on the tariff and on glass making and the result was that Mr. Hammond's committee was continued, with Messrs. O'Mara and Hill added, to seek to create public sentiment in favor of a reduction in the duty on glass.

The Trade Exhibition.

The trade exhibitors, up to Thursday noon, were as follows:

Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, had a full line of samples on display. The plant group included the various sizes and varieties of palms and several of the new ferns, among them Todeaoides and Amerpohlii. Some fine plants of Phoenix Roebelenii were shown, a lot of 5-inch cocos, araucarias, begonias, ferns for dishes and a great variety of commercial stock from Riverton. The other section of the exhibit included bulbs, glazing points and the usual complete line of garden requisites shown in previous years by this house.

W. P. Craig, Philadelphia, had a table of Nephrolepis Amerpohlii, to which he has given the popular name of Philadelphia lace fern. He showed all sizes, from 2-inch up to 10-inch, and the character was just as distinct in the smallest as in the largest plants. The fern makes a hit with everyone. Mr. Craig also showed a fine line of Italian ceramic urns in many shapes.

Julius Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J., had one of the largest displays in the building, his plants having made a carload. He had a number of palms of specimen size, as well as the usual commercial sizes. There also was a table of crotons, adiantums, ficuses and a variety of stove and greenhouse plants. Another table was occupied by a fine display of orchids in bloom. The arrangement was especially good.

F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.,

had an exhibit which for attracting attention was second to none. It included a fine lot of Harrisii and French bulbs, but what all visitors noted with especial interest was the display of the new fern Nephrolepis superbissima, another sport from Boston but quite distinct, not only for the shape of frond, which is erect and dense, but also in color, which is a very dark green. It is peculiarly striking under artificial light.

Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, had three fine tables of plants, one of crotons that made a beautiful effect, and one of Ficus pandurata, which is a leading specialty at the Craig place. The other table carried a variety of stock, including Adiantum hybridum, asplenium, cyclamen, Lorraine begonias, oranges, dracenas, gardenias, etc., of course all well grown.

W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., had a fine lot of large plants, including Dracena Mandiana, a novelty; a variety of orchids in flower and a great variety of stove and greenhouse plants, also some cut boxwood, which has become quite an important specialty, Mr. Manda handling many tons of it last season.

Edward Amerpohl, Janesville, Wis., showed a table of Nephrolepis Amerpohlii, mostly plants in small pots, but each one showed completely the character of the plant in its larger sizes.

Carrillo & Baldwin, Secaucus, N. J., had an attractive display of orchids, seasonable varieties in bloom and several bottles of cut blooms of cattleyas of fine quality. They also showed some freshly imported plants.

Lemuel Ball, Wissinoming, Pa., had his usual line of kentias and in addition a number of bright-hued crotons, all well grown stock.

Joseph Heacock, Wyncote, Pa., had a display of his specialty, the kentia, in a large number of sizes, each plant being an example of how Mr. Heacock thinks the kentia should be grown. There was much sympathy expressed for Mr. Heacock in the circumstances which prevented his attendance in person.

William Graham.

(Chairman Committee on Bowling Tournament.)

Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., a bank of cut blooms of pedigreed American cannas, each variety plainly labeled and the whole embracing a wide range of color, from Mont Blanc to deepest and brightest red.

W. C. Smith, Philadelphia, staged a group of Boston, Scottii and Whitmani ferns, ficus, etc., in the town hall.

Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., had a fine table of orchids, the collection embracing a large number of varieties in bloom, as well as some freshly imported stock.

Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., brought over some large bays and a big display of evergreens in tubs, the collection including only one plant of a variety.

Godfrey Aschmann, Philadelphia, had a table of well grown araucarias, nephrolepis, cocoses, etc.

W. K. Harris, Philadelphia, had a table of ferns, crotons, variegated bougainvilleas, dracenas, gardenias, African violets and other plants.

The Wm. H. Moon Co., Morrisville, Pa., had a group of evergreens in tubs, one plant each of a number of popular varieties.

C. D. Ball, Philadelphia, had a line of his well grown kentias on display, also good latanias, arecas, cocoses, etc.

Thomas Meehan & Sons, Dreshertown, Pa., made an exhibit of their new race of perennial hibiscus.

James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., exhibited a table of aster blooms, and some of its literature. They say dry weather is affecting the asters and fear for the seed crop.

Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y., had two banks of cut spikes of gladioli, a total of many hundreds of blooms. Groff's hybrids were largely represented. The quality was good throughout the large display, which was kept in fresh condition throughout.

John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y., exhibited a big bank of gladioli, his collection embracing all the leading strains of the world, with Gladiolus America the finest thing in the exhibit, standing out among many good things.

E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., exhibited a vase of its new red rose, Rhea Reid, very fine for so early in the season.

E. H. Cushman, Sylvania, O., exhibited some fine blooms of Lilium Philippense, which were new to most of those in attendance.

H. J. Smith, Hinsdale, Mass., had a table of cut ferns and evergreens for decorations.

Bombayreed Mfg. Co., Columbus, S. C., a large display of its artistic and serviceable jardinières, baskets and pot covers, in a great variety of shapes and sizes. These are in many colors and combinations of colors, but foliage greens predominate. This is the first time this line has been shown at a convention and it was examined with much interest.

Reed & Keller, New York, showed the largest line this well-known house has ever exhibited at a convention. Their display covered more space than any other in its class and contained a large number of the inventions for which the firm is famous, including special wire designs. Especially good is a line of Russian novelty boxes, baskets, etc., for plant arrangements. The folding canopy with wedding bell was there, also a new bamboo screen, lattice birch tubs, Italian ceramics, a patent swivel pot hanger, besides a line of baskets, hampers and many other things.

with the fresh importations. At the convention hall the monster twig urn attracted most attention. Bouquet-holders in ombre and shower effect looked good. A 4-foot sheaf and sickle of wheat stood out from the numerous items on the 40-foot table. Preserved adiantum, pteris and asparagus foliage was attractive. Of course there was toneware, and many other things.

Wertheimer Bros., New York, did not show any of the staple ribbons, having so large a line of novelties as to fill a long table. They were particularly strong on chiffons and had several new flower colors in heavy taffeta ribbon. Among the new violet ties were some with chiffon bells and butterflies.

Jos. G. Neidinger, Philadelphia, a fine line of wax designs in loose and natural effect, also sheaves and metallic designs and a line of Christmas novelties, immortelle bells hung in holly arrangements.

J. Stern & Co., Philadelphia, a large line of supplies, including novelty crepe designs, baskets, mats, metallic and wax wreaths and designs, wheat sheaves and a variety of imported novelties for hanging in decorative effect.

W. J. Boas & Co., Philadelphia, a line of paper boxes.

Edwards Folding Box Co., Philadelphia, a display of cut flower boxes.

Robert Kift, Philadelphia, a display of the well-known Kift flower vases.

Philadelphia Flag Co., Philadelphia, a neat display of florists' letters and inscribed ribbons and bows.

A. T. Boddington, New York, had a broad banner alliteratively lettered, "Boddington's Bulbs Bloom," and under it was a table on which about every themselves with a single piece from their great stock of supplies. This was a 6-foot willow stump, like the one illustrated in last week's REVIEW. It stood in a corner hung with velvet draperies and the flower receptacles in the stump were filled with rudbeckias and hydrangeas. It made a splendid effect. An attendant was on hand to invite visitors to the rathskeller at the store, where all comers were offered refreshments and a guide to show them through the building and stock. Hundreds accepted the invitation.

Schloss Bros., New York, occupied a table forty feet long with their ribbon display. Each year sees them with a larger line than the season before and always there are in it some new things, like new shades or blending of colors, new ideas in chiffons, etc. They make a specialty of violet ties and have some good novelties, those with violets reproduced in white or purple in the weave being especially good.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, had a splendid showing of ribbons at the top of the grand stairway. This department is E. J. Fancourt's special province and the artistic arrangement always is a feature of his display. He not only knows what florists want, but he knows how to show his stock to best advantage. Some especially good things were shown in foliage greens, the two toned and ombre effects.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, did not make nearly so large a display as usual; just enough to excite the interest of visitors and get them down to the big new store on Arch street, which is stocked from cellar to garret, or, rather from basement to roof-garden, seasonable bulb was displayed. The display was particularly strong on large sizes of Paper Whites and French Romans.

H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, had mushroom spawn at one end of its exhibit and went on, through To-bakine and other insecticides, fertilizers, bulbs, hose, thermometers, pruning shears, and glazing materials to Harrisii and French bulbs. The display was one of the largest and embraced nearly every greenhouse and garden requisite.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, had a large display of Harrisii, French Romans and other seasonable bulbs, also several vases of gladioli, including Princeps.

Lord & Burnham Co., New York, made a big exhibit, putting up three sectional and a round boiler and showing a large line of fittings, etc. A section of a greenhouse also was erected, full size, embodying the special features of the firm's construction, which now cover nearly every part of the structure, as applied to either wood or iron construction.

The Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago, put up a section of side wall and roof of a greenhouse, showing their gutter and roof construction and their ventilating apparatus. They gave away a cypress fan and also showed a window-brush that takes its water through a hose attached to the handle.

John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, a model greenhouse, embodying the firm's ideas on construction and showing the Chicago ventilator.

The King Construction Co., N. Tonawanda, N. Y., put up a section of a

W. W. Castle, Boston, a fire-box (steel) boiler with an electric circulator in operation, causing the water to circulate in part through a section of glass pipe, so that the action of the circulation pump could be seen not only as in use but in effect, through the glass. This was one of the most interesting exhibits in the hall, and a special attraction for growers.

H. L. Gara Co., Philadelphia, an insecticidal soap, called Alco-Naptha.

Hummel & Downing, Milwaukee, exhibited their line of cut flower boxes.

Dayton Paper Novelty Co., Dayton, O., the usual display of cut flower boxes as shown at many previous conventions.

A novel feature of the trade display was that nearly every stand was equipped with a local and long-distance telephone.

In addition to the above, all the available wall space was occupied by exhibitors represented by signs.

President's Reception.

The president's reception on Tuesday evening, at the Broad Street theater, was a most enjoyable occasion. President Stewart was assisted, in the formal greeting of the large assembly, by Mr. and Mrs. Hauswirth, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Beatty, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Kasting, W. R. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Craig and J. D. Carmody. The big theater was filled to the doors with members and guests. The Philadelphia Club provided an elaborate vaudeville entertainment, followed by a delicious luncheon, and the reception was one of the most successful of its kind in the annals of the S. A. F.

Wednesday's Proceedings.

There was considerable increase in attendance Wednesday and old members estimated that the total number present, including those from near-by towns in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, was the greatest in the history of the society. As on the opening day, the handsomely decorated Broad Street theater was well filled after Sergeant-at-Arms Bunyard had used his persuasive and coercive powers to clear the exhibition hall. The first order of business was the presentation of a paper on "Boxing Plants," written by Alois Frey, of Chicago, and read by Wilfrid Wheeler, of Concord, Mass. This was followed by a paper on "Shrubs and Evergreens," by S. C. Moon, of Morrisville, Pa. Each was excellent, and after considerable discussion on handling evergreens, both essays were given votes of thanks.

R. Vincent, Jr., George A. Kuhl and John G. Esler were appointed as the committee to consider the state vice-presidents' reports.

The selection of a place for next year's meeting being in order, ex-Mayor Cutler, of Niagara Falls, again extended an invitation in behalf of his city. W. F. Kasting, on behalf of the Buffalo florists, seconded Mr. Cutler's invitation. Philip Breitmeyer, on behalf of the Detroit Florists' Club, extended an invitation to Detroit, and August Poehlmann, for the Chicago Florists' Club, invited the society to Chicago, but said that he did so with the full consciousness that with the Rose Society in March and the national flower show in November Chicago was asking a great deal. John Westcott spoke for Niagara Falls, and so did several others, with the result that after Mr. Breitmeyer had withdrawn in favor of Niagara Falls the society voted to have the secretary cast a unanimous ballot for that city.

J. K. M. L. Farquahar, for the committee on change of name, reported that after considering all phases of this important matter the committee had voted to recommend that steps be taken to change the title to Society of American Horticulture. F. E. Palmer, of Brookline, endorsed the committee's action and put it in the form of a motion, which was seconded by Robert Craig. The matter being open for debate, the warmest discussion in the recent annals of the society was precipitated. Some speakers favored broadening the title to include everybody and others replied that such action would carry the society away from the original idea of a trade body. F. R. Pierson moved an amendment making the title Society of American Florists and Horticulturists. Patrick O'Mara seconded this motion. This precipitated still further debate and as the time was pressing and almost everyone wanted to be heard on the subject, further consideration was postponed to Thursday morning.

Wednesday Evening's Session.

Broad Street theater was crowded Wednesday evening to listen to an illustrated lecture by J. Otto Thilow, of the Henry A. Dreer Co., on "The Flora of Yellowstone Park." Mr. Thilow proved himself a second Burton Holmes as a travel lecturer, and held the close attention of his big audience for nearly two hours, with interesting description and bright stories of his trips through the great national park, where he met the omnipresent Pat O'Mara and caught some snap-shots of him which were thrown on the screen along with the many beautiful pictures of the wonders of nature with which Mr. Thilow illustrated his lecture. He concluded his talk on the park flora with flowers of speech in connection with portraits of leading members of the society, thrown on the screen.

Hail Association.

The Florists' Hail Association held its annual meeting and listened to reports of officers on a most prosperous year. Two directors were elected and officers reelected.

Rose Society.

A meeting of the American Rose Society was held on the steamer en route to Dreer's. The purpose of the meeting was to afford a chance for the Chicago people to confer with the eastern members as to the details of the show in Chicago next March. Vice-president Breitmeyer presided.

Ladies' Auxiliary.

The ladies' auxiliary held two meetings to complete its organization. At the first meeting a committee on by-laws was appointed and at the second these were adopted. Mrs. W. J. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, was elected president, and Mrs. C. H. Maynard, of Detroit, secretary.

The Trip to Riverton

The afternoon of Wednesday, set apart for a trip to the establishment of Henry A. Dreer, at Riverton, was showery, but it did not spoil one of the most inspiring entertainments that the society has ever enjoyed. The host had chartered the big steamer, Columbia, for the trip up the Delaware and, in spite of the heavy rain which fell just at the announced hour of sailing, the boat carried nearly a thousand people and an orchestra. It was an interesting sail, past the big shipyards and the gun club's grounds at Wissinoming, where the convention shooting tournament was then in progress, the gunners firing a salute as the steamer passed. Arrived at the greenhouses, a bountiful luncheon was partaken of, in the big packing shed, the refreshments being served by white-aproned greenhouse employees. William F. Dreer, head of the institution, was introduced by President Stewart and spoke briefly of the pleasure it afforded them to have the opportunity of entertaining the convention. He said he wanted to say a word for the other officers, to whom, he said, credit is due, rather than to himself, for whatever was found to be worthy of commendation. The two hours which followed were too short to afford opportunity to see the half of the interesting things in the great range of glass, the rain precluding much examination of the acres of stock in the fields. The place always is spick and span and probably a greater variety of stock is grown here, and all grown well, than in any other florist's establishment in America. Considerable outdoor stock had been cut and was attractively displayed under cover, and all through the place the guests were seen taking notes of varieties for future guidance, everything being carefully labeled. The return was by steamer at 7 o'clock.

Except for the luncheon at Bayersdorfer's the trip to Dreer's was the only visit to a place of trade interest as a feature of the regular program. But there are many hospitable growers about Philadelphia and they all had a number of visitors, who came singly and in parties.

At the establishment of the Robert Craig Co., Forty-ninth and Market, the visitors found a superb stock of all the leading varieties of foliage plants. Ficus pandurata, grown in cedar tubs, for hotel and restaurant decoration, was a striking feature. These plants are so durable that they can be used almost anywhere advantageously. Well colored crotons were another specialty, exceptionally well done. Dracæna terminalis was in fine shape, well colored and thrifty. Among the flowering plants, cyclamens in the frames were most promising. Five houses at this place were devoted to William P. Craig's Nephrolepis Amerpohl, which is an exquisite thing with a bright future.

The Joseph Heacock Co., at Wyncote, showed visitors as pretty a lot of kettias as one could wish to see. They are all home grown from seed grown on the place, clean and in thrifty condition, in all sizes, from the seed-pan up to finished specimens suitable for a large dec-man. This firm is a large importer, but has only in the last few months handled these florists' requisites and has not exhibited heretofore.

The Whilldin Pottery Co., Philadelphia, a complete line of the standard sizes of pots, both full depth and half depth, etc.

The Keller Pottery Co., Norristown, Pa., a large line of red pots, azalea pots, fern and bulb pans in various sizes.

A. H. Hews & Co., Cambridge, Mass., made the usual showing of flower pots and azalea or bulb pans.

oration. It would be difficult to find a sturdier lot of kentias anywhere. American Beauties are to this company in roses what kentias are in palms, filling the bulk of the houses in that department.

Charles D. Ball had a score of houses filled with well grown foliage plants, at Holmesburg. His stock is well balanced, all the leading varieties of palms and ferns being found here, as well as several varieties not usually met with. The entire place impresses one as being businesslike, with a good grower and a good business man in charge.

Visitors to William K. Harris found a fine range of glass at Fifty-fifth and Springfield avenue, in West Philadelphia. His specialty is flowering plants, for Christmas, Easter and other times. The most advertised feature of his place is a house built entirely of plate glass, considered to be the most economical house there. It is easily heated and will fruit oranges or perfect the foliage of Pandanus Veitchii without burning with equal facility. An immense shed down the center of the place, into which the houses open from each side, will accommodate teams for loading plants.

Myers & Samtman, at Wyndmoor, Chestnut Hill, have become Beauty specialists of the first rank. Their houses are all, save one, devoted to this rose, and their stock is as well known in Pittsburgh as in Philadelphia. All the plants are bench grown and in fine condition. Their new rose, as yet unnamed, a seedling from American Beauty and Safrano, is very promising and many went out to look at it. This seedling is the only rival to the Beauty on the place.

Robert Scott & Sons have an immense range of glass at Sharon Hill, on the B. & O., nine miles south of Philadelphia. Their specialties are grafted Killarney, Richmond, and Kaiserin, all grown in solid beds. They are agents for Alexander Dickson & Sons, Newtownards, near Belfast, Ireland, and try out their best seedling roses for the American market. Mrs. Jardine, a soft pink, is being grown in quantity for distribution next spring. The visitors all spoke highly of its appearance.

The Andorra Nurseries have nearly 600 acres in three patches just north of Chestnut Hill. The nursery is beautifully laid out, having a variety of soil and situation. Rhododendrons, evergreens, flowering shrubs and rare trees are specialties. William Warner Harper, the proprietor, prides himself on being able to supply everything required for a country place whose wants are most exacting and they had many visitors this week.

John Burton has an immense range of glass, much of it built of Lord & Burnham material, at Chestnut Hill. With his sons, Alfred Burton and George Burton, he is a most important factor in the Beauty market of his city and of the eastern seaboard. Ground beds are evidently more in favor at all three places than benches. Visitors found the stock all thrifty and in fine growing condition.

Visitors to A. Farenwald found a fine range of glass devoted to roses. His Liberties were for years a little better than anything seen elsewhere, visitors coming from all parts of the country to see them. He now grows that rose less extensively, having increased planting of American Beauty and added Killarney and Richmond. Edward Towill, his neighbor, has made a hit with Liberty and also with Richmond, which he grows exceptionally well. He also grows Beauties in fine shape, and dabbles successfully in novelties. Both these growers favor ground beds. Victor Groshens has just built two immense houses 29x500, on the truss plan, King Construction Co. material, which are ideal. Brides, Maids and Richmond are the varieties grown. They are planted on benches and are in a most promising condition.

The Florex Gardens have just completed an immense structure 156x575 feet at North Wales. They have used King plans and iron work, and Moninger roofing material, with concrete sides. Their house is thirty-two feet high at the ridge and supported by six rows of posts. It is entirely filled with American Beauty roses, 45,000 plants being used. Half of these are in benches and half are in beds. Growers are much interested in this house and many visited it.

Godfrey Aschmann has a compact place devoted to pot plants at 1012 Ontario street. His stock is chiefly in medium sizes of the best commercial varieties; araucarias and nephrolepis are at present leaders. It is evident that a good shipping business is being done and that no effort is spared to produce what the market requires.

Edward A. Stroud has some superb modern houses, built by Hitchings & Co., at Stratford. Carnations are his specialty. All the leading varieties were found here.

The Hugh Graham Co. has 100,000 feet of glass, at Logan, devoted to growing stock needed in the William Graham Co. retail business in Philadelphia. This company also does a large business with the department stores, as well as a general jobbing business, and visitors found much of interest there.

Those who visited Casper and George L. Pennock found a large place at Lansdowne. About half their place is devoted to American Beauties, the balance to teas and hybrid teas, all in good shape.

Judges' Report.

The judges on novelties in the trade exhibit, C. H. Vick, F. E. Palmer and Adolphus Gude, reported the following awards:

Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., Cannas Wm. Saunders and New York, honorable mention; W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., Dracena Mandaiana, certificate of merit; Charles Eble, New Orleans, unnamed nephrolepis, honorable mention; F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., Nephrolepis superbissima, honorable mention; John Lewis Childs, Floral park, N. Y., white Gladiolus No. 27, certificate of merit; D. B. Long, Buffalo, N. Y., printed matter, highly commended; George B. Hart, Rochester, N. Y., wire pot handle, certificate of merit; Wilson & Hought, Summit, N. J., concrete bench, honorable mention; M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, willow stump, highly commended; Dayton Paper Novelty Co., Dayton, O., paper boxes, highly commended.

Nomination of Officers.

When it came to nomination of officers there was a great flow of eulogistic oratory. For president W. F. Kasting nominated Frank H. Traendly, of New York, and J. C. Vaughan nominated J. R. Freeman, of Washington. For vice-president Benjamin Hammond nominated W. W. Cutler, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., and W. F. Kasting nominated George McClure, of Buffalo, N. Y. For secretary Mr. Kasting nominated P. J. Hauswirth, of Chicago. For treasurer John Westcott nominated H. B. Beatty, of Pittsburg. There were several seconds in each case.

Change in Name.

The motion to petition congress to amend the name of the society was the first order of business Thursday. The debate occupied two hours and brought out widely divergent views, and President Stewart's knowledge of parliamentary practice was all that made it possible to get a final decision. In the end Mr. Pierson's amendment to strike out the one word "ornamental" from the present title was concurred in by a vote of eighty-seven to sixteen. After congress amends the national charter the title will be Society of American Florists and Horticulturists.

Thursday's Proceedings.

Telegrams of condolence were ordered sent to ex-Presidents William Scott and M. H. Norton, who are ill.

E. V. Hallock's paper on bulbous plants was read and drew out many questions.

David Rust presented his report as supreme tenderer of the trades display, enumerating the exhibitors.

A committee consisting of James Dean, J. K. M. L. Farquhar and H. B. Howard was appointed on final resolutions.

The balance of the session was filled by discussion of the school garden movement, introduced by papers by E. V. Hallock and W. B. DuRie.

Officers Elected.

In the election 310 votes were cast. For president, F. H. Traendly received 163 and J. R. Freeman 147.

For vice-president, George McClure received 263 and W. W. Cutler 40.

Secretary Hauswirth and Treasurer Beatty were reelected without opposition.

Afternoon was given over to the ladies' entertainment at Willow Grove and to the boating contests.

HARDY BULBS AND ROOTS.

By E. V. HALLOCK, OF QUEENS, N. Y.

[Read before the Society of American Florists, in convention at Philadelphia, August 21, 1907.]

The most interesting, the least known, and the most misunderstood of flowering plants are bulbs. In the form of a bulb the latent flower is cared for more easily and longer than in any other form. Bulbs have been used as sustenance for armies, and the caladiums are now used to some extent by Spanish-speaking people, and through the south, as an article of diet.

This paper will not touch on what are known as Holland bulbs, but will embrace summer-flowering and winter-flowering bulbs that are used by the amateur and the professional. The profession of raising bulbs for market and for the amateur is vastly different from the profession of raising flowers for market. The person who raises the bulbs seldom sees the flower in so great perfection as the man who flowers the bulb.

Amateur Bulb Growers.

There are many skillful raisers of bulbs among the amateur cultivators, and in fact I think many amateurs have come to a better understanding of the wants of many kinds of bulbs, and raise them in greater perfection, than any professional. These amateurs, however, do not cover a very wide range of bulbs.

Unless a person has seen the late Peter Hanson holding a bulb in his hand, rapt in blissful contemplation, slowly telling the wants of the bulb in cultivation, describing its habit and its flower minutely, he has no idea of what a hold on the affections a bulb could exert. Mr. Hanson's time and devotion were expended on the lily. He overestimated its necessities. As I have always found, if you can get a bulb growing you can dispense with many of the directions for growing, but Mr. Hanson, no doubt, took as much pleasure in catering to the growth of bulbs as he did in seeing their flowers.

Mr. Huftelen is the most skillful and successful raiser of Lilium tenuifolium from the seed I have ever seen. I think his product exceeded for many years 30,000 bulbs, of which we bought yearly, during that time, at least 20,000 bulbs at $15 a hundred—rather good pin-money for an amateur on so little known a variety.

I think it is now about time I got down to the subject of bulbs and bulbous plants. I well know that a paper of this kind, to a man who does not raise bulbous plants, either in a commercial way or as an amateur, is positively without interest. Of course, any one knows that a person could talk all day on one class of bulbs, but I propose to skim the subject very lightly.

Most Valuable Classes.

The most useful, valuable, and generally raised classes of bulbs, to my mind, are as follows, their relative proportion of value being indicated by the order in which they are named: Gladioli; lilies; freesias; peonies, at present a highly worked fad; tuberose, for garden and export; and irises, the Japanese and German, the forcing irises, and many beautiful species.

Professionally speaking, the introduction of so important a plant as the freesia—useful and beautiful as it is, so easily kept and readily flowered by both the amateur and the professional—was a fiasco, in the sense that no particular person or firm was responsible for its introduction, and no considerable amount was made by any one with this plant that is so generally used.

The amaryllis, to me, has always been an important family. The habits of most varieties can be so changed that they will flower outside in summer or inside in winter. I much regret that this plant is not more largely grown in this country.

The tuberous-rooted begonias have taken their place as summer-flowering bulbs, as well as winter-flowering.

Caladium esculentum is rather largely used as a summer foliage plant.

Cannas are the most important rhizomatous class of plants. Everyone knows a good deal about this class of plants. A canna society has even been suggested.

The cinnamon vine (Dioscorea Batatas) has some value, particularly to the person who sells the bulbs. It is a clean, hardy vine, and one peculiarity is that the root grows deeper and deeper in the ground the older it gets.

Gloxinias are being raised largely and sold very cheap.

Hyacinthus candicans first attracted attention in this country at the Philadelphia centennial.

A Plant With a Future.

Incarvillea is a coming plant, particularly as a garden flower, and undoubtedly can be forced. It has a large, fleshy, good-keeping root; foliage rampant, growth somewhat resembling a fern; immense spikes of gloxinia-like flowers. If you plant 500 strong roots, the flowers will absolutely come in bloom the same day. It is claimed by some that the roots are hardy.

A Field of Phloxes at the Henry A. Dreer Establishment, Riverton, N. J.

The Mold in Place for the Wittbold Cement Bench.

Madeira vine bulbs keep almost indefinitely and are, therefore, a good bulb for store trade.

Why the montbretia is so neglected, I cannot tell. It has many good qualities, is easier to raise, easier to keep, and will continue in flower much longer, than the gladiolus. The sprays are exceedingly graceful and beautiful. The newer varieties are very striking. The bulbs are nearly hardy.

The summer-flowering varieties of oxalis are largely planted and have some merit, while the winter-blooming sorts, as lutea, Bowiei and the so-called Bermuda buttercup, are among the best of the winter-flowering plants.

Peonies and Dahlias.

Can I tell the members of the Peony Society anything about peonies? I think not; but, by the way, it just occurs to me to say that I have bought during the last three or four years, from the most reliable firms who raise peonies, some twelve or fifteen of the best varieties, several plants of each kind, for my private garden. When they bloomed this year, should you take out four of the best colors there would be nothing worth speaking of left. Marie Lemoine is what I call a good peony.

Dahlias, as we very well know, are an important class of plants. These alone could be made the subject of a long talk. At one time there was a dahlia society; perhaps there is now. I will only touch on a few points. Many seedlings will bloom the first year. Many beautiful varieties of dahlias produce few flowers. With all the many varieties, a sort that will commence to bloom early and continue through the season, with a profusion of bloom, and do it every year, will always have some value. It is a well-known fact that the single sorts are the most reliable bloomers and produce the most flowers.

Notwithstanding the fact that bulbs and bulbous and fleshy-rooted plants form the most important division of flowers, they have never had such close attention from our professional class as cut flowers, simply because there is not the money in them. They are slower to produce, and the outlet is through smaller channels, than if they belonged to the more profitable branches of the profession.

A Point for Catalogue Men.

There are two points I wish to bring to the attention of the profession and the venders of its products.

We all catalogue the different kinds of bulbs as though they were ready for delivery at the same time, and in most cases we try to deliver them. Is it not about time we should state after the description of certain bulbs that they can only be delivered at such and such times? And should not the buyers be taught to wait until the bulbs are in condition to deliver, instead of insisting that they all be delivered at once?

Is it not about time that reliable firms should state that such and such varieties will never bloom, or, if in a very rare case they do bloom, that they are not good for anything? Millions of Anomatheca cruenta have been sold. Should five out of a hundred of these bloom, as poor as the flower is, it would be a large percentage. Seedling gladiolus has been sent to this country for this plant. How many people here have seen Lilium Humboldtii, L. Washingtonianum and L. parvum bloom? I have never seen twelve spikes of these varieties of lilies outside of California, and I have sold tens of thousands of the bulbs, and exported a number each year. This will serve for an evening-up process.

Hardy Lilies.

Lilium pardalinum from California is a good-keeping, free, and sure-flowering lily. Ninety-five per cent of the bulbs should bloom.

Lilium Parryi is a very handsome yellow variety from California and is not difficult to bloom. The California bulbs, like Calochortus, brodiaeas, Erithronium, Camassias, are all beautiful things and really can be flowered if their requirements of cultivation are met.

On the line of Lilium Humboldtii, I will ask, what is the use of selling Lilium candidum in the spring? And yet many do it.

I suppose it would be well to mention what I consider the most valuable varieties, or species, of lilies. The auratums and varieties are a magnificent class and very popular with most amateurs. You may as well say that the bulbs of the auratum cannot be grown in this country but are imported each year. The varieties of speciosum I consider some of the most reliable sorts for the amateur to plant.

Double tiger and single tiger and our native lilies, Canadense and superbum, are being used in greater quantities each year, on large estates and in gardens of all kinds. They are low in price, reliable bloomers, and very graceful, particularly Canadense.

The Lilium elegans, L. umbellatum, and L. Thunbergianum are very reliable bloomers, bulbs easy growers and good keepers, and many varieties are very handsome.

Florist's Most Important Lilies.

Of course, we could easily talk all day on the lily family, but we shall have to stop somewhere. Lilium candidum and what is known as the Bermuda Easter lily are the most important ones for florists' use. Lilium candidum should be planted outside, the latter part of September. To me, it is a more beautiful lily than the Bermuda Easter lily. There are several varieties of candidum, but the broad scale, large bulb variety raised in the north of France is the only one worth forcing. There has been more said, and more can be said, on the Bermuda Easter lily than ten such papers as this would contain. I think the subject has been pretty well thrashed out up to the present time.

Many varieties of lilies have been dropped from the lists of late years, which is probably a good thing. Many sorts could be furnished in good condition if the purchaser were willing to pay for the necessary trouble, and to take and plant the bulbs at the proper time.

Lilium Philadelphicum has almost disappeared from our lists. It can be grown and flowered, but the bulb is so small and the scales so open, that not one in a thousand will bloom.

Lilium catesbaei and L. Grayi, also native lilies, are seldom seen except in botanical collections.

Fallacies in Cultivation.

There are some fallacies in cultivation. Many directions for growing different varieties of plants were put in type a number of years ago, when things were thought to require very careful and necessary cultivation. There is a lot of this type that seems to be set up at the present time. I will take as an illustration Iris Kämpferi. In 1878, we bought Professor Pringle's entire stock of this plant. There were many very fine varieties, and many of the kinds are sold today. We noticed that the clumps, when being subdivided for planting, had a large center that was entirely dead or dried up; in many you could put your hand right through the center. This came from leaving the clumps too long before subdividing. We were told that this plant required damp, low ground and if it could be covered by water occasionally it would be better. We planted them on common Long Island plains soil, two feet of soil above clear sand, fifty feet above water. William Falconer, in describing our plantation of iris, said he walked "waist deep" through the plants. When transplanting a field of these, we used a cart and wheelbarrows, and subdivided them with an axe. One year we left several hundred plants along a driveway on top of the ground, when transplanting in the spring. In the fall these plants were alive. Personally, I don't think it is necessary that Iris Kämpferi should be flooded with water to produce a good growth.

As this subject seems to be large, and it is necessary and proper that this paper should be short, it is pretty difficult to give anything of real value. But the subject may excite an interest in more people than have ever given it a thought before, and I assure you that it will furnish you a new interest so far as you desire to go.

Bulbs Nature's Storehouse.

Bulbs represent one of the most wonderful provisions of nature in the vegetable kingdom. Those grown in arid or desert countries conserve their vitality intact longer than bulbs grown anywhere else. The Mexican bulbs, grown mostly in arid wastes, will remain in perfect condition when kept out of the ground a year. I believe that bulbs of Amaryllis formosissima will remain two years out of the ground in good condition.

Removing the Molds from a Wittbold Cement Bench.

It seems to be a provision of nature to preserve the life of a plant by building around the germ a bulb, and this is one of the most convenient and compact of protective forms.

The most striking fact about all bulbs is their endless variety and great beauty, often extending to magnificence. It is this which gives fascination to the subject and makes the raising of bulbs a labor of love.

WITTBOLD'S CEMENT BENCH.

The accompanying illustrations show in detail the character of bench invented by Louis Wittbold and which has been adopted for use throughout the establishment of the George Wittbold Co., Chicago. As fast as the old benches wear out they are being replaced with the cement kind.

In the first illustration the framework for the bench is shown. This consists merely of boards clamped into position to form a mold into which cement is run, casting the cement all in one piece. The legs are cement, as well as the rest of the bench. The molds for the legs are of tin. On these a temporary wood flooring is placed. Upon this is stretched chicken wire netting to be molded into the flooring of the bench. Around this two boards are set, one inch apart, to form molds for the sides. The inner board does not come to within one inch of the temporary flooring, so that it makes bottom and sides one piece when the mold is filled with cement mixed in the usual proportions.

The second illustration shows the bench with the farther part filled in with cement. The nearer section is ready for the cement. It shows a large number of corks, which are laid on the temporary flooring and protrude through the chicken wire to as high as the cement will come when it is filled in.

The third illustration shows the bench with the mold removed and a man at work knocking out these corks. They are placed with the small end up, so that they knock through easily from the top and fill the floor of the bench with drainage holes.

In the fourth illustration the completed bench is shown, but the light is such that the drainage holes are not apparent.

The legs may be as close together as is necessary, considering the width of bench and the weight of the stock it is to carry. Nothing can break, for the chicken wire binds the bottom together most effectually. A man's strength does not suffice to break out a piece of the inch thick side and, should a chip be knocked out, a little cement may be mixed up and the break quickly repaired. In the illustrations the bench is being built while an old house is being removed. The new house was built over the benches.

The principal item of cost in the bench is that of time required to set the mold, although this is no great task. After the boards for the mold are once prepared they may be put in place in only a few hours, and used for years. Mr. Wittbold has applied for a patent on the clamps which hold the mold together. His latest ones, instead of clamping through the boards, as in the one shown in the pictures, clamp over them and are something of an improvement. It is his intention to manufacture these clamps and the leg molds so that any grower can build his own benches.

THERE is pleasure and profit in cleanliness and order.

THE nurserymen of Texas want their inspection law so amended as to include greenhouse establishments.

HAVE you bought your season's supply of coal? Prices will be advanced another notch September 1.

ORDER your printed letter heads today and use them in writing for your fall supplies.

ARE there dining cars running out of your town? If so, get the order to supply them with fresh bouquets for each trip; or get the order to keep their fern dishes constantly filled and fresh.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND is getting action for the American Rose Society. Spurred by his interest and industry, the society is heard from frequently in a way that will count in results for the rose.

THE exchange of orders between retail florists in different cities is increasing rapidly as the public finds out that the florists have facilities for delivering quickly in distant places by means of telegraphic orders. A card in the REVIEW will help you to get your share of these orders.

THE John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, reports that a grower is contemplating the erection of carnation houses 1,500 feet long, running 750 feet in each direction from a central heating plant. The firm predicts that in the next few years there will be a marked increase in the length of greenhouses.

WILLIAM PENN.

William Penn, proprietary governor of Pennsylvania, was founder of Philadelphia, the City of Brotherly Love. The statue of William Penn, by McArthur, was placed on the tower of the city hall in his honor. It expresses toleration.

William Penn not only looks down this week upon the members of the Society of American Florists in convention assembled, but he looks out upon the whole trade from the title page of the REVIEW.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Sweet Peas.

It will take from twelve to fourteen weeks to have the early forcing varieties of sweet peas in bloom from sowing the seeds. We are constantly receiving inquiries as to the best sorts to grow, and in reply can only state that only one or two named varieties are suitable for this purpose. The numerous kinds now flowering outdoors are not adapted for indoor culture, unless sown after Christmas for spring blooming. The two most popular sorts are Mont Blanc, white, and Earliest of All or Christmas Pink, pink and white. The first named usually starts to flower first.

For winter forcing, sweet peas may be grown in pots, boxes or benches, the latter being superior to beds during the dark months, but inferior for spring flowering. They may be used to follow chrysanthemums, particularly early sorts, but care must be taken to allow them head room. Seed may now be sown either in small pots or in flats, from which they can be planted directly into the rows where they are to bloom. Be careful, in buying seed, to get pure strains only, and do not accept any substitutions of "just as good" sorts. It will be many dollars out of your pocket if they persist in growing instead of flowering until spring. Use a light, sandy compost to start the seeds in and they will germinate as well in a coldframe as anywhere at this season. If you intend to grow them in boxes, let them be at least six inches deep and of any convenient width and length. These may be grown outdoors for at least another month. If housed early in October it will be sufficiently early. Do not make the common error of sowing too thickly. Allow the plants two or three inches of space each way and they will give you stronger stalks and finer sprays of bloom. Sweet peas need comparatively cool culture, but this will be referred to in later notes.

Stevias.

We are now past the middle of August. The days are shortening very perceptibly, and while very hot days may be expected for a week or two, the nights are growing appreciably cooler. If stevias were planted out in May and have been pinched from time to time, they will now be nice, bushy plants and should be lifted and potted without delay. Get, if you can, a little ball of earth on the roots and lift while the ground is moist. The size of pots to be used will depend on the quality of the plants. Keep the roots from drying. Pot firmly, using any good compost. Keep shaded and freely syringed for a few days. If you have lath shadings, stand these over them and gradually inure to full sunshine. Stevias grow like weeds now and are perhaps a common, everyday plant, but no florist will go far wrong in having a large batch of them, for they can be had in bloom over a long season. They are delicate and the lightest frost will ruin the foliage, but they grew well in any house from which frost is excluded.

Berried Solanums.

These plants are particularly useful at Christmas. They can be cheaply grown and are of the easiest possible culture. Plants in the open ground now will be shapely, well berried little bushes and ought to be lifted and potted up by the beginning of September. Large pots are not required; 5-inch will hold good

THIS will be the 12th year for our business. We have enjoyed an increase in sales every year since our start and have built up a business which warrants us in maintaining the largest and best equipped exclusive Cut Flower House in the Chicago wholesale market. By progressive but conservative management we have held our position at the front. We have taken good care of every flower shipped to us and earned the confidence of our growers that we are at all times working for their interests.

We have carefully studied the wants of our customers and proved to their satisfaction that we can be relied on at all times to furnish anything that is to be had in this market, and in addition we make special efforts to SUPPLY NOVELTIES or SPECIALTIES not always to be had elsewhere.

At present we are leading on Discontinue all pinching of bush chrysanthemums. Get them staked as soon as possible, if outdoors. A storm of wind and rain may seriously damage them.

Put in a good batch of cuttings of variegated vinca. A good sale will always be found for this plant.

Renew the sand and drainage in your propagating bed. You will soon have plenty of use for it. New sand is far better than old.

Cuttings of Pandanus Veitchii and P. Sanderi root freely now and will make nice plants by another spring.

Prick out pansies and violas when large enough to handle; also daisies, myosotis, yellow alyssum and other biennials or perennials for spring sales.

Fire heat will soon be needed. Is everything in readiness to start up? Roses will require a little heat if a damp, cool spell arrives.

Keep your antirrhinums cool and well aired. Pinch out the tops of any showing flower.

House winter blooming geraniums before the fall rains set in. Pinch out all flower stems.

The Great Central Market.

There is little change in the market this week. Conditions remain about as for the past fortnight. The telegraph companies are doing better with messages and it helps some in increasing the demand from out of town. The company seems better able to transmit messages than to deliver them and most of the deliveries are made by telephone. Some

AN ANNOUNCEMENT

Owing to the great demand for the field plants of "John E. Haines" carnation, I am forced to discontinue taking any more orders for plants until September 20th, when I will again have a fine lot coming in. My stock of the "Imperial" and "Pink Imperial" is considerably larger than the "Haines" stock. Have, therefore, still a fine lot of strong, vigorous plants.

DON'T FAIL TO GET SOME OF THE "NEW WONDERS."

errors have occurred, but not of large consequence.

There is a little improvement in the crops of American Beauties, both in quantity and quality. The demand is still for more than the receipts, but it has no effect on prices, which are prescribed by the quality of stock and general summer conditions. The best roses are Kaiserin and Richmond, but Killarney is improving and so is Kate Moulton. There are few carnations.

In the last week the midseason asters have begun to arrive and there has been marked improvement in the quality of stock. These leave little to be desired and, as all colors are available, there is a fair business with them. The trouble is that a great many who buy in the wholesale market have asters on their home places, so that their business is cut off more or less during the aster season. Gladioli, too, are improved in quality. Some splendid reds are seen and are used for window decorations, etc., but a large part of the demand is for funeral work, which calls for only the light shades. Mixed do not sell.

Water lilies are decidedly abundant and many of the retail stores take advantage of the cheap prices to make aquatic displays in the windows. Harrisii, rubrum and auratum suffice for all requirements. Of all other items of seasonable stock there is an abundance.

Carnations are practically out of the market and those who are cutting blooms of fair quality are finding a good market. Green goods of all descriptions are plentiful.

Bronze Galax.

There are continued reports of the impending shortage in bronze galax. None of the wholesalers has any unusual quantity in cold storage, and reports from other centers show that jobbers everywhere have rather less than their usual supplies, while a number are in the market for any lots they can pick up.

One of the strongest reasons for predicting a scarcity before the new crop arrives in the early winter is the fact that the galax in storage is not keeping well.

About Credit.

"Anybody can get credit in Chicago." It was a member of an eastern firm with country-wide connections who said it. Chicago has been notoriously lax in credits, but gradually the lesson is being learned and wholesale florists are exacting more prompt payments. Easy credits often are an aid in expanding sales, but the house which is most careful in its credits and most prompt in its collections is the one which almost invariably shows the best percentage of profit at the end of the season. In the approaching season wholesalers, if they extend credit to those who have no basis for it other than fair reputation, will exact more prompt payment than in other seasons.

Endorse Telephone Ordinance.

Following the special meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club at J. A. Budlong's August 16 to discuss convention matters, the club listened to a statement by representatives of the Chicago Telephone Co., and on motion of George Asmus, seconded by J. B. Deamud, voted its approval of the ordinance as it now stands, providing for unlimited service at $125 per year, and recommended to the city council that immediate action be taken in adopting the franchise.

Various Notes.

Vaughan & Sperry are going into the fertilizer business on a larger scale this season. Since the growers have had so much trouble, one way and another, in getting stable manure, they have turned their attention to bone, sheep manure, etc., and have discovered that these are especially valuable in greenhouse work, if rightly used. The result has been a great increase in the business jobbers do in these fertilizers.

The George Wittbold Co. is this season building quite a number of the cement benches invented by Louis Wittbold. The principal feature of the invention is the mold in which the bench is cast, all in one piece. Mr. Wittbold has figured that the cost of the cement bench, with cement supports and practically indestructible, is only 8 cents a square foot, including the cost of labor. This is no more than the cost of wood benches. He plans to patent such features of his mold as can be protected and to place the mold on the market, so that any grower can build his own benches.

A. A. Sawyer, at Oak Park, has been at work for several years on a special strain of Comet asters, which he now has developed to a high state of perfection. He calls this strain Sawyer's Beatifucan. The flowers are of maximum size and the stems run twenty-five to thirty inches long. E. H. Hunt has handled his output ever since he bought out Tom Corbrey.

H. F. Halle is building a conservatory at the rear of his new store at the corner of Clarendon avenue and Sheridan road.

Frank Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., left Tuesday, July 20, for a western trip in which he hopes to combine a little business with much pleasure. He will go to Colorado and possibly to Salt Lake.

Otto Wittbold and Mrs. Wittbold are visiting eastern plant growers and intending returning by steamer on the Great Lakes.

Harry Manheim, of J. A. Budlong's store force, was on vacation last week.

Among the visitors last week were J. F. Johnson and Mrs. Johnson, Fort Smith, Ark.

John Ghormley, formerly with Wienhoeber, Fleischman and Canger & Ghormley, left August 17 for Minneapolis, where he will have charge of the florists' department of the Wm. Donaldson Co.

L. P. Walz, who is well known in this market, is prospering at Seattle, Wash. He has just opened a retail store downtown and has rose gardens in the suburbs.

The growers on "the ridge" are not interested in the price the city pays for the Rogers Park waterworks system, for the improvement in service and reduction in rates make the change at any price look good to them.

Peter Reinberg is rapidly finishing six houses 27½x260 at his farm property. Either two or four more will follow these later this season.

Wm. L. Rock, of Kansas City, spent a portion of last week in this vicinity.

George Reinberg has moved the office of his city salesroom to the west side of his place and is building in its place a large cool room, to be operated with outside air.

E. F. Winterson and Mrs. Winterson started on August 16 for a visit with Mrs. Winterson's parents at Rutherford, N. J.

T. C. Joy, of Nashville, Tenn., was in town last week on his way home from a trip of several months to the Pacific coast.

C. L. Washburn and his son, E. B. Washburn, are at their fishing club near Athelstane, Wis., for a fortnight's stay.

G. P. Merrifield, of the Merryvale Greenhouses, Helena, Ark., is spending a week in town.

L. Baumann & Co. have a paper bouquet holder after the style so fashionable many years ago and which H. H. Battles, of Philadelphia, was first to reintroduce in the retail trade. These are imported goods and are in great demand. The packing is ingenious. Iron rods are fastened to cleats in the cases and the bouquet holders strung on these rods in bunches of one dozen each, so that each rodful hangs separately and the lace-like edges of the holders are not bruised, no matter in which position the case may lie.

P. J. Hauswirth expects to remain in the east, following the S. A. F. convention, to attend the annual meeting of Red Men at Norfolk, September 9.

Sam Pearce has his place largely planted to poinsettias. He is growing several thousands in pots and has all the high houses planted to benched poinsettias for cutting.

Fred Lautenschlager, of Kroeschell's, was the advance guard of the Chicago convention party. He left here August 14.

E. C. Amling is putting in a number of big new tables to give additional facilities for handling stock.

Allie Zech returned Saturday from a two weeks' visit at Cleveland and its vicinity.

It seems that growers never will learn that the more nearly every flower in the bunch is like every other flower in that bunch, the more salable the stock will be. Attention was called to this fact by a commission house which showed a lot of white and light pink asters bunched together. Buyers of white will not buy such stock, nor will those who want pink, and consequently the only outlet is through the street faker, who cares not what he buys so long as it is cheap.

John Zech states that Zech & Mann have made arrangements which will give them the production from 60,000 feet of additional glass the coming season.

L. Coatsworth fails to see anything in the convention to attract him from the golf links.

E. E. Pieser says bronze galax promises to be as scarce as green now is before the new crop comes in.

Weiland & Risch are preparing for an active fall campaign.

August and Adolph Pohlmann will visit leading eastern growers after the convention, in quest of new ideas on growing.

N. J. Wietor is an ardent fisherman and spends all his holidays that way.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

It won't make much difference this week whether we have any cut flower market in New York or not. Everybody is going to the convention except the retailers. For some reason we can get but one per cent of the eastern retail trade interested in the S. A. F. More's the pity. If they only knew the benefit to themselves and their business, the fraternal greetings, the delight of meeting old friends and the cordiality of a convention welcome, there would be such a boom in the society's numbers as would surprise the veterans who for a quarter of a century have borne the burden and heat of the day. The retailer is not awake to his privileges, but the New York delegation will be a large one and few indeed will forego the opportunity to attend the greatest convention of a decade, and at their very doors. Many who cannot spare the week will run down for a day or two. There will be no shadow of an excuse for missing the reunion completely. A list of those journeying by the New York special will be found elsewhere in this issue of the REVIEW.

The outlook in all lines of the allied trades is bright and hopeful. A great fall season is anticipated, beginning early in September. The florists' supply houses are all stocked with the latest novelties, the seed and bulb establishments are ready for the fall demand and the nurserymen report advance orders beyond all expectations.

There are a lot of August weddings booked that will keep the society florists busy for weeks to come. All the great resorts of the 400 around New York are preparing and planning for a brilliant September. At Greenwich, Conn., last week occurred one of the greatest weddings of the summer. The floral decorations were elaborate. Newport has waked up at last and all the New York florists there have more than they can do. The demand for Beauties and orchids from that center grows daily. Of the former, the best easily command $25 a hundred. Prices were even higher on Saturday and there were not enough to go around. As to orchids, they are scarce and going up, as they deserve to. McManus had orders for his entire stock on Saturday and could have sold double the quantity arriving at headquarters.

Roses are improving daily in length of stem and color and prices are tending upward slowly. Bride and Maid were good enough on Saturday, a few of them, to demand $5 a hundred. The great mass of the shipments are short-stemmed and thousands were closed out at $5 to $10 a thousand.

Everybody must be growing gladioli and asters this season. Never saw such a glut of them as now. Carnations, good ones, are anxiously looked for. Few are yet arriving. The water lily exhibits in the Broadway windows continue, notwithstanding a complete dearth of demand. The up-to-date retailer by his artistic window displays gives no evidence of retrogression.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

While business is quiet, on a summer level, as they say, still there are indications of an improvement. The quality of flowers seems better, due partly to the increase in well-grown greenhouse stock and partly to the cooler nights. Locally grown American Beauty roses are more plentiful and in fair demand. Kaiserins are excellent. Some fairly good Brides and Maids are seen. Richmond has reinforced Liberty. Killarney and Chatenay, while scarce, can be had in nice shape. There is a vast preponderance of poor asters in the market, those of really fine quality being few and far between. It is said that the better grade of asters will be more plentiful in a week or ten days. There are not many carnations about, white being more plentiful than the colored sorts. Valley is unusually good for summer. Gladioli continue in oversupply, the lighter colors and white varieties finding a ready market when of good quality, while the reds and dull colors are not in demand. Much of the stock is of excellent quality. A few straggling dahlias have made their appearance. Greens are fairly plentiful.

More About Pots.

Considerable interest was awakened in this city by the pictures published in this paper last week showing the improved methods in the manufacture of flower pots. To secure, if possible, further ideas on the subject, the representative of this paper visited Norristown a few days ago, where Edward, Charles and William Keller have established and are carrying on a thriving business in the manufacture of flower pots, under the name of the Keller Pottery Co. This company operates a machine that makes the largest pressed pot in the world.

Through the courtesy of Charles Keller some facts that may not be generally known were gleaned. It appears that the manufacture of flower pots is a much more complicated process than the average florist would suppose. In the first place, a wood model must be prepared of the desired size. From this wood model an iron facsimile is produced in the rough at the foundry. This iron form is neatly finished before being put into service. The next step is to secure a plaster cast from this iron form. While these processes may seem simple, the difficulty lies in making due allowance for shrinkage, as the pots when finished must be of standard size. When the plaster cast is secured, operations can begin in earnest. A number of these casts are used at once in producing pots of any desired size.

The formation of a machine-made pot requires four different parts: the core, forming the hollow of the pot; the cup, forming the outside; the cap, rounding off the top, and the piece fitting over the bottom.

The company has two large, double-deck kilns in operation, and has just added a new annex 30x72 feet, with all the arrangements complete for a new kiln to be fifteen feet in diameter. It is interesting to note that the company has been producing pots as small as 1-inch, though there is but little demand for this size. All the sizes, up to 10-inch, are machine made, while those over 10-inch are made on a jigger. Mr. Keller remarked that the sizes over 14-inch are but little in demand, cedar tubs having replaced them. This he believes to be desirable, as the large pots are too costly to make and to transport, and too easily broken.

The impression produced by a trip through the factory and warehouses of this company is that the business is on a thoroughly substantial footing, and that the members of the company, who attend to every detail themselves, deserve to succeed.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Cut flower business has been good the past week. All along the line prices on everything advanced a little. Stock of all kinds cleaned up nicely and everybody was in a better humor and prospects for this week look good. That this is the best August up to date for several years is the report of those who keep tab on the figures of the general volume of business.

Stock of all kinds is still quite plentiful, with roses and gladioli increasing in quality and quantity.

BOSTON.

The Market.

There is little change to report in market conditions. Demand continues extremely light and more flowers are arriving than the market needs. This state of affairs is likely to continue for some weeks longer. Roses are very poor. Few good flowers are seen and prices are very low. Carnations are practically out of the market. A few flowers of the new crop are seen; not enough, however, to make any impression. Prices vary from 50 cents to $2 per hundred, the latter for new crop blooms. The first crop of asters is about over and there is some slackening up of supplies of these useful summer flowers. Prices hold fairly firm on these. Gladioli are quite abundant, selling from $3 per hundred upwards. Sweet peas still arrive in fair quantity. The stems, however, are short. The quality must be extra good to make 25 cents per hundred. Lilium longiflorum is rather scarce at present, but a nice supply of white and colored speciosum is coming in, which sells well. A few dahlias are seen, but these are not popular market flowers in Boston. Some miscellaneous lots of hardy flowers are arriving, which meet with an erratic sale.

Exhibition.

The closing Saturday show of the season was held at Horticultural hall on August 10, and in spite of the severe drought there was a fine show of flowers. For a collection of thirty or more vases of perennial phloxes, T. C. Thurlow led, followed by F. W. Spinney, C. S. Pratt and J. L. McKissock. Gladioli were not largely shown. W. Whitman, M. Sullivan, gardener, had the best twelve named varieties and was also first for fifty vases of asters, representing all classes. The Blue Hill Nurseries had an extensive display of herbaceous perennials and a large and representative collection of phloxes. W. Whitman also had a collection of phloxes and lilies. Mrs. E. M. Gill had a general display. E. L. Lewis showed thirty varieties of sweet peas. Mrs. J. B. Laurence also had a good collection of the latter, in addition to annuals and herbaceous plants. Charles W. Parker had a nice collection of hardy roses, mostly hybrid teas. W. W. Rawson & Co. had a splendid collection of cactus dahlias in some seventy-five varieties; also Gladiolus Harvard, which was awarded honorable mention, and G. Kathryn, a beautiful carmine colored seedling with immense flowers. The flowers have a large ivory-white lip, blotched with crimson and maroon. This was awarded a certificate of merit and is a very promising novelty, said to have originated from the same seed as G. Harvard.

At Marblehead.

One of the most interesting private estates on the Massachusetts north shore is that of C. W. Parker, on Marblehead Neck. Mr. Parker has for a number of years been actively identified with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, being at present chairman of the garden committee. Redgate, as Mr. Parker's estate is named, is planted exclusively with hardy plants, native ones being very largely used. Every advantage has been taken of the numerous fine rocks and other natural features, plants suitable to the various locations being planted in some cases, while in others, many of the native plants and shrubs have been retained. Winding paths running around the rocky hillsides disclose some fresh interesting objects at every turn. It is an estate naturally planted and therein lies its greatest charm. It is far more satisfying to any real lover of nature than estates which have upon them the imprint of the landscape architect's art. Such lilioms as auratum, speciosum, superbum and Canadense were very much at home in locations where they had been growing for years. On the higher ground, beds of many of the best hybrid tea roses were growing and flowering finely. There are no greenhouses or even coldframes on the place, everything, outside of a few annuals, being thoroughly ironclad.

Mrs. Henry E. Foote, of Marblehead, has come into prominence of late years as a very successful commercial grower and exhibitor of hybrid tea and other roses. Her collection comprises over 400 varieties, the major portion being hybrid teas. We were much pleased on the occasion of a late brief call to note the extreme vigor of this latter class and the freedom with which they were blooming. All the newest European varieties were included and old stand-bys seemed quite at home. That old popular variety, Gloire de Dijon, makes shoots fourteen feet in length here. Gruss an Teplitz stood some six feet high, carrying immense heads of its brilliant crimson flowers. Among the newer rugosas, Conrad Ferdinand Meyer had shoots ten feet in length. Mrs. Foote has made a specialty of planting rose gardens and this season laid out and planted one of 3,000 plants for W. S. Spaulding, at Pride's Crossing, and another large one for E. C. Swift, of Pride's Crossing, these being mostly hybrid teas. We are pleased to note a continued growth in the culture of this class of roses in Massachusetts, their persistent blooming qualities being the greatest point in their favor.

Various Notes.

The Boston party, which left on Monday night for the Philadelphia convention, was quite a substantial one, although some who had hoped to make the trip were unable to go. E. L. Pierce, of the A. H. Hews Co., worked hard to secure a good attendance, but the pressure of business at North Cambridge prevented him from attending personally. The Boston delegation are interested in the proposal to change the name of the S. A. F. and it will receive their support, we believe.

The annual auction sale of stalls at the Park Street Flower Market will occur on September 7.

Thomas Roland and J. E. Rothwell were among those returning on August 15 from Liverpool on the Ivernia.

The next event at Horticultural hall will be the annual dahlia show, which takes place on September 4 and 5.

Members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will leave Boston on Saturday, August 31, for North Abington on the 12:43 train, for the field day at the Bay State Nurseries.

One of the worst droughts in late years is now being felt in Massachusetts and other New England states. The country has a very burnt up appearance.

The telegraphers' strike has had little effect on trade at the wholesale houses and markets. The long distance phone has been more called into requisition.

William Nicholson is spending his vacation in shark fishing at Nantucket and has assisted in some phenomenal catches, some weighing over 450 pounds and measuring nine feet in length. He and some friends landed 407 silver fish in four hours on Great Pond, on the island.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society will hold an exhibition of products of children's gardens on September 7, when a big display is expected.

We are pleased to report Mrs. W. H. Elliott's recovery from her late accident, and her ability to go to the convention.

R. G. Leavitt will be the speaker at the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club. His subject will be "Hybridization." W. N. CRAIG.

SCALE ON ASPARAGUS PLUMOSUS.

In looking over our Asparagus plumosus we notice a kind of scale on the main stems of part of the plants and would like to know the cause. What can we do to stop it? T. P. G.

If the scale is large and brown in color, it will be difficult to kill. The only method is to pick or brush it off. The younger and lighter colored ones can be destroyed by syringing with kerosene emulsion or fir tree oil, neither of which will injure the foliage. Use a good force of water on your asparagus, through a spray nozzle, and you can blow off much of the smaller sized scale.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The cut flower trade of the last week was fairly good so far as funeral work was concerned. Other work has been very scarce. Most of the retailers are busy repainting their stores and making preparations for the fall trade, which we expect to open September 1.

The greenhouse men are kept busy finishing up their new houses and housing carnations. Much building has been going on in and around here and it is estimated that nearly 200,000 feet of new glass has been added this summer. At the wholesale houses there are plenty of asters of all kinds, which are selling fairly well, but the consignments are very heavy at present, many more than the demand calls for. The same may be said of gladiolus spikes. Tuberoses stalks are now coming in and are cleaning up well. Roses, too, are coming in better, but still with short stems. The best of these have a good call. First-class American Beauties are still very scarce, but fairly good blooms of short stems are coming in. Smilax is having an exceptionally good demand, with plenty of good strings in the market. Everything else in greens is plentiful.

The Apple Growers' Congress.

The meeting of the Apple Growers' Congress in this city last week, at the Southern hotel, was a great success socially and in attendance. President H. M. Dunlop opened the meeting at 10 a. m. Tuesday morning.

Among those who addressed the meeting were Professors M. B. White and Wm. Scott, pathologists of the Department of Agriculture; W. H. Taylor, pomologist in the same department; G. W. Smith, of Albion, N. Y.; James A. West, assistant state entomologist of Illinois; L. A. Goodman, president of the American Pomological Society, Kansas City, Mo.; Senator J. P. Logan, of Siloam Springs, Ark.; C. A. Javitz, of Guelph, Ont.; George T. Tippin, secretary of the Missouri Horticultural Society; Prof. R. Hicks, of St. Louis, Mo., and S. Cyrus Miller, Haydenville, Mass.

The meeting was closed with an address by Norman J. Colman. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, H. M. Dunlop, of Savoy, Ill.; secretary, T. C. Wilson, of Hannibal, Mo.; vice-president, Ex-Judge W. R. Wilkinson, of St. Louis. For the next meeting place St. Louis was again selected. In the evening the delegates were the guests of the directors of the Missouri Botanical Garden at a banquet at the Southern hotel.

The Shaw Banquet.

The eighteenth annual banquet given by the directors of the Missouri Botanical Garden, provided for in the will of Henry Shaw, to gardeners, florists and nurserymen, took place at the Southern hotel on Wednesday night, August 14, at 7 o'clock. Covers for 150 were laid and the tables were nicely decorated with asters in all colors, made up in ring shape.

Prof. Wm. Trelease, director of the garden, was toastmaster and toasts were responded to by H. M. Dunlop, president of the Apple Growers' Congress; W. C. Young, president-elect of the St. Louis Florists' Club; Park Commissioner Philip C. Scanlan, who claims he received his first training in the nursery; Walter Retzer, of the St. Louis Seed Co.; Norman J. Colman; Prof. M. B. Waite, of the Department of Agriculture; L. A. Goodman, president of the American Pomological Society, and J. C. Vaughan, of Chicago, chairman of the National Council of Horticulture. Besides the above-mentioned and the delegates of the Apple Growers' Congress, the following members of the St. Louis Florists' Club were present: Carl Beyer, F. J. Fillmore, W. C. Smith, Emil Schray, John tate is named, is planted exclusively with hardy plants, native ones being very largely used. Every advantage has been taken of the numerous fine rocks and other natural features, plants suitable to the various locations being planted in some cases, while in others, many of the native plants and shrubs have been retained. Winding paths running around the rocky hillsides disclose some fresh interesting objects at every turn. It is an estate naturally planted and therein lies its greatest charm. It is far more satisfying to any real lover of nature than estates which have upon them the imprint of the landscape architect's art. Such lilioms as auratum, speciosum, superbum and Canadense were very much at home in locations where they had been growing for years. On the higher ground, beds of many of the best hybrid tea roses were growing and flowering finely. There are no greenhouses or even coldframes on the place, everything, outside of a few annuals, being thoroughly ironclad.

Mrs. Henry E. Foote, of Marblehead, has come into prominence of late years as a very successful commercial grower and exhibitor of hybrid tea and other roses. Her collection comprises over 400 varieties, the major portion being hybrid teas. We were much pleased on the occasion of a late brief call to note the extreme vigor of this latter class and the freedom with which they were blooming. All the newest European varieties were included and old stand-bys seemed quite at home. That old popular variety, Gloire de Dijon, makes shoots fourteen feet in length here. Gruss an Teplitz stood some six feet high, carrying immense heads of its brilliant crimson flowers. Among the newer rugosas, Conrad Ferdinand Meyer had shoots ten feet in length. Mrs. Foote has made a specialty of planting rose gardens and this season laid out and planted one of 3,000 plants for W. S. Spaulding, at Pride's Crossing, and another large one for E. C. Swift, of Pride's Crossing, these being mostly hybrid teas. We are pleased to note a continued growth in the culture of this class of roses in Massachusetts, their persistent blooming qualities being the greatest point in their favor.

Various Notes.

The Boston party, which left on Monday night for the Philadelphia convention, was quite a substantial one, although some who had hoped to make the trip were unable to go. E. L. Pierce, of the A. H. Hews Co., worked hard to secure a good attendance, but the pressure of business at North Cambridge prevented him from attending personally. The Boston delegation are interested in the proposal to change the name of the S. A. F. and it will receive their support, we believe.

The annual auction sale of stalls at the Park Street Flower Market will occur on September 7.

Thomas Roland and J. E. Rothwell were among those returning on August 15 from Liverpool on the Ivernia.

The next event at Horticultural hall will be the annual dahlia show, which takes place on September 4 and 5.

Members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will leave Boston on Saturday, August 31, for North Abington on the 12:43 train, for the field day at the Bay State Nurseries.

One of the worst droughts in late years is now being felt in Massachusetts and other New England states. The country has a very burnt up appearance.

The telegraphers' strike has had little effect on trade at the wholesale houses and markets. The long distance phone has been more called into requisition.

William Nicholson is spending his vacation in shark fishing at Nantucket and has assisted in some phenomenal catches, some weighing over 450 pounds and measuring nine feet in length. He and some friends landed 407 silver fish in four hours on Great Pond, on the island.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society will hold an exhibition of products of children's gardens on September 7, when a big display is expected.

We are pleased to report Mrs. W. H. Elliott's recovery from her late accident, and her ability to go to the convention.

R. G. Leavitt will be the speaker at the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club. His subject will be "Hybridization." W. N. CRAIG.

SCALE ON ASPARAGUS PLUMOSUS.

In looking over our Asparagus plumosus we notice a kind of scale on the main stems of part of the plants and would like to know the cause. What can we do to stop it? T. P. G.

If the scale is large and brown in color, it will be difficult to kill. The only method is to pick or brush it off. The younger and lighter colored ones can be destroyed by syringing with kerosene emulsion or fir tree oil, neither of which will injure the foliage. Use a good force of water on your asparagus, through a spray nozzle, and you can blow off much of the smaller sized scale. C. W.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The cut flower trade of the last week was fairly good so far as funeral work was concerned. Other work has been very scarce. Most of the retailers are busy repainting their stores and making preparations for the fall trade, which we expect to open September 1.

The greenhouse men are kept busy finishing up their new houses and housing carnations. Much building has been going on in and around here and it is estimated that nearly 200,000 feet of new glass has been added this summer. At the wholesale houses there are plenty of asters of all kinds, which are selling fairly well, but the consignments are very heavy at present, many more than the demand calls for. The same may be said of gladiolus spikes. Tuberose stalks are now coming in and are cleaning up well. Roses, too, are coming in better, but still with short stems. The best of these have a good call. First-class American Beauties are still very scarce, but fairly good blooms of short stems are coming in. Smilax is having an exceptionally good demand, with plenty of good strings in the market. Everything else in greens is plentiful.

The Apple Growers' Congress.

The meeting of the Apple Growers' Congress in this city last week, at the Southern hotel, was a great success socially and in attendance. President H. M. Dunlop opened the meeting at 10 a. m. Tuesday morning.

Among those who addressed the meeting were Professors M. B. White and Wm. Scott, pathologists of the Department of Agriculture; W. H. Taylor, pomologist in the same department; G. W. Smith, of Albion, N. Y.; James A. West, assistant state entomologist of Illinois; L. A. Goodman, president of the American Pomological Society, Kansas City, Mo.; Senator J. P. Logan, of Siloam Springs, Ark.; C. A. Javitz, of Guelph, Ont.; George T. Tiffin, secretary of the Missouri Horticultural Society; Prof. R. Hicks, of St. Louis, Mo., and S. Cyrus Miller, Haydenville, Mass.

The meeting was closed with an address by Norman J. Colman. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, H. M. Dunlop, of Savoy, Ill.; secretary, T. C. Wilson, of Hannibal, Mo.; vice-president, Ex-Judge W. R. Wilkin, of St. Louis. For the next meeting place St. Louis was again selected. In the evening the delegates were the guests of the directors of the Missouri Botanical Garden at a banquet at the Southern hotel.

The Shaw Banquet.

The eighteenth annual banquet given by the directors of the Missouri Botanical Garden, provided for in the will of Henry Shaw, to gardeners, florists and nurserymen, took place at the Southern hotel on Wednesday night, August 14, at 7 o'clock. Covers for 150 were laid and the tables were nicely decorated with asters in all colors, made up in ring shape.

Prof. Wm. Trelease, director of the garden, was toastmaster and toasts were responded to by H. M. Dunlop, president of the Apple Growers' Congress; W. C. Young, president-elect of the St. Louis Florists' Club; Park Commissioner Philip C. Scanlan, who claims he received his first training in the nursery; Walter Retzer, of the St. Louis Seed Co.; Norman J. Colman; Prof. M. B. Waite, of the Department of Agriculture; L. A. Goodman, president of the American Pomological Society, and J. C. Vaughan, of Chicago, chairman of the National Council of Horticulture. Besides the above mentioned and the delegates of the Apple Growers' Congress, the following members of the St. Louis Florists' Club were present: Carl Beyer, F. J. Fillmore, W. C. Smith, Emil Schray, John

The Market.

The last week was about the most quiet one we have had this summer. Except for a few small funeral orders there was nothing doing among the retailers, and as a consequence there was no rush for stock at the wholesale houses.

Roses are more plentiful, but they still sell out well. American Beauties are especially good property. Carnations are very scarce. Asters are not quite so plentiful and it would appear now that the glut is over that they ought to bring something like a reasonable price. Some very fine ones are being received and these high grade ones sell well. Gladioli are in heavy supply and they are not selling any better. The storemen say that the buyers don't want them this year, but I think that a little later on they will go all right. Dahlias, though they are none too plentiful, sell slowly and at a low price. Greens are in fair supply and going nicely.

The flower show at the Hamilton county fair, which is held annually at the Carthage fair grounds, is growing to be quite an institution and the competition for the various prizes is very lively. This year the main exhibitors were George & Allan and J. T. Conger, and both made a very creditable showing. J. T. Conger came out ahead as to the prizes won, as he took seven firsts and three seconds, while George & Allan took three firsts and five seconds. That flower shows are an attractive feature is easily shown by the fact that there were 50,000 people on the grounds on flower day, which is the largest number that ever attended the fair in a single day since it was instituted.

Wm. A. Mann, who was formerly bookkeeper for the old Cincinnati Cut Flower Co., has accepted a similar position with Julius Baer.

Peter Olinger is away on a three weeks' vacation and is spending it visiting friends and relatives in the northwest.

Mr. Gresham, of Atlanta, Ga., and J. T. Herdegen, of Aurora, Ind., were visitors.

DETROIT.

The Market.

The last week was an exceptionally quiet one for the florists of this city. We are having our regular summer weather now, and all the people who can spare the time are away at some summer resort for the season. Even the funerals seem to have dropped off in numbers. The weather has been very warm, with but little rain to help crops along; consequently outdoor stock is suffering.

Much stock is piling up at the commission houses. Especially is this true of the cerise asters, short white asters, gladioli, phlox, sweet peas and a variety of outdoor stuff. Some very fine La Detroit and Kaiserin and some good but short-stem Killarney are arriving daily, and so far but few are going to waste. Very few good Brides or Maids are on the market. Beauties are seldom called for at present.

Asters sell anywhere from 75 cents to $2 per hundred, the average price being $1.50 per hundred. Sweet peas are being disposed of in fairly large quantities, but there is a large oversupply, especially in the colored varieties. Some of the growers complain of many of the plants of the white varieties dying in the field from rot. Smilax is none too plentiful at present. Asparagus in both varieties is quite plentiful. Ferns are very good at present, and plentiful.

Various Notes.

Walter Taepke spent the past week at St. Clair Flats, where he had a very enjoyable time.

Among the Detroit people at the convention this week are: Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Scribner, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dilger, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Unger, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Breitmeyer, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Maynard, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Breitmeyer, Albert Pochelon, Thos. Browne, Robert Rahaley, Albert Stahelin and J. F. Sullivan. The writer wishes them all a glorious time.

Mr. and Mrs. Bullock, the foreman for George Heintz, of Toledo, and Mr. Boehringer, of Bay City, were also in the party that left Detroit.

Chas. Warnke has been investing heavily in palms, in anticipation of the fall decorating business, of which he has done considerable the last year.

A NOTEWORTHY RIBBON AND CHIFFON EXHIBIT.

Among the very tasteful displays at the convention that of Wertheimer Bros., of New York, attracted considerable attention.

This firm exhibited some beautiful chiffons, several in particular were worthy of special commendation. One with a small flower effect running through was especially pretty; another one with bridal knots distributed over the surface attracted much attention; another with small carnations tastefully arranged in the body of the fabric was very effective. This firm's exhibit of silk gauzes also was quite effective, several of the effects and colorings being decidedly new.

Among the ribbons exhibited by Wertheimer Bros., a heavy Canaille effect about five inches in width attracted much attention. This ribbon was shown in various colors to match roses and carnations. One effect in particular was very striking, being the American Beauty shade with a green glaze to catch the tone of the leaves. Another effective coloring was the Enchantress carnation, this being one of the best matches for this flower ever shown. This ribbon is very appropriately called Pat. "Artweve."

Some very pretty narrow ribbons were also exhibited by the above mentioned firm. Narrow gauze effects for bridal work and violet trimming being especially pretty. Of violet trimmings, this firm showed a very large variety, several of the newer creations being a ribbon tie with little bells at the end made of chiffon, and the clappers being made of gold tinsel. Another very handsome design was a ribbon tie with little butterflies at each end, made of chiffon and gold tinsel.

This firm did not exhibit any of their plain staple lines at the convention this year, stating as their reason therefor that their staples were already on exhibition in the best flower shops in the country.

Messrs. Wertheimer Bros. issue a most elaborate ribbon catalogue for free distribution to florists. This catalogue contains samples of the various grades, and the cost is said to be in the neighborhood of $1 each, but owing to the enormous business done by this firm, they are able to distribute these catalogues absolutely free of charge upon request to reputable florists. They request that all florists desiring a catalogue make their request at once before the first edition is exhausted.

WATERING DURING SUNSHINE.

Am I right in watering a garden when the sun is shining on it? I am working on a private place and my employer reprimanded me yesterday for watering when the sun was shining. My garden is exposed to the sun about twelve hours a day and I only work two hours, so you see it would be impossible for me to water it when the sun is not shining. It is a flower garden. There are no vegetables in it and the soil is only about a foot deep. The way I do it is this: I let the sprinkler stay in one spot until the ground is thoroughly soaked; then I move the sprinkler to another place, and so on until I have soaked the whole garden. Then I let it stay that way for a week, or until it gets dry again.

Now, the way I was always taught was to water a plant when it was dry, no matter whether the sun was shining or not. Am I right? C. L. E.

It is really astonishing to find how many people still believe that watering plants during sunshine is harmful. Have you ever seen foliage burned or plants injured in that way, unless their flowers were dashed by a heavy thunder rain which was immediately followed by brilliant sunshine? Lawns and flower beds watered by sprinklers during hot, dry weather are much benefited if the water is allowed to run sufficiently long to soak the ground well. The beds, of course, should be stirred up with a hoe the day following the watering.

Harm is undoubtedly done by those who hose their beds over night after night, causing the surface soil to be hard and baked. Your plan is the best one possible and you need not worry about the plants being injured. The advantage of watering during cloudy days or at night is that there is no radiation of the water into the atmosphere, as when the sun is shining.

It is still believed by many that wetting foliage while the sun shines is harmful. The reverse, however, is the case. Chrysanthemums and many other window plants are greatly benefited by sprayings overhead during the hottest weather. The same applies to outdoor plants. C. W.

THE ARMY WORM.

One of the newspapers at Erie, Pa., says: "The Baur Floral Co. announces the following preparation will kill the common, or army, cutworm, which is doing so much damage in the Erie gardens this summer:

"One peck wheat bran, one table-spoonful Paris green (which can be bought in dry form at any drug store), and one and one-half pints strong New Orleans molasses, the kind that is used for baking. Mix the bran and Paris green thoroughly first, by working over three or four times; then add the molasses and work it thoroughly through the whole mass, so that every flake of bran receives some of the molasses. Scatter lightly around wherever the worms may be. Being very fond of molasses, they will eat this mixture before attacking any plant, and one or two applications will rid any garden of this pest. Potatoes chopped fine and treated with Paris green in the above proportion, we have found equally effective, but prefer the bran mixture because it is cheaper and more convenient to prepare and apply."

MONONGAHELA, PA.—J. A. Keeney met with a serious accident last week which will delay his plans for rebuilding. His horse fell on him, breaking one of his legs below the knee in two places.

OWATONNA, MINN.—The Clinton Falls Nursery Co. is increasing its glass 8,000 feet, which will be used for carnations. The company's stock is in good condition and gives promise of strong cuts through the season.

SPENCER, MASS.—Chas. H. Green is building an additional greenhouse, 30x100 feet, for growing carnations.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Denver and Colorado.

On visiting Denver recently I found it a busy place and widespread. Unlike the people of Chicago and Kansas City, where nobody seems to have time to stop for anything, everybody in Denver gives you any information you desire and streetcar men are accommodating. The daily life does not cost any more here than east. Denver is bound to make the largest city west of Kansas City. It has fine streets, nice parks and beautiful public buildings. The state capitol is a grand palace and its free museum is attraction enough to make anyone stop at Denver. The City park, with 360 acres, two lakes, wild animals of all kinds, beautiful flower beds and good concerts, would be a credit to any large eastern city. Lincoln park and Manhattan beach are also great attractions.

Colorado is a grand state and well deserves the reputation it has as a place for the tourist. The air is most delightful. The scenery is grand, especially around Manitou. There are mineral waters of all kinds. The Rocky Mountains, with their caves, canyons, streams, waterfalls and hundreds of miles of all sorts of rock formations in all shapes, are a sight that will never be forgotten. I have seen in Europe the Alps of Switzerland, with their charming growth. I have seen the mountains of the Schwarzwald or Black Forest. I was born near the Hatz, a beautiful large range of mountains, with strawberries, blueberries and raspberries growing wild, as well as large beds of lily of the valley; the largest mountain 3,500 feet high, with snow nearly all the year round. All these places have their peculiar beauty, different from what we find in this country. But the rock formations, the scenery and the large territory over which all this extends in our country, with the millions of minerals, cannot be found in the old country.

I visited the greenhouses in Denver and all the florists I spoke to have done well this season and are enlarging their places. Hardy flowers and the ordinary bedding plants are used a good deal in private and public parks. Around residence property I found bedding plants scarce, but hollyhocks, sweet peas, snapdragons, cosmos, nasturtiums, poppies and dahlias are found on every lot. As Kansas is called the Sunflower state, Colorado could justly be called the Hollyhock state. I visited Colorado City, Colorado Springs and Manitou. The florists there are not building, but repairing, and the most of the places were in charming order. The cool atmosphere keeps flowers low and bushy and everyone has an unusually large stock for this time of the year. AUGUST LUTHER.

Begonia Rubra.

The note in a recent issue of the REVIEW, on Begonia rubra affected with a disease, is interesting. I had not heard of a disease connected with this robust variety of begonia before.

Rubra as applied to this variety may be termed its trade name, as, so far as I know, that name is not recognized by botanists. I believe its botanical name is corallina.

I believe when this or any other plant becomes diseased its youthful vigor may be renewed by raising it from seed.

I am trying an experiment which may be of some interest to your readers. Seed was saved during the past spring, and when sown it came up as freely as any of the semperflorens type. I now have over 200 plants, the largest of which are in 3-inch pots. The young plants all have spotted leaves, more or less dotted over the foliage with gray spots. Whence came these spots? They will be watched very closely to see if they may be raised true from seed, or possibly we may reasonably expect to develop an improved form of this very useful variety. Robert Craig once told me that in his experience with seedlings from Begonia rubra they had a tendency to come with flowers of a lighter color. I have also been informed that there was at one time a seedling form that appeared superior to the old type, but owing to an accident it was lost to cultivation. Last year I raised seedlings of Begonia sanguinea which all came as true to the type as if they had been raised from cuttings.

EDWIN LONSDALE.

Excessive Assessment.

I have noticed the articles in the REVIEW with reference to assessments on greenhouse property. In regard to the assessment on my property here in Pennsylvania I can now state that I appealed the matter before the county commissioners and they reduced my valuation from $17,000 to $11,000. This, of course, is quite a reduction, but although I made out a good case, my valuation is still too high, according to growers in this and other counties. I do not know how to do any better than what I have done. I could take the matter to court, but my lawyer thinks it would do little good, now that the commissioners of the county have reduced my assessment $6,000. I feel I have done all that can be done in this county. I still say that I am unjustly taxed and the only way to get any redress is to carry the matter to the supreme court. This I could not undertake alone, and although one grower has offered to pay $100 towards the expenses in carrying it through, I cannot see my way clear. I appreciate the way the REVIEW has taken hold of the matter.

Slugs and Snails.

I beg to hand in a cultural note which may possibly be as new to others as to myself. It is especially valuable to those who grow tender alpine, etc., of which slugs and snails are specially fond. There are some varieties which one can scarcely venture to grow on account of the special attraction to snails. The dodge is to sprinkle rockery at night with Richards' XL All Insecticide in solution. In the morning and for several days, without fresh application, the snails may be picked up stretched out on the ground, and too drunk to get home. Slugs seem to be quite done, for there is little left of them. Their first pipe, evidently. Anyway, it is a good thing to get rid of them.

This is reported in a British publication and doubtless the use of the American nicotine extracts would be worth trying for the same end.

A Remedy for Cut Worms.

Thoroughly mix one peck wheat bran with one tablespoonful Paris green, then add a quart of strong New Orleans molasses. Rub all the ingredients together thoroughly until the mass becomes the same consistency throughout and crumbles easily. Scatter lightly among the plants where the cutworms are feeding and you will have no further trouble there.

This remedy also destroys snails, sow bugs, etc. It never fails and is the simplest remedy we have ever tried for this class of insects. We pity the man who stays up nights to pick these insects by hand.

FORCING TOMATOES.

Now is the time to sow your tomato seeds for a winter crop. If, however, you have mums, lettuce or something else on the benches, which will not be off before November 1, it would be better, in order to make room for the tomato plants when ready to bench, to delay planting until September 1. With good care and favorable weather they will then get to bearing in January and do their best in February and March, when prices are always the highest. By saying that they will do their best, I mean the best for that one crop. Later ones, coming to bearing towards spring, usually yield much more heavily than midwinter crops.

If you are fortunate enough to have a few old vines left, of the right varieties, let them branch out now as much as they will, cut the young shoots off as fast as they get about four inches long, pot them up in light, sandy soil and place them in a cool, shady place. Sprinkle lightly several times a day to keep them alive until rooted, which takes about ten to fourteen days. They may then be moved to a lighter place. These plants, started from cuttings, come into bearing several days sooner than seedlings, and every day gained in January weather means dollars to the grower. These plants also bloom and set fruit lower down than do those grown from seed, thus giving a longer crop, before all are ripened to the top of the string.

There is much difference of opinion as to the best varieties to grow, but Comet seems to be the favorite with all the largest and most successful growers. Of the many varieties we have tried, we have dropped all but four and consider them to rank in the following rotation: First, Comet, early, large size and very prolific, strong grower, short jointed, slightly dwarfed in growth. Second, Winter Beauty, foliage and stems not so heavy as Comet, can be planted a trifle closer together; has all the good points of Comet, but has not produced quite as many pounds per plant with us; sets fruit as well in winter as in spring, with little attention. Third, Lorillard's Forcing, an old stand-by, but we intend to drop it if we find the others ahead of it again this season. Fourth, Stirling Castle, early and good, remarkably free from diseased plants, but fruit a little too small for our market. It is not best to depend too much on one variety; sometimes one variety is diseased and others not affected, etc.

The seed should not be sown too thickly in the flats and should be transplanted into other flats, about two and one-half inches apart, as soon as the seed leaves are fully developed; and from that time on the plants require most careful attention as to ventilation and watering. Leave the ventilators open day and night until frosty nights arrive. The flats or boxes must stand perfectly level on the benches, or the high end of the box will not get as much water as the other. When the plants get about four inches tall they should be potted into 4-inch pots, one in a pot. After about three weeks in the pots they will be fine, well rooted plants and ready for the beds where they are to bear.

Some growers pot the tiny plants into 2½-inch pots instead of transplanting

A BED OF MUSHROOMS

Raised from my Spawn, will bear longer and yield better than from any other variety of Spawn. This is proven by facts. Full particulars and information how to succeed in mushroom raising free. We warrant you if using our method of growing mushrooms that all will go well.

into flats, and re-pot into 4-inch later, but we like the boxes better. In very hot weather it is difficult to keep any plants in small pots properly watered. The plants should never be allowed to wither and burn the foliage, nor should they be given too much water. The amount of water given will, however, hasten or hold back the plants, as desired. If you see that the plants will get too large before the house is ready, don't give quite so much water, and vice versa.

Tomatoes require bottom heat to do their best, and from eight to twelve inches of soil.

The most satisfactory way of training or tying is very much as you would with smilax, only farther apart—rows three feet apart and plants one foot apart in the rows. The rows may run across the benches or lengthwise. A wire is stretched across the bench along each row, and one about six feet above it. At each plant one string is run upward to the upper wire; four-ply jute twine is best; to this string the vine is tied each week until it reaches the top. If the foliage becomes too dense, trim off about half of each leaf, which will keep them from overlapping onto those of the next vine, and will not injure the plants in the least. Plants trained in this way to a single stalk, removing all branches when very small, produce more per house than those planted farther apart and trained to three stalks, using three strings per root.

After planting in the benches the plants require frequent watering until they commence to bloom, when the water should be withheld somewhat and the plants should not be sprayed unless attacked by red spider. If held a trifle dry they are induced to bloom more freely. If necessary to spray for spider, etc., do it early in the day, so that they will be dried off before night.

The best temperature for tomatoes is 60 degrees to 65 degrees at night, but a cooler temperature will not hurt them, if not too much higher in the daytime. A little fire will be needed in October.

BOREALIS.

FUMIGATING CUCUMBER HOUSE.

A successful fumigation or vaporization of a cucumber house infested with the melon aphid at Anacostia, District of Columbia, is recorded in a bulletin of the Department of Agriculture. A nicotine extract was used, and 66,000 cubic feet of greenhouse space was fumigated, twenty-two ounces of the liquid, or one ounce to 3,000 cubic feet, being employed. The work was under the direction of F. H. Chittenden and conducted by I. J. Condit, with the cooperation of J. W. Bryan, owner of the house. At the end of an hour and fifteen minutes, when the ventilators were opened and the greenhouse aired, the aphides were found dead and dying, and the cucumbers were unharmed. Eight evaporators were used in this instance, each holding a little less than three ounces of the liquid. It is quite probable that a considerably smaller

RAWSON'S HOTHOUSE CUCUMBER

As a forcing Cucumber is one of the largest and most profitable crops of the Market Gardener, it is essential that the very best possible strain should be sown. With this idea in view we have made selections for the past few years from our Rawson's White Spine, which have resulted in a strain about two inches longer and a darker green in color, with a few light spines showing at blossom end. This new strain we confidently believe to be superior to any other on the market. The results we have had at our own greenhouses with the stock conclusively prove the above to be true. ¼ oz., 35c; oz., 60c; 4 oz., $1.50; lb., $5.00.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

DUTCH seed houses report a fair prospect for a crop of spinach seed, but, like all other crops, it is late.

THE crop of Swedes for seeds in Holland is almost a failure this season because of winter conditions.

THERE is a rapidly growing demand for seeds of perennials and several American seed houses now carry quite comprehensive stocks of them.

THE striking catalogue covers used by A. T. Boddington, New York, are designed by H. A. Bunyard, who has proved himself an artist in several other ways besides selling goods on the road.

REPORTS from the bean fields show no great improvement over the reports of a week ago. In many places things do not look as bright as they did and a light bean crop is likely to be the rule.

A WELL-INFORMED grower says that all varieties of wrinkled peas will be short, and that the later tall growing sorts will be just as scarce as the dwarf growing and canners' varieties.

H. FRANK DARROW, the well-known importer of seeds and bulbs, sailed for New York on the Deutschland, from Hamburg, August 15, after visiting the various foreign firms for which he is American agent.

THE seed-growing firm of Comstock, Ferre & Co., Wethersfield, Conn., was established in 1830 and incorporated twenty-two years later. The present officers are: President and treasurer, Stephen F. Willard; secretary, Edward G. Fox.

IN the vicinity of Chicago the truckers report a disease on the tomato vines, which will cut down the crop considerably. Two weeks ago it looked as though an immense crop of tomatoes would be harvested here, but this blight of vine, or whatever it is, will make the yield of fruit small.

SOME few lots of Alaska peas have been received from farmers at the milling plants of the growing stations and the reports are that they about meet expectations. These particular lots show the samples to be fairly good and no excessive shrinkage is expected in the milling and hand-picking.

AT Chicago the onion set harvest is still under way. It is likely to be two weeks yet before the crop is all out of the ground. Many of the growers have held back, thinking that an additional week would give a larger quantity of bushels, but the gain will not be much and it looks as though the crop here will be much less than the estimates of two weeks ago.

CALIFORNIA SEEDS.

Planters are beginning to realize that any obvious superiority of Pacific coast seeds over those of home production lies in the special skill and care of the grower and not in the locality. Comparative trials often show that California seeds have a tendency to rapid deterioration of type, possibly because the stimulating climate favors too heavy setting, causing loss of vitality in individual seeds. In practice it is becoming evident that to keep up the high grades needed by commercial gardeners it is necessary to continue growing the stock seeds of many varieties in the east, under normal conditions, but careful supervision, and from these re-vitalized seeds produce the commercial seed crop in California. This is not the case with all varieties, especially such heat-loving legumes as the lima bean, which is at home under the cloudless skies and ardent sun of California and yields far better than with us.

The "northern-grown" idea has nearly passed. Except that some inclination to early maturity is favored by seed grown in high latitudes, there appeared nothing to justify the great claims made. When economic and climatic conditions do not forbid, seeds are best grown where the subsequent crop is to be produced.—W. Van Fleet in Rural New-Yorker.

Earl Tucker and J. W. Tucker, the proprietors of the Tucker Seed House, Carthage, Mo., have purchased the fixtures of the Parsons Seed Co. and are making some extensive improvements for their next year's trade. Besides the fixtures they get the Parsons poultry supplies, but not the seeds. All the newly purchased seed cases are now being installed in the Tucker store and about a fourth of the floor space is being double decked in order to make more room to afford a place for the handling of wholesale orders. This is the first year for the firm. Earl Tucker will be on the road and will cover a territory radiating from Carthage about 100 miles. Mr. Parsons will still occupy the old quarters, but will devote his time to selling the Keystone drill, for which he is the district agent.

Arthur T. Boddington

342 W. 14th St., New York City

THE onion sets in the Chicago district are thought not to average five bushels to the pound of seed planted, which speaks of a decidedly light crop.

THE summer trade of the wholesale seed houses has been good. Turnip seed was in good demand and the sale of spinach seed for fall planting has been above average. At most of the truck growing points beans have been planted in larger quantities than usual, and altogether the July and August trade will more than make up to the wholesaler for the drop off of May and June.

SOME of the smaller onion set growers are complaining that they received mixed onion seed from several different sources last spring. The mixture is most noticeable in the seed sold for white; it contains about one-third of a mongrel stock of yellow. In some lots that were bought for yellow an inferior red shows to the extent of about fifty per cent. These unfortunate happenings can be laid up against the promiscuous buying of seed by brokers and others who are not posted, and who sell seed on a margin of 5 cents or 10 cents per pound to anybody they can sell to. It is all onion seed to them.

$350.00 Saved by a Single Test With the Bauer Germinator.

TROY, N. Y., May 30, 1907.
BAUER GERMINATOR CO.,
Manitowoc, Wis.

GENTLEMEN:—

The Bauer Germinator works to perfection.

It is a rule of this establishment to test for germination every variety of seed before it is ordered for sale. Most of these tests are made in soil by a seed tester, but it frequently happens that delayed shipments from Europe arrive so late in the season that a soil test would take too long, so we decided to use your Germinators in such cases.

The results have been very satisfactory. For instance, we received from our Denmark grower a shipment of Cauliflower and samples were sent to our tester and at the same time tests were placed in your Germinator. In a few days your Germinator showed us from 90 per cent to 100 per cent germinating strength for the seed. In one week we received the report of the soil test as less than 40 per cent. We immediately called the attention of our man to this discrepancy and ordered a new soil test. The result of the second test was exactly like your Germinator.

Now, the first soil test had been governed by some unknown conditions which resulted in the very low germination. Had we not had the check test in your Germinator, we undoubtedly would have accepted the first test as correct and we would not have offered the seed for sale. The value of the seed, by the way, was about $350.00.

Yours very truly,

H. W. GORDINIER, Seed Merchant.

Price of The Bauer Standard Germinator Complete is 50c each or $5.50 per dozen.

BODDINGTON'S GIGANTIC CYCLAMEN

The seed of Cyclamen is often sown too early in the year; from the middle of August to the end of September is the right time; the seedlings should be grown on to the flowering stage without any check whatever. When grown cool the results are most satisfactory. Boddington's Gigantic Cyclamen are unequalled for size or quality of bloom. A magnificent strain of Cyclamen, with flowers of extraordinary size and substance.

Gigantic White Butterfly. Pure white, immense flower.

Gigantic White. The largest of all white Cyclamen.

Gigantic Cherry-Red. Most brilliant and effective.

Gigantic Rose. Immense flower of a pleasing shade of light rose.

Gigantic Pink. Exquisite shade of soft pink.

Gigantic Crimson and White. A magnificent flower of the largest type.

Gigantic Crimson. Most striking color; under artificial light it appears to be almost luminous.

Any of the above varieties, trade pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.25; 1000 seeds, $12.00.

Gigantic Mixed. A mixture of all the above varieties in proper proportion. Pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.25; 1000 seeds, $12.00.

GIGANTIC PRINCESS MAY. A very pretty type of Cyclamen.

Color pink, with suffused blotches of crimson at base of petals. Pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.25.

GIGANTIC SALMON QUEEN PINK. Undoubtedly the most distinct and beautiful color found in Cyclamen. Habit good and foliage handsomely marked. Pkt., 50c; 100 seeds, $1.25.

Cyclamen Persicum giganteum Salmonium splendens. A most unique and intense salmon color. Good habit. Pkt., 50c.

Cyclamen Persicum Giganteum Rokoko. The flowers, pure white to dark red, are beautifully fringed, measure 5 inches in diameter, are borne on straight, upright stems. Pkt., 50c.

Four Grand Novelty Cyclamen

Bridesmaid. New Cyclamen of the "Papilio" variety, with large well formed flowers of a pure white with a red eye, while the beautifully fringed petals are broadly edged with bright red. Pkt., 50c.

Crimson King. The best of all crimson varieties and strikingly beautiful. Pkt., 50c.

Phoenix. Bright cherry-crimson flowers, freely produced and rising well above the prettily marked foliage. Pkt., 50c.

Vulcan. The rich crimson color is very striking and contrasts admirably with the pure white of Butterfly. Pkt., 50c.

Springfield, Mass., December 17, 1906.

In 1905 you sold me some Cyclamen seed that you recommended very highly. These plants are now in bloom, and are the finest Cyclamen I have ever had, and as good as any I have ever seen. The plants are fine and the colors and size of the flowers are great.

CATALOGUE BUILDING.

This is the time the forehanded seedsman is getting busy on his catalogue for 1908, which should be ready in good time for mailing to the south by December. Haste makes waste in catalogue making, for no one does his best work regularly at top speed, and everyone is planning to make his next book a little better than its predecessors.

"Of tremendous importance in the catalogue are the illustrations," said J. H. McFarland in his address to the Seed Trade Association at the New York convention. "Properly handled they sell the articles listed. The illustrations of a few years ago proceeded largely from only two sources, both of which are now practically abandoned. Photographs are largely used and will be more largely used as the means for making them are adopted by the seedsmen. An hour might well be spent in discussing the mechanics of photography as applied to seedsmen's uses and the methods of making illustrations. We do not have that hour at our disposal, and I therefore pass quickly to the methods of engraving used, now confined practically to but two. Of these, the line cut requires drawing and thus interposes the hand of man. The only reason for using line engravings is to permit printing on cheaper paper, and the tendency is away from them at the present time.

"The twentieth century catalogue is illustrated by the halftone process. In having the halftones made I would point out one pitfall, and that is the square-inch rate offered by the cheapest man, who makes you believe you are getting your engravings cheaper while he gets

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

NURSERYMEN often will find profit in the perusal as well as the publication of advertisements in the classified department of the REVIEW.

THE big peony growers are missing the orders of the men who a couple of years ago were planting acres apiece, but who now have become sellers instead of buyers.

ALTHOUGH all nursery work looking to next season's supply was late last spring, the growing season generally has been so good that the late start has been made up for.

WILLIAM A. PETERSON, proprietor of the Peterson Nursery, Chicago, is a director in the State Bank of Chicago, one of the most prosperous financial institutions in the city, and takes almost as much pleasure in watching its deposits grow as he does in seeing the peonies bloom in the spring.

THE nurseries of the Pennsylvania railroad are now so extensive that it has been deemed advisable to organize a forestry department, and this has been placed in charge of E. A. Sterling, who has been in the government employ in the same capacity. The trees are cultivated to fill the demand for ties, which are growing scarcer every year. The company owns a number of forests, and there are said to be 20,000 acres in the Allegheny mountains alone. The trees which are being planted now will not be available for nearly forty years.

THE FUTURE OF THE PEONY.

I noticed an article in the REVIEW in regard to the future commercial value and standing of the peony. I rather agree with the writer on some points. Flooding the market with flowers at any time has a natural result that cannot fail to bring disappointment and loss to the shipper. Being perishable and not a necessity, there would be considerable risk to large growers.

But this is not my idea of the proper use of the peony. The field is hardly opened yet and people have not realized the value and beauty of this magnificent plant and its adaptability to our climate. No amount of cold or blizzard has any effect on it. It bears harder usage than most other plants and never fails to respond to good treatment. Its uses for public parks, cemeteries and ornamental grounds, etc., have not been half appreciated as yet. We have all the western states and Brother Jonathan's best territories to the north of us, and, by the way, he is waking up, getting his hands out of his pockets and sending us nice orders, and I presume peonies are perfectly at home up to the arctic circle. I think every florist should have several hundreds of the plants, assorted kinds, for his own use. He would find them both pleasant and profitable to have. Send a choice dozen to a family in distress. It will pay you better than money. I used to furnish them free for Decoration day, but they soon rose in value and now command a good price to private parties. In fact, I rarely have enough. I have had people put off parties and meetings simply because peonies would not be in in time. I might speak also of the lasting qualities of the peony compared with house-grown flowers; the latter may be said to be as fleeting as a dream, however beautiful they may have been a short time before.

F. A. BALLER.

PREPARATION OF LAND.

At the Detroit meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen, papers on "Preparing Nursery Land" were read by R. G. Chase and John Siebenthaler. Mr. Chase said: "Late in the fall we plow our land to a depth of ten or twelve inches and leave it until spring, when, just before planting, it is dragged and marked. Where a machine is used for opening the crevice in which seedlings are placed, the compact soil of the late fall plowing is no objection, but rather a help. There are certain sections of the country where porous sub-soil is found, which does not make it absolutely necessary to tile drain; yet it has been my experience that drainage pays, no matter what the soil is.

"In selecting land for planting nursery stock, it is essential that land be chosen which has not been used for nursery purposes, although we have found it is no disadvantage to follow pit fruits with seed fruits and vice versa, and after these plantings are taken off, the land may be used again for ornamental trees, shrubs and small fruits. This without any fertilizers. We have found it advantageous to fertilize for roses, currants and gooseberries, no matter what the condition of the soil is. Cover crops make a good fertilizer, and we have found it very beneficial to turn under a meadow late in the fall. We prefer, however, a good growth of clover."

Mr. Siebenthaler said that land that has been "treed" should be planted in corn or other cultivated crop for one year in order to get rid of all roots left in the ground. The next season sow in clover

The Weeping Willow.

THE WEEPING WILLOW.

The willows are among our commonest trees—so common, in fact, that they are not prized as they deserve, for they are among our most rapid growers and are useful wherever effects are wanted quickly. They are hardy throughout the temperate zone and will grow in almost any sort of a situation. They need not, as many suppose, be planted only in moist places, though in such localities they thrive prodigiously. They propagate easily; indeed, many years ago the father of the writer of this note had occasion to protect an island in an Illinois river which was annually covered with the drift of spring freshets, and did it by setting a row of green posts of Salix alba close together all about the island. In the course of time practically every post made roots and, being kept trimmed to make an upright growth, the island is to-day surrounded by a waving wall of green more than fifty feet high. The trees are set so close together that now it is impossible to pass between them in many places.

The weeping willow is the best for specimen planting. The long, pendulous branches are very graceful, and it makes an admirable shade tree. Many fine specimens are to be seen in parks and large private grounds, but it is doubtful if anywhere in the United States there is a more perfect specimen than the Salix Babylonica illustrated herewith. It is growing on the grounds of Notre Dame University, at South Bend, Ind. When it was planted, a comparatively few years ago, as the ages of large trees go, it was such a plant as can be bought for 50 cents to 75 cents in any good nursery.

or other grass, with a cover crop if necessary. After the land has rested for two or three years a good coat of barnyard manure should be applied; then this and the clover or grass should be turned under and the corn or other cultivated crop grown on it. The following season the land will again be in as good condition to grow nursery stock as it ever was before.

NECESSITY FOR INSPECTION.

[The following is a portion of an address by A. F. Conrad, professor of entomology at the Texas Agricultural College, before his State Horticultural Society.]

Several seasons ago we were spraying an infested orchard in one of the northern states. At dinner time one of the workmen took his dinner pail and ate the contents under an apple tree in an orchard near by. When approached by the writer his hat and clothing had scale on them and he had been sitting under a perfectly clean tree during the last thirty minutes, leaning against the trunk. Many other illustrations could be cited, but let this suffice.

We know that as the broods are not defined these crawling specimens are in evidence on every infested tree during the entire growing season. They may then be carried by birds, bees and other insects. They may be blown by the wind, and frequently, while spraying an infested orchard, careless operators carry them on their hands and clothing. After they have become stationary they may be carried by the plowman when cultivating the orchard. Correspondents often wrap infested twigs carelessly when transmitting them through the mails for identification.

We should be convinced that an effective inspection force is of incalculable service to our horticulture. It is of the highest importance that the men on the inspection force are not only well qualified in detecting injurious insects and plant diseases, but that they are conscientious men with plenty of common sense.

Any law may be operated and applied according to its wording, yet the spirit of the law may not be there. A first-class nursery inspector soon learns to know his constituents as a good banker or a merchant knows his patrons. He works for the interest of horticulture. He soon learns where trouble may or may not be expected. His knowledge is guarded and is not given to the public except where necessary to help carry out the intent and purpose of the law.

It has been suggested to the writer that such information should be public property. In the files of the entomological department of the Agricultural and Mechanical College a complete record is kept of every insect that reaches there; this has been the practice through several years. Maps are kept showing the distribution of all pests. Many of these records have never been shown to newspaper reporters and have not been seen by visitors or other persons not officially connected with the department.

If the inspection office was supported to the extent that every infestation could be located, I could see no reason why these records should not be published. If we should publish them now, what would be the result? The sections where the scale and other pests are known to occur would be commercially injured, while other parts of the state where the pests are as yet undiscovered might have the confidence of the public. Hence there is nothing gained by exposing some and not others, owing to our deficient knowledge of the distribution. If we want to publish let us first determine where all the infestations are and then treat all alike. Great as is the state of Texas, it is pitifully small in dealing with its vast disease and insect problems.

MARK CASES FULLY.

Now that autumn is coming, and with it shipments of bulbs, palms, azaleas, etc., we will no doubt hear of many cases of goods gone astray during shipment, as has been the case in past seasons.

All this can easily be avoided. Owing to the common practice of not putting the consignor's full name, as well as the name and address of the consignee, on cases containing these goods, countless mistakes, as well as much confusion, have been caused.

Heretofore, in most instances, each case has merely been numbered, sometimes the shipper's initials being added.

Then when a case goes astray in transportation the railroad company has nothing whatever to go by except a number. Again, when a buyer receives several shipments at the same time, often there is no way of telling which is which and the receiver is at a loss to whom to give credit for same.

Not only the European shippers are at fault, but some of the large American houses as well.

Each and every box should be properly tagged, the same as is done in other lines of business, and not until this is done will the trouble caused by goods gone astray be eliminated. H. S.

SHRUBS.

It is a mistake to allow young privet to grow unhindered, as to clipping, when in the nursery rows. One, two and three-year-old plants may be allowed to retain a generous proportion of growth made during the early part of the season, but better results will be attained in the shape of stocky, useful plants if they are clipped once at least, and perhaps twice. It will hasten the development of the plants if those struck from green cuttings are planted in nursery rows whenever they are fairly well rooted.

Spiraea Anthony Waterer is now glorious; it will also continue so for some time, and even after the first crop of flowers is gone a new crop can be brought into being if the wood is cut back. This is one of the most useful and showy of hardy plants. It was only the other day I saw a large mass of it planted just inside the wall at the entrance to a private residence. At each side of the gate outside a number of box trees were planted in groups; these, without the redeeming assistance of the spiraeas inside and directly back of them, would look stiff and ineffective, but the spiraeas were there in full bloom and they made a charming picture.

The dogwoods are beautiful in the fall, and especially so when they attain considerable size, which they do in a remarkably short time in favorable locations. It is useless planting dogwoods in wet soil or where the water lodges around the roots of the plants all through the winter and early spring. They may continue to exist in such locations indefinitely, but they will not thrive there. D. M.

PALO ALTO, CAL.—Flint & Flint, proprietors of the Las Palmas Greenhouses, have just finished the erection of three greenhouses, each 18x100 feet, in which they expect to grow carnations principally. D. V. Tuttle, formerly with the Storrs & Harrison Co., of Painesville, O., will be in charge.

PACIFIC COAST.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There is little to report in the line of progress for the last week. Business continues to be very quiet, with the garbage barrel as the best customer. The weather is still cool and, judging from appearances, we are not to have any warm spells at all this season. Flowers are overplentiful, especially those that are strictly in season at this time. Asters easily head the list and they are good and very cheap. There are twice as many cut and offered for sale in town as there were at this time a year ago. They can be purchased from the growers at from 50 cents to $2 per hundred and the usual price is about $1 per hundred. With other outside stock, sweet peas are the best sellers, and although the stems are getting short they are well bought up.

Gladioli and dahlias are being used freely in decorations, but the price is lower than it has been. Amaryllis are plentiful, but move slowly. Liliun album and L. rubrum are in full bloom and cost the stores from $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen stems. The quality of the white variety does not seem to be up to the usual standard, but the pink sort are uniformly good.

Business is a shade better than it has been, with some signs that it will increase in the near future.

Over in Oakland the retailers are in the same condition, although the growers report things moving better than at this time one year ago.

Various Notes.

A. Mann, Jr., has sold out his interest in the Shibley-Mann Floral Co. and has established himself in the wholesale floral supply trade, with headquarters on Pine street.

J. Seulerger, of Oakland, has returned from a visit to Yosemite valley, where he spent several weeks in company with his wife and family.

E. W. McLellan, of Burlingame, has been made a party to a suit brought against the proprietors of the Palace hotel by Frank Cuneo, who seeks to recover $20,000 for the death of his son. Mr. McLellan had charge of the removal of the brick walls and it was by the falling of one of these that the young man was killed.

Louis Berthold, formerly employed by H. M. Sanborn, the Berkeley florist, was arrested while trying to sell a horse he had stolen from the nursery.

Hutchings & James, of Elmhurst, have a very fine stock of poinsettias coming on for the Christmas trade. These, together with a good assortment of ferns and cyclamens, are handled in large quantities by this firm.

A NEW GOVERNMENT STATION.

Dudley Moulton, county entomologist of Santa Clara county and member of the entomological division of the Department of Agriculture, has been appointed head of the government station which will soon be established in the Santa Clara valley. This station will have for its object the study of the life, history and habits of insects affecting deciduous plants and the methods of exterminating the pests. Mr. Moulton, who has just returned from a few weeks' visit to the fruit districts of San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys in company with D. J. Quaintance, of Washington, is looking for a suitable house and grounds near San Jose, and the station will be established within a few weeks. The station will include offices and laboratory and will be equipped with all that is essential to the prosecution of the work. Mr. Moulton will be assisted by Chas. T. Paine, of San Jose, who is well known as an entomologist.

The station will be located in a place extremely favorable for the study of all kinds of fruit pests. Many fruit destroying insects of world-wide fame have made their first appearance in Santa Clara valley, noticeably the San Jose scale, which was successfully extirpated several years ago.

During the last three years a new pest has appeared, in the form of a peculiar breed of horned caterpillar. For two seasons it contented itself with feeding off the oak trees, but this year it attacked the apricot and prune orchards and has become a serious problem, forcing the fruit growers to spray their trees with various chemicals. As yet no effective method of dealing with the caterpillar has been discovered, but Mr. Moulton hopes to have it under control by next season.

WHITE FLY IN ORANGE GROVES.

C. W. Woodworth, head of the Department of Entomology, who has just returned from a trip to Bakersfield, announced that the white fly, the dreaded pest of the orange groves, would invade the orange groves of the southern part of the state, and the industry, worth more than $30,000,000 to the people of that section, would be at the mercy of this insect.

Prof. Woodworth found the fly in the orange groves of W. S. Tevis, where the attack seems to be centered in the Kern county district, and the experts decided that the insect was undoubtedly the dreaded white fly, which has done untold damage to the orange groves of Florida, the amount of damage done in that state being estimated well up in the millions of dollars. Prof. Woodworth now declares that this fly is firmly rooted in Kern county and that nothing can stop its advance into the orange groves of the south. The insect travels on the railroads, in the coaches and cars. Nothing seems to be able to keep the pest out along the railroad. It will only have to cross the Tehachapi to gain the orange groves farther south.

The insect is feared more by the orange growers of the state than any other pest. It begins its depredations on the leaves, passes to the fruit and quickly destroys the crop. In Florida the loss to the orange growers was fully twenty-five per cent of the crop, which, had it not been for the white fly, would have been heavier by about $5,000,000.

THE JAPANESE SITUATION.

The fact that the Japanese have become prominent factors in the horticultural life of the Pacific coast is viewed with considerable concern by nurserymen and florists all over California. If they adopt the same tactics that they have used in the fruit and berry districts, where they control miles of orchards and berry farms, to say nothing of practically all the potatoes on this portion of the coast, the prospect is indeed a grave one for the horticulturists. By their methods of living they are able to thrive on such a small amount that it would be impossible for a white man to compete with them in any line of work.

They are naturally given to horticultural and agricultural pursuits and, being of a most wonderfully thrifty and saving nature, they have discovered that they have it in their power to compel their white neighbors to sell their products at such small prices that there is less than a living in it. However, when the coast is clear of competition in the immediate neighborhood, Mr. Japanese begins to show immediately that he can be an occidental as well as an oriental, and he puts on the price for all the traffic will bear. There is nothing that will abash him when he considers that he has the whip hand. This was abundantly shown a few months ago when the Japanese dealers held practically all the potatoes in California.

If the Japanese could be Americanized in the broad sense it would make but little difference whether they controlled any commodity or not, but with the feeling existing against them and their methods in California it is no wonder that congress has been asked to take drastic measures regarding their admittance into the country.

The flower growers have felt the Japanese invasion fully as much as those in other lines and the fact that the largest concerns in the neighborhood of San Francisco are owned by Japanese, worked by Japanese labor and the net returns sent to Japan is something that should not be lost sight of.

Eastern people do not realize what Japanese competition is; in fact, it is impossible to understand the perseverance and ambition of these men, and what the outcome will be it is hard to tell at this time.

An incident occurred at Berkeley several weeks ago that was recorded in the REVIEW at the time. The carnation houses of a Japanese grower by the name of P. Nabeta were practically destroyed by a crowd of boys living in the neighborhood. I mention this to show the feeling existing here against the Japanese. Such actions should be, and are, punished severely by the authorities, but this affair was published in some of the leading Japanese papers and caused much indignation, both in Japan and this country. It was an act of vandalism, however, and was so understood by the owner of the greenhouses, who has been a resident of Berkeley for several years and has been very successful as a grower of carnations. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The passing of July was of no great importance to the florists, business being extremely quiet all through the month. The summer resorts are reaping their harvest just now and the exodus of our society people is quite noticeable. August was ushered in with delightfully cool weather, which seems to be having a stimulating effect on trade. The call for fine funeral work is brisk. The window displays are neat and trim, consisting of potted ferns, flowering begonias and other seasonable stock.

Roses and carnations are at low ebb, their place being filled with an abundant supply of sweet peas, asters, gladioli, and auratum lilies, and for the arrangement of these for any occasion we are certainly favored in one respect here, that of having an available supply of Oregon grape, common fern, huckleberry and beautiful maple foliage. The maple leaf is rich and effective in its varied colors and is often preferable to the asparagus green.

Various Notes.

Those of the craft who are too busy to take a vacation are building and remodeling and we hope to pay them a visit soon.

Sam Roake, of Oregon City, has sold his place and home, and moved to Clackamas, where he will operate on a more extensive scale.

Gus Teufel, out on the Barnes road, has expended some of his hard-earned cash in the building of a new residence and another greenhouse.

Julius Broetje, of Milwaukee, finds his hobby, the cultivation of the pond lily, a paying one. For some reason these beautiful aquatics do not grow promiscuously in Oregon, and they retail for $1 a dozen.

We have had several callers of late. Miss Armstrong, of Spokane, thinks Portland a good place in which to gather a few ideas and she is one of the progressive of the fair sex.

E. Gill, the nurseryman, of Berkeley, Cal., comes annually to replenish our stock of outdoor roses.

PARK SUPERINTENDENTS MEET.

The American Association of Park Superintendents held its annual convention in Toronto, Canada, August 15, 16 and 17. Unfortunately, President Byron Worthen failed to attend the convention and Vice-president John Chambers, of Toronto, was appointed chairman for the convention, a position he filled with much satisfaction to all. The secretary reported a small balance in the treasury, though practically all the members had paid their assessments.

The following new members were elected: D. Henry Sullivan, Boston; H. W. Busch, Detroit; C. A. Bosan, Minneapolis; J. C. Morley, Los Angeles; E. R. Mack, Wilmington, Del.; D. F. Roy, Malden, Mass.; J. W. Boone, Baltimore; Fred Wessler, Baltimore; C. L. Seybold, Baltimore; W. H. Dunn, Kansas City; R. W. Curtis, Boston; Wm. Donaldson, Buffalo.

Walter Hubbard, of Meriden, Conn., was elected to honorary membership.

It was decided that the convention next year be held at St. Paul and Minneapolis, the date to be arranged by the executive committee.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President—John F. Cowell, Buffalo, N. Y. Vice-presidents—John Chambers, Toronto; G. X. Amrhyn, New Haven, Conn.; J. W. Rodgers, Cincinnati; John Dunbar, Rochester; J. W. Thomson, Seattle; Jackson Dawson, Boston. Secretary-treasurer—F. L. Mulford, Harrisburg.

Thursday afternoon the party, under the guidance of Toronto officials, visited Queen's park, the university grounds, Alexandra park, Exhibition park and High park. Thursday evening, at the business meeting, a paper was read by Mr. Wirth, of Minneapolis, on "Band Concerts in Parks," and a discussion of the subject followed. Friday forenoon a business meeting was held, and in the afternoon Island park was visited. In the evening there was a business meeting and papers were read by Messrs. Dunbar and Baker. Saturday forenoon was devoted to an auto ride through the city and visits to Riverdale zoo, Rosedale Ravine drive, Reservoir park and Upper Canada College. J. D.

MONTREAL.

Business has been much livelier lately, as there has been quite a number of large funerals. Flowers are more plentiful now, especially asters. Roses and carnations are not of a very good quality. The weather is very changeable, which hinders the builders.

P. McKenna & Son have opened their new store in Bennett's theater. It is quite a small place, but is nicely finished off in white and green. L. McKenna, assisted by Miss Rodderick, will have charge of it for the present.

Miss Murray is away near Toronto, for a month's holiday.

Mr. Campbell sailed from Scotland Saturday for home.

C. W. Sutherland, of Athol, Mass., fifteen miles from here, has erected a mushroom house 17x100 feet, ventilated on both sides. He is also adding a seventy-five horse-power, tubular, brick-set boiler to his equipment.

There is some remodeling being done at Carl J. Erickson's place in West Gardner, Mass.

Wm. W. Rhuland has installed a Sturtevant blower for forced draft in his boilers, in order to burn cheaper fuel. He has also changed the stock in his houses, having thrown out a large percentage of pot plants and added 1,000 grafted rose plants to his stock, making 1,700 in all, on a place that never grew roses until he took the place a year ago this month. He has been very successful with them and they have met with a large demand. W. W.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Horticultural Society.

At this time of the year, when it is warm and dull, the meetings of the New Orleans Horticultural Society are not very well attended. Still, at the last meeting we had a fair attendance and ex-President P. Chopin invited the members to have their next monthly meeting at his residence. He said he has a large, airy front room and will do his best to take care of us. The general routine of business was transacted. One of the most interesting parts was the inspection of a new nephrolepis introduced by Chas. Eble. It is a spore from Anna Foster. It will certainly take the first place as a novelty among those that have been so far introduced from the south. Chas. Eble is taking it to the convention and will try to dispose of part or all of his stock. The society voted a certificate of merit to the new-comer, and during the partaking of refreshments it was christened under the name of Eblii.

Various Notes.

Mr. Cook and daughter are home again from their European trip. Mr. Cook says he is well satisfied with his rest, but that there is nothing yet better than the United States and old New Orleans.

H. Papworth, U. J. Virgin, Chas. Eble, M. Cook and J. Newsham attended the convention.

Friends of O. Abele will be glad to hear that he is improving after the severe illness he just had.

Communications have been received from the Jeanerette Fair Association concerning the fair to be held there September 11 to 15, inclusive. It is no doubt a good opportunity for our florists to send up an exhibit. It is rather early to send chrysanthemums and a little out of season for any pot plants, but no doubt a good many florists will take advantage of the very liberal proposition made by the association.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

The Illinois State Florists' Association met at the Leland hotel, Springfield, Saturday, August 10. Among those present from out of town were W. N. Rudd, of Chicago; J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville; R. R. Spafford, of Morrison; A. F. Longren, of Des Plaines; F. L. Washburn, of Bloomington; A. C. Beal, of Champaign. The proposed changes in the constitution and by-laws of the association were discussed and adopted. The location of the association was changed from Joliet to Springfield.

The latter part of the day was spent in visiting the places of A. C. Brown, A. C. Canfield and Miss Bell Miller. The visiting members were royally entertained by A. C. Brown, A. T. Hay and A. C. Canfield.

A. C. BEAL, Secretary.

JOLIET, ILL.—Peter Olsem, superintendent of the growing at the greenhouses of the Chicago Carnation Co., was married to Miss Emilie Lepper, of Joliet, on Saturday, August 17. The couple immediately started on their wedding tour, stopping in Chicago until Sunday, when they accompanied the Chicago delegation to the S. A. F. convention at Philadelphia. They will also visit New York, Washington, and the Jamestown exhibition, returning about September

Beginning with the first year, 1895, with an importation of 100, this Spring, 1907, our importation has swollen to the enormous quantity of 6000 of the 3 best known ARAUCARIAS, Excelsa, Compacta Robusta and Glauca. Our Araucarias are so well introduced that they represent every city, county and state of America, from the Atlantic to the Pacific and as far as Cuba and Mexico. It is always my earnest desire to improve my system in buying, raising, selling and shipping our production to such an extent that it not only benefits us but so that it will yield a fair profit into the pockets of the buyers.

Now is the time to fill your empty houses and make money fast, as the plants will grow into money while you sleep.

OXALIS ENNEAPHYLLA.

Although the handsome Oxalis enneaphylla was introduced to cultivation upwards of thirty years ago, it has not long been available to the purchaser of such plants, and hence it is but little seen in gardens, says a writer in an English Gardeners' Magazine. It is, however, well known to those who have made a specialty of alpine and other hardy flowers, and some who have had it have found some difficulty in its cultivation. It is perfectly hardy, as one might expect from a Fuegian plant, but in some places it appears to dwindle away, and to die out in a few years. In a well-drained situation on a rockery and with partial shade, it thrives well, and for a considerable number of years I have experienced no difficulty in its cultivation under these conditions. Plenty of stones and grit in the soil will be found beneficial, and a good plant will well repay any little trouble its requirements call for.

From its creeping stipes arise a number of delicately red-tinted stalks, each bearing a rosette of pretty gray-green leaves, each elegantly divided, and closing partially towards evening, as is the manner of the wood sorrels. Among these leaves there rise other stalks, tinted like those of the foliage, and carrying handsome white or pale rosy-tinted flowers of considerable size and with an almost satin-like luster. These only open well in the sun, and thus their beauty is more prolonged than if they were exposed all day and night to the weather. I have grown it in several positions, but in all I find it flourishes best in partial shade, either from higher rockwork between it and the sun, or with the partial shade of some dwarf shrubs. It must be added that, although this oxalis likes a well-drained position, it objects to drought, and water may be required in dry seasons. It is one of my favorite alpine, and no one interested in such flowers can pass it without unstinted admiration of its beauties.

ARALIA MOSERI.

In some of my market reports, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser, I have referred to Aralia Moseri, and several growers have asked if it was distinct from the ordinary Aralia Sieboldi. It is a decided improvement on the original type, the leaves being broader, and, compared with the old form, it is shorter jointed. Certainly a great improvement in every way. I may say here that many growers spoil these useful plants by overcrowding and keeping them too warm. With plenty of room and light, a little warmth does not do any harm; but I have seen many instances where they have been spoiled by overcrowding and too much warmth. It is one of the plants which pays well to grow in limited quantities and do well. They should be potted in good loam with some manure added. I have kept seeds for some months, but they are soft, and should, in the ordinary way, be sown as soon as received. I know of no other seed that perishes so quickly under ordinary treatment. The only way it can be kept, is in an air-tight tin, with dry soil mixed with it. I once kept some seed from April to August, and it then germinated well, but I have known many instances where it has perished in a few weeks. It is a plant always in demand, and has, to

HOTBEDS FOR PROPAGATION.

Will you kindly tell me how to make hotbeds to propagate roses, hydrangeas, etc.? What temperature should they be kept at?
O. H. C.

It is not stated what classes of roses and hydrangeas are to be propagated. It is now somewhat late in the season to prepare hotbeds for cuttings of hybrid perpetual roses, hardy hydrangeas and other outdoor shrubs. A great amount of bottom heat is not needed. Some fresh horse manure, which has been turned over once or twice to allow the rank heat to escape from it, should be mixed with some leaves. This prevents overheating and the manure retains an equal temperature longer. Your hotbed may be either above or below the level of the ground. We like to have the bed for cuttings come a few inches higher than the surrounding ground. From eight to twelve inches of manure, well tramped, is ample. Be sure it is moist. If not, apply water to it. Cover this with sandy loam to the depth of three or four inches and well firm it. Cover this again with a couple of inches of clean sand. Water through a fine sprinkler, and cuttings can then be put in at any time. If desired, no loam need be placed over the manure and only sand used, but some growers prefer sandy loam altogether.

Cuttings require a close, moist atmosphere. It is difficult to give any exact temperatures for summer propagation, as climatic changes are so wide, but a bottom heat of 70 to 74 degrees and top heat of anywhere from 70 to 100 degrees will be suitable. When rooted, of course, less shade and more air can be given. The glass can be whitened for shade, or lath shadings used, the lath being best after the cuttings are rooted.

Hydrangeas, also other varieties of shrubs with soft cuttings, can be readily rooted in an ordinary greenhouse propagating bench in summer.
C. W.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Trade has been quite dull, with the exception of funeral work. Carnations are extremely scarce. Some fine late branching asters are to be seen. Roses are more plentiful and of a better quality.

Various Notes.

G. P. Kaupp, of Nevada, was a recent visitor. He is building another new house and was up here getting ideas. He has 14,000 feet of glass.

C. Fields, of Kansas City, Kan., is building one more greenhouse, 17x32 feet. He has it planted in chrysanthemums of the leading commercial varieties. They are planted in solid benches. Mr. Fields says that his business is growing rapidly and the demand is greater than his supply. The new house will probably be heated by hot water. Mr. Fields owns the property that the greenhouses are on and has plenty of room left to build more houses.

D. Freudenthal reports business to be very good, considering the dull season. He had planned a long vacation trip, but from present indications he says that it seems it will be impossible for him to leave, as he cannot get the proper help to assist his head clerk.

E. A. Humfeld and family are in Colorado among the mountains, near Manitou. Mr. Humfeld has not been feeling well for some time and we hope that the change of climate will do much to improve his health.

P. G. Lacey, who has been employed by the W. H. Humfeld Floral Co. for the last few years, is on a short vacation at Iola, visiting his parents and friends.

Alex. Kerr has returned from an extended trip through the Ozark mountains, where he has been looking for cheap land in which to invest some money. Land is to be had there for from $1.25 to $6 an acre, but it is rolling and rough, grown up with thick brush. Mr. Kerr also visited the large plantation of the late R. M. Snider, of Kansas City, who had three greenhouses built and a large range of houses under construction when he was killed in an automobile accident. In some of these large houses fruit was to be grown, such as peaches, grapes, pears and other small fruits. There are over 2,000 acres in this tract of land. There are deer and all kinds of game and a large lake full of fish. This lake is supplied by an immense spring. It was the intention of Mr. Snider to live here and entertain his Kansas City friends. W. H. H.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

The board of directors of the Central Michigan Nursery, at a recent meeting, formally decided to sell the property of the company for the benefit of its creditors. The total value of this property, including all the company's assets, has been variously estimated at from $10,000 to $15,000. An offer of $12,000 has now been received and accepted, the sale to be consummated not later than sixty days from July 20, 1907. The purchasers are J. L. Sornberger, George Hamilton and Geo. W. Sprague. It is estimated that the company's liabilities are approximately $100,000.

A FLORIST'S INVENTION

BY A SUCCESSFUL CARNATION GROWER

DESCRIPTION.

No. 1.—The rings can be immediately removed from the stakes by a simple twist of the wire ring. The stakes alone can be used, like the regular galvanized stakes. No. 2.—Rings attached and placed to fit any size plant. Open and closed. No. 3.—The Support as it appears when in use. H—A broad base that holds firmly to the soil—keeps the support standing always erect. E, F, G—Rings closed. C—Ring open.

WITH COMMON SENSE—A CLOSE APPLICATION of economy in the growing of his products, by a successful Carnation grower, has resulted in the invention of our Common Sense Carnation Support.

Figure it out as he did, and prove to yourself that the stringing method of supporting your Carnation plants is not quite the right method. In a measure it does its work, but it leaves plenty of room for an improvement.

It's costly in material and time taken to put it in place, and in appearance it's behind the times.

Let us prove to you that our Common Sense Carnation Support is perfect and practical. They serve the purpose at a lower cost. They do the work you want them to do. They fit every size plant.

Try a Sample, 100 2-Rings for $1.60. Special Prices in Quantity.

IT DID THE WORK.

We potted up about 6,000 4-inch geraniums as a surplus over the needs of our retail trade to try the REVIEW and see if it would sell some for us. We sent in a small advertisement and in five weeks we were sold out and received orders for 1,000 more than we had. We sent money back to eight different states. When a man gets his offer into the classified department of the REVIEW he wants to be careful or his stock will all be sold and he will have nothing left but empty houses to take care of. The REVIEW is worth dollars a year, instead of $1, to any one in the business. You can use this letter if you want to; it is true. RAGAN BROS.

LADDER FOR GREENHOUSE ROOFS

In the REVIEW of August 8 I saw a reference to a ladder for greenhouse roofs. I would suggest for the purpose a ladder such as is used in stores—in shoe stores, for instance—a ladder of the roller kind, with a track for the top of it to run on and another track at the bottom. Such a ladder could be moved by the operator wherever he wanted it, without the trouble of getting off it. W. M. S.

VERBENAS.

At the Temple show in London, 1907, a special feature was made of the section of verbenas to which the term auricula-eyed has been applied, and certainly the large white eye, especially in flowers whose ground color contrasted markedly therewith, was very conspicuous, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine. Some varieties in this section are Adonis, scarlet; Ethereal, rose-pink; Favorite, purple; Florence, bluish-violet; Radiant, bright crimson; The Queen, salmon-pink; Victor, rich purple; and Vulcan, deep crimson. Self-colored flowers of the Miss Willmott class were also well represented.

With regard to the at one time popularity of the verbenas, their decline, and recent resuscitation, it may be pointed out that in the decade 1860 to 1870 no less than seventy-three were given certificates by the Royal Horticultural Society of Great Britain, while in the next ten years the number was thirty-three, most of them being awarded in the early part of the decade. From that time, owing to disease and the vagaries of fashion, the culture of verbenas greatly declined, till the advent of the variety Miss Willmott acted as a decided stimulus to their culture. This variety was raised from seed, by the lady whose name it bears, ten or twelve years ago. It was selected by reason of its large flowers, vigorous habit, and delightful shade of pink, qualities which commended it to the notice of the growers for Covent Garden Market, who saw in it a promising novelty, and to those who took up its culture it proved at once very remunerative.

In the early days of the verbenas one of the most successful raisers was Mr. Eckford, so well known in after years for his work in the development of the sweet pea. Even when the garden varieties of verbenas were under a cloud, the more vigorous growing and nearly hardy species, V. venosa, with purplish-lilac flowers, retained its popularity, and was in general use for bedding purposes. It is a native of Brazil, was introduced in 1830, and resists the disease which used to carry off the garden varieties in such a wholesale manner. This species is in

COUNTESS SPENCER SWEET PEA.

The Countess Spencer sweet pea seems to be producing more surprises this season in the shape of progeny with new colors, says a correspondent of the Gardeners' Chronicle, London. All show the true characteristics of the Countess Spencer type, viz., the large wavy standard, large wings enfolding the keel, and the straight and open keel. The variety Countess Spencer resulted from a cross effected between Prima Donna and an unfixed seedling in 1899. The raiser was Silas Cole, and seeds were put in commerce before the variety was fixed. This, and the fact that some seeds of another variety were accidentally mixed with it, would account for the appearance of these so-called sports. There can be no doubt that these sports are the result of cross-fertilization, and until recently I imagined that they must all be the result of Mr. Cole's crosses, but I am now of the opinion that, owing Greenhouse Heating.

BOILERS FOR STEAM.

I have three greenhouses, 22x100, 22x70 and 16x80, and intend adding one more, 22x70. The boilers I have are one 44x108, contains fifty-one 2½-inch flues, with a round firehole through center, and one 36x108, horizontal, with thirty 3-inch flues. I intend putting in a larger boiler and can get one 46x144, with forty-two 3-inch tubes, or one 52x192, with sixty-four 3-inch tubes. I intend leaving one of the two that I now have in for emergency. Would the one 46x144 be large enough for my purpose? I grow roses, carnations and mums, also bedding plants. The boiler pit is six feet deep. Will a 4-inch pipe be large enough for steam main pipe? F. S. W.

The boiler 46x144 inches, with forty-two 3-inch tubes, should be ample to carry the four houses on a steam basis. It is a good plan to have a reserve boiler to provide against accident. A 4-inch main flow will do your work. Each of the 22-foot houses should have a 2½-inch flow from the main riser to the far end of the house, there dividing to supply fifteen 1¼-inch returns. The 16-foot house can be handled with a 2-inch riser and twelve 1¼-inch returns. If the returns are carefully graded there will be no difficulty about returning the condensation to the boiler, provided the water line of the boiler is two feet or more below the lowest heating pipes in the greenhouses. Do not make the boiler pit too shallow, as it will give no end of trouble. You can not make it too deep; twelve feet is not too deep for a boiler such as you intend using.

L. C. C.

PIPING IN MASSACHUSETTS.

I am building a greenhouse 22x65 feet. The north wall is seven feet high, with two feet of concrete, three feet of boards and two feet of glass, 16x24. The boarding will be double thick. The south wall is four feet high, with two feet of glass. The house is built with the long span to the south. The glass is 16x24, double thick. The house runs east and west, to connect with another house at the west end, with a glass partition where it connects.

How many runs of pipe will it take? What size would you advise using—1¼-inch or 2-inch? The boiler is a No. 16 Hitchings and is located in the cellar of the dwelling. The temperature required will be for carnations, say from 50 to 60 degrees.

W. L.

Your house can be heated with hot water by installing the following pipe: One 2½-inch or 3-inch flow from the boiler to the far end of the house, there to divide and return by fifteen 2-inch pipes. I would not advise the use of 1¼-inch pipe for hot water unless you intend converting the plant into a steam plant some day. If so, install twenty-one 1¼-inch pipes as returns.

and while the water does not seem to be very hard it gets so rusty as to be opaque after standing in the sun for a few hours. ity with which it rusts. If it rusts quickly, I should avoid it in the heating plant. It will be an easy matter to fill the system with rain water, which is ideal, and from time to time replenish the expansion tank from the same source, unless the plant is very large, in which case it will pay to build a cistern or tank to hold eave water.

L. C. C.

FILLING UNDER BOILER.

How much, if any, filling of earth or cinders should be put behind the bridge or fire wall, back of the grates, under a steam boiler of the usual round, tubular, return-flue type? The mason who set my boiler says it ought to be filled in to about twelve inches of the under side of the boiler. I am not sure he is right.

W. H.

It will make little difference whether the pit is filled back of the bridge wall or not. It has been my practice to excavate only as deep as the top of the bridge wall and then step down the height required for the fire box and ash pit. If you wish you may fill back of the wall even with its height, or you may allow ashes and soot to accumulate there. If it is left open it will be found an ad-

KROESCHELL Boilers

NOW IS THE TIME to PLACE YOUR ORDER

Made in 15 sizes. Heats from smallest houses up to 50,000 feet of glass. Will maintain 60 degrees at 15 below zero outside.

WILMETTE, ILL., July 19, 1907.

Please book my order for one No. 14 Kroeschell boiler. This boiler will take the place of the two No. 8 boilers you sold me in 1889-1891. I shall put the entire range onto the new No. 14. The No. 8, bought in 1889, is about used up, but the one bought in 1891 is still serviceable. Should you have an inquiry for a second-hand boiler, please send the party to me. If the new boiler lasts 17 years and does the work as well as the old ones, I shall be satisfied. The old ones surely were dandies.

JOHN FELKE, Sr.

STEVENS POINT, WIS., July 13, 1907.

I have your favor of the 12th on hand and in reply to yours about that No. 2 boiler I bought from you one and a half years ago, must say it works good and heats 8500 feet of glass for me. I used the best Wilmington lump soft coal. I burned last winter about 30 tons. Of course, coal costs money, so I found that your boiler did not waste any coal, and must say that I had to shut the drafts after two hours' firing.

CHAS. HELM.

CHICAGO, ILL.

In 1894 we bought one of your No. 12 boilers to take the place of four smaller boilers of another make. Your boiler has done the entire work to the highest satisfaction, saving labor and about one-third of the fuel we used to burn before. We had that boiler up to 1906, that is 12 years, having no repairs on it whatever, except one set of flues we put in in 1900. Last fall we installed one of your No. 14 boilers, having enlarged our plant. It takes care of 35,000 square feet of glass very easy. When firing we kept the ash doors open only about one inch. We think your No. 14 boiler could carry 40,000 square feet of glass.

DAMM BROS.

We have at present 12,000 square feet of glass on your No. 7 boiler and think it would carry 3000 or 4000 feet more. Can keep up the temperature in the coldest weather. We generally fire once between 6 p. m. and 6 a. m. Your boiler requires far less attention, is more economical and gives better satisfaction than the steam boiler we used before. To any prospective buyer of a boiler we make this suggestion: Put up a good chimney, high enough to insure good draft, have your heating pipes arranged properly and install a Kroeschell boiler and you will lay the foundation for future success.

IRIS LONGIPETALA.

This species and its variations afford a type of iris that is equal to the best for cultivation in the border. The root-stock is a vigorous rhizome that branches freely. The leaves are two feet long, narrow, erect, and pointed at the tips. The flowers are borne in threes on slender, erect, rarely flexuose stems, and they are as elegant as they are beautiful. The fall petals are horizontally poised, broadly spatulate or lanceolate, and six inches long. The standards are shorter and narrower, and are erectly held, and the margins of both are undulating. The color is mainly lilac, deeper as regards the standards, but the falls are paler and have a most elaborate veining of deep lilac over every part of the surfaces. There is a slight orange suffusion at the bend of the blade and some yellow down the claw. It is a lovely species, which must be seen to be fully appreciated.

The variety montana is smaller in all its parts, and the leaves are shorter. This plant is the I. longipetala of gardens, and the variety superba, also of gardens, is typical of longipetala. There are several forms in cultivation, but none is worthy of a distinct name. Ordinary soil and the treatment of common border plants suffices to keep this lovely iris in good health.

become thoroughly dried; it is far better to keep the soil somewhat moist, and to grow them undisturbed in the ground instead of in pots. In their natural habitat they flourish in wet situations, starting into life in winter and blossoming in spring. It will also be found that when the bulbs are left undisturbed in the ground, they will rapidly increase in numbers, and produce stronger growths and blossoms than otherwise. The Standard Steam Trap is acknowledged the best for the florist because it is durable, and does its work without trouble and annoyance, saving its cost by the economy in coal bills.

E. HIPPARD, Youngstown, Ohio

PIPING ON PACIFIC COAST.

I am about to build a greenhouse for general purposes. The house will be 18x30 feet, six feet high from floor to eaves and ten feet from floor to ridge. The benches will be three feet and a half from the floor. There will be a central bench, six feet wide; the two side benches and the two paths will be each three feet wide. Please give me directions as to how to pipe for hot water. I would prefer the overhead system for the flows, as the low-lying ground and the heavy rains in winter make it impossible to sink the boiler far. My location is about 400 miles north of San Francisco and nine miles inland. D. M.

One 2-inch flow placed under the ridge and eleven 2-inch returns will be sufficient to care for the house in question. If you do not wish to use a single flow under the ridge two 2-inch flows can be used, returning through ten 2-inch returns, five returns to each flow.

INTEREST IN ROCKING GRATE.

Peter Weiler, president of the Superior Machine & Boiler Works, says that practically every florist whom he meets, and he has a large business connection with the trade, asks about rocking grates. He says they all want to know how they work, what their advantages are, and particularly if it is true that they save coal consumption. Mr. Weiler says that one of the great advantages of a rocking grate is that it has less space between the bars than do the old-style grates. For his own part he long has made a special stationary grate, reducing the space from $\frac{5}{8}$ -inch to $\frac{3}{8}$ -inch, and thereby attaining a saving with no loss in the efficiency of the grate. Mr. Weiler says that in his opinion there is no rocking grate superior to the Martin grate, which a considerable number of florists are using.

To show small cost of equipping an acre of ground for outside watering, as far as nozzles and swivel wheels are concerned: There are approximately 44,000 square feet to the acre. My $\frac{1}{8}$ -inch nozzle, with a good pressure, will cover 300 square feet of ground and by first watering on one side of pipe and then on the other side, each nozzle will cover 600 square feet, or about 80 nozzles to the acre, which, at 15c each, will cost \$12.00 per acre for nozzles. Four swivel wheels will control the nozzles on an acre. These at \$2.00 each would make the cost of wheels and nozzles only \$20.00 per acre.

Send for circular of testimonials from those who use the Wittbold System under Glass.

The Market.

Stock is still scarce and quality poor. There are a few good roses in the market and they find ready sale. There are few carnations here at present. Asters are coming in much better, both as to quality of flowers and stems. There were a few funerals last week that used up a good deal of stock; otherwise the demand is quiet. Gladioli seem to be in good supply and help to make a showing. A good many carnations are benched and all report them looking fine. Geraniums this season are poor. A trip to Greenlawn cemetery found most of the geranium beds in bad shape. Cutworms are bad on mums at present.

Various Notes.

R. A. Currie, vice-president of the Florists' Club, is still a very sick man, but we all hope he will soon be able to be with us again, as he is one of the regulars at our club.

Sherman Stephens is contemplating putting in a new boiler, as his place has outgrown the capacity of his old one.

G. H. Woodrow, of the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., was in Cincinnati last week on business.

C. A. Roth contemplates putting up a new house this fall, 18x100 feet, for carnations. He reports stock looking fine.

The Columbus Floral Co. has moved to its new location, with the Wendt Bristol Drug Co.

The Munk Floral Co. has been shipping large quantities of asters to the Cincinnati market.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is busy planting its second house, 27x400 feet, with carnations and expects to have the third one ready in the next two weeks, which will also be for carnations.

Current Comment.

The school gardens were inspected July 31 by President Butterson, Alex. MacLellan and David McIntosh, the three forming a committee appointed by the Horticultural Society for the awarding of prizes for the best gardens in the city. At the Lenthal school there were seventy-five gardens planted and cared for by the children. These gardens, without exception, reflected great credit on the children and on the teacher who had oversight. In some of the gardens there were as many as fifteen varieties of vegetables and as many more of flowers, all grown well. Three gardens at this school were awarded the prizes, after other gardens had been visited. The school garden idea is certainly a good one and one that should be put into practice wherever possible.

At the last meeting of the Horticultural Society the schedule of premiums for the September show was adopted. This show will be a big one, as evidenced from the fact that the schedule contains seventy-seven classes. Dahlias will form one of the main features, with a class for commercial growers exclusively. There will be a valuable cash prize for a collection of new seedling dahlias and a medal for the best new seedling cactus dahlia. Table decorations will be prominent and so will fancy baskets of flowers and centerpieces. A novel feature of the show will be a contest for the best miniature flower garden. Several society ladies have intimated their intention of competing in the class for table decorations.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS

Convention Aftermath.

The Philadelphia convention of the S. A. F. has passed into history as one of the most successful in the long roll of its twenty-two predecessors. The attendance was at least as large as any to date and the weather, except for the rain at Dreer's and a shower Friday evening, was perfect. No summer resort could have afforded more suitable temperatures than did this city of Brotherly Love and much maligned August weather. While it was a little warm in the middle of the day, it was nothing like the historic weather at Dayton last year, and each night was cool.

The hospitality of Philadelphians is proverbial, but upon this occasion they outdid themselves. The entertainment was lavish; there was something doing every minute, and not only did the entertainment committee do its duty, and more, but the firms and individuals exerted themselves to provide for the comfort and pleasure of the visitors. One could hardly ask where any desired thing was to be had without having some Philadelphian insist on getting it for him.

It was gratifying to see so much interest taken in the business meetings of the society. While no radical steps were taken, the interest was keen and the attendance, if anything, increased from day to day. The debate at times verged upon the acrimonious, but such a thing was a call for John Westcott or E. V. Hallock, choice spirits that they are, to pour oil upon the troubled waters, and all went once more merry as a marriage bell, with the bond of good-fellowship once more cemented, and more firmly than before. John Westcott's annual love-feast took place in Horticultural hall Thursday evening. To it were invited the officers, ex-presidents, the bowlers and the newspaper men.

National Flower Show.

At the session Thursday evening, W. F. Kasting, chairman of the committee on national flower show, made a report. He stated that a guarantee fund of $10,490 has been raised by the committee of fifty, the premium list has been prepared and all is in readiness for the fall show in Chicago in 1908. He stated that the reason the schedule had not been printed was the desire to get an expression of opinion on the advisability of changing the date to March, to get a greater variety of exhibits and to get away from the political excitement in November. Many members expressed a preference for a spring show, but the Chicago people, who will be charged with the bulk of the work and who best know the possibilities in Chicago, spoke for November. On motion it was left entirely to the committee's discretion to adhere to or amend the original plan.

An important ruling was made in this connection. John Burton wanted to know if, having last year instructed the committee to proceed, the society was at liberty to upset its arrangements at any time by taking fresh action. President Stewart ruled that it could do so. H. B. Beatty appealed from the decision of the chair, but on motion of John G. Esler the chair was sustained.

Mr. Kasting stated that the tentative premium list would be supplied to the trade papers and requested anyone who can suggest an improvement to do so at once, before the committee finally tering the new varieties by originators' descriptions be continued and that in addition a certificate of registration be issued for all new plants of approved merit. It was recommended that the country be divided into sections, one for each horticultural center, and that where character of the plant is such that the committee on nomenclature cannot determine its merit without seeing it growing, the district committee shall make such examination and report.

On motion of P. O'Mara, who said that on a single reading of the committee's recommendations it was difficult to foresee the final result of such a plan, but that he nevertheless favored its trial, the society instructed the executive committee to put its provisions into operation.

Business Methods.

Several times during the convention the subject was brought up of a change adopts the schedule. Address W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Plant Registration.

Peter Bisset reported a plan for a change in the department of plant registration which the committee on nomenclature hopes will result in making the department of real value to introducers of novelties and to the trade. It was recommended that the present form of regis-in the society's business methods. The debate became warm at several stages, for to many minds the desire for a change was regarded as implying personal criticism, a wholly unwarranted view. The constitution and by-laws tie the society up very tightly in the matter of power to make appropriations, too tightly, many think, where the society meets but once a year, and the board of directors no more frequently. Some advocated a strict adherence to the laws of the society, while others thought the officers should be given more latitude in the matter of incidentals and unusual expenses.

The society voted to pay all the bills that had been held up, including the attorney's fee in the celebrated case against the U. S. Express Co., which was $150 instead of the $50 originally appropriated for the work. To clear the decks for the coming year the board of directors recommended an appropriation of $3,500 to cover the general expenses of the year. The society refused to concur. No other action was taken save to strike out of the record a portion of the discussion.

Final Sessions.

R. Vincent, Jr., reported for the committee on state vice-presidents' reports, calling attention to the unanimity with which the several states reported a prosperous year, but a cold and backward spring, which had a bad effect. The committee commended the work for floricultural experiment to be undertaken in Illinois as a result of the state appropriation secured by the Illinois Florists' Association and recommended that the school garden movement mentioned by several states be encouraged.

This was followed by the paper of Theodore Wirth, on "Horticultural Edu-power to act, and strengthened by the addition of F. R. Pierson and P. O'Mara.

W. W. Castle moved that to avoid such parliamentary entanglements as had occurred at a previous session, in future all motions and resolutions be presented in written form. Carried.

W. F. Gude offered a resolution of sympathy for Joseph Heacock, who was called away on the eve of the convention to search for a son who is reported lost in the wilds of British Columbia.

P. O'Mara read S. S. Skidelsky's report for the committee on publicity.

J. K. M. L. Farquhar stated that in view of the change of name which had been contemplated, no action had been taken by the committee on affiliation of other societies. The committee was continued.

F. R. Pierson and W. F. Gude, for the committee on the tariff and the interest of the trade in fostering home industries, reported that however home industry might or might not be affected by a revision of the tariff, they saw no chance of any change until a new administration comes in.

James Dean brought up the subject of the directors' action in authorizing the secretary to destroy a part of the old, valueless records of the society and said he took pleasure in presenting the society with a bound volume containing the annual reports from the first year. He years he has served as treasurer he never has accepted the salary of the office.

The society voted $200 to the National Council of Horticulture for its publicity bureau, but the directors later cut it down to $150.

W. N. Rudd made a statement to the effect that the adoption of a standard pot a number of years ago had been a grand good thing, but that now many manufacturers deviated from the standard. He moved that the chair appoint a committee to take the matter up afresh. Carried.

Trade Exhibit.

There were additions to the trade exhibits, even up to the closing day. Among the late arrivals were:

Thomas Brewer, Philadelphia, a fumigator, a machine diffusing a "liquid gas" so-called in the circulars, and in use in the Westley Jennings greenhouses in Philadelphia.

E. A. Beaven, Evergreen, Ala., wild smilax and fadeless sheet moss, the same exhibit that was recognized by the judges at Dayton last year.

E. W. Holt, New York, rubber hose. Keystone Sheet Metal Co., Ambridge, Pa., a patent metal hotbed sash.

Morehead Mfg. Co., Detroit. A model of the Morehead traps was exhibited by Rainear & Co., Philadelphia.

Presentations.

At the close of the session Thursday evening, August 22, J. D. Carmody demanded the floor—for the purpose of presenting to President Stewart a chest of silver. Mr. Stewart was visibly affected by Mr. Carmody's eloquence, and especially by his reference to Mrs. Stewart, who recently has been critically ill and who was not yet strong enough to stand the trip to Philadelphia. The president's acceptance was brief; he said he had done his best during all the years of his service to the society and that his interest and efforts would suffer no diminution with his return to the ranks.

David Rust pleased everyone immensely with his management of the trades display and the fat purse presented to him was only a fitting recognition of the indefatigable energy he had displayed in looking after the interests of all the exhibitors. The receipts for space in the hall were approximately $1,800.

The ladies presented Mrs. C. H. Maynard, of Detroit, with a set of silver spoons, as recognition of her successful efforts in the organization of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the S. A. F.

Willow Grove.

On Thursday afternoon Charles D. Ball and his committee entertained the ladies who did not bowl at Willow Grove. There were nearly 250 of them. Willow Grove is a spot famous for its beauty. Sousa's band was there and refreshments were served. The ladies were delighted.

Bayersdorfer's Luncheon.

Thursday afternoon H. Bayersdorfer & Co. served luncheon to a large number of visitors on the roof of their new building at 1129 Arch street. The roof was a veritable garden. Not only did the guests enjoy the luncheon, with music, but they took advantage of the opportunity to inspect the stock in the large and handsomely decorated store. All week the firm ran a free bus from Horticultural hall to the store.

cation in Agricultural Schools," and the one by J. K. M. L. Farquhar, on "Horticultural Education by Horticultural Societies and Clubs," followed by a general discussion. On motion the school garden committee, of which E. V. Hallock is chairman, and which had previously reported, was continued, with was given a rising vote of thanks. As secretary, Mr. Stewart had searched long and diligently but could never discover a copy of the first report.

The salary of the treasurer was fixed at $200 for the year, but Mr. Beatty gave notice he would turn it back to the society as in the past. In all the

At Belmont Mansion.

Friday the Florists' Club of Philadelphia entertained at Belmont Mansion, in the magnificent Fairmount park. It was a beautiful day for such an outing, marred only by a shower just as the festivities closed. Nearly 1,000 enjoyed the hospitality of the club, and enjoyed it thoroughly. Automobiles of the "rubberneck wagon" kind were provided for the trip to the park, each with a man to explain the points of interest passed, which added not a little to the pleasure of the trip. Arrived at Belmont, a lunch was served, after which the guests were at liberty to visit the many points of interest in the park, or to participate in the program of sports, chief of which was a ball game, Philadelphia against the United States. The teams were as follows:

All U. S.		Philadelphia.
R. Scott	c.	Saxton
Graham	p.	Dunding
A. Poehlmann	1b.	Eisele
Lutz	2b.	Watson
Seybold	3b.	Hartley
Netsch	ss.	Swan
Kessler	lf.	Davis
Reneke	cf.	Palmer
Winterson	rf.	Gibbs

The score was 14 to 21 in favor of the visitors. The features of the game were the pitching by Charles Graham, the home run by R. Scott, the coaching by E. F. Winterson and Israel Rosnosky's umpiring.

At intervals during the ball game quoits, sack races, potato race, three-legged race, wheelbarrow races and dashes for men, women and children were pulled off amid much hilarity.

At 4:30 dinner was served in a big tent, where 1,000 were accommodated at once. After keen appetites had been satisfied, the winners in the convention sports received their trophies at the hands of P. O'Mara. President Stewart then said a few words of thanks for the hospitality shown and called upon J. K. M. L. Farquhar, of the committee on final resolutions, who offered resolutions thanking the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, the Florists' Club, the Philadelphia ladies, W. F. Dreer and his associates, Mr. Thilow, David Rust, the press and everybody else, each for his part in making the convention so pleasant.

Rice's Rathskeller.

One of the unique features of the convention was the rathskeller in the basement of the store of M. Rice & Co., 1220 Race street. This was open all the week and is reported to have fed as many as 200 people a day. The room was heavily decorated with prepared evergreens, with tables down each side, separated from each other by decorated screens. Miss Rice and Mrs. Eschner saw to it that the visitors were refreshed in this cool spot before they were taken in hand by the guides for a trip of exploration through the building.

Park People Ill.

In recent years nearly every S. A. F. convention has sent some one to the hospital in the convention city. This year there were two, both park people. J. W. Rodgers, superintendent of parks in Cincinnati, was taken to the hospital on Thursday, August 22, suffering with acute indigestion, but his condition was not serious and he was able to proceed to his home in a few days.

On Friday, August 23, E. A. Kanst, assistant superintendent of floriculture for the South parks, Chicago, complained of illness and started to consult a physician. He went up against an official of the board of health, who diagnosed the case as a mild attack of diphtheria and at once confiscated Mr. Kanst, consigning him to the municipal hospital, where, although it was said his illness was slight, he would be compelled to remain ten days.

Notes.

Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., sent a vase of a fine early yellow mum, a seedling, No. 9-1-06, that adorned the president's table. It was marked "Bud taken July 1, cut August 20."

President S. S. Pennock, of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, to whose genius for organization much of the success of the convention is due, left Philadelphia after the Fairmount park entertainment on Friday and sailed from New York early the next morning for a visit in England.

Fairmount park is a wonderful place, probably the largest park in the world. It is eleven miles long and natural in most of its features. The Wissahickson drive is not equaled in any other spot in the country.

On Saturday a large number of the western visitors went to Atlantic City to rest up. Some of those who failed to engage rooms in advance did not find the place as restful as anticipated.

William F. Dreer came all the way from his summer home in Maine to be present at this convention.

William Graham, as chairman of the committees on decorations and on bowling, was a great success in each position.

The Philadelphia hotels have a kick coming. The refreshments served by the various committees and local firms were so numerous that the visitors hardly saw the inside of the hotel dining rooms.

Col. E. H. R. Green, of Dallas, Tex., was present to see how "we do things, for I'm a florist, you know." He surely is a florist, for he has nearly 300,000 feet of glass and finds the demand so great that he will proceed at once to erect nearly 200,000 feet additional.

J. A. Peterson and wife, of Cincinnati, are in Europe and were missed.

The Bowling.

In the ladies' team match there were six cities represented, by teams of five each. Chicago was the winner. In the men's team contests Philadelphia won. Following are the scores:

American Carnation Society.

The American Carnation Society met at the Hotel Walton, Philadelphia, at 11 p. m., August 22, President Fred H. Lemon occupying the chair and with about a dozen members present. The next annual meeting is to be held at Washington, D. C., January 28 to 31, in conjunction with a meeting of the American Breeders' Association. Several joint sessions have been arranged for, at one of which President Roosevelt promises to make an address. The program as arranged provides for the consideration of seedling raising, introduced by papers by Peter Fisher and Fred Dorner, Sr., C. W. Ward and R. Witterstaetter to open the discussion on them. W. N. Rudd and S. S. Skidelsky are to present papers on what one has a right to expect in the dissemination of a new variety, one to speak from the standpoint of the introducer and the other from that of the buyer. Dr. B. T. Galloway is to provide a paper on the studies of carnation soils made by the Department of Agriculture, and Prof. Norton, for the Breeders' Association, is to read a paper, subject not yet announced.

At the Philadelphia meeting it was decided to drop classes B, C and F from last year's schedule and to substitute a class with $200 in premiums for exhibits of fifty blooms of named commercial varieties.

Peter Bisset reported that the Washington Florists' Club is enthusiastic in the matter of the convention and exhibition. The meeting will cover three days this time, instead of two, as in the past, and will close with a banquet.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Seventy-five employees of the Bertermann Bros. Co. and their families recently enjoyed an outing at the Cumberland place owned by the firm.

GALVA, ILL.—Larson & Co. are enlarging and improving their greenhouses. The added buildings will not only increase the hothouse space, but will include a new office and also a new boiler-room, in which a Kroeschell boiler will be installed.

It is the purpose of the management to have a large and fine display of cut flower work, believing that such a display would prove attractive to the public. Under the competitive plan this has always been difficult, or impossible, to accomplish, because no competitor in the retail business wants to get second or third premiums. It is proposed to have several examples of each item, as shown in the list below. Any florist desiring to exhibit will please notify the superintendent of the exhibition. If there are too many applicants the exhibitors will be chosen by lot.

The management reserves the right to reject any exhibit deemed unworthy.

Mantel, Mirror, Grate; two examples, $35 each.

Panel, 3x5 feet, 6 examples, $25 each.

Doorway decoration, 3x8 feet, 4 examples, $40 each.

Roses in tall vases, 4 to 6 feet high; 50 American Beauty, arranged for effect, 4 examples at $50 each; 50 any other rose, arranged for effect, 4 examples, $25 each; 100 carnations, vases 2 to 4 feet high, arranged for effect, 6 examples, $25 each.

Mirror decoration, 4x6 feet, $25.

Chandelier decoration, 2 examples at $15 each.

Steamer basket or hamper, 4 examples at $25 each.

not, we think, prove a suitable sort for market. Few of the outdoor carnations come up to their catalogued reputations and unless they can be kept well watered are rather disappointing. The forms of Dianthus Heddewigi, especially the single ones, are very pretty and can be used for retail work. We doubt, however, if any of them will ever become market flowers. For garden decorations they are excellent, and worthy of extended culture. C. W.

CLEANLINESS IN GREENHOUSES.

Do good florists throw leaves, paper or any waste matter under the benches or on the walk when there are large cracks and broken places to let the matter through when it cannot be swept up? X. Y. Z.

"Cleanliness is next to godliness" is a rule which applies to greenhouse management as well as to household management, and should be practiced as diligently as possible. There accumulates in and around a greenhouse enough trash of various descriptions without throwing leaves, paper, etc., under the benches. Such matter makes breeding places for insects and diseases. All such matter as dead leaves, weeds and any other trash should be carried out, and the ground under the benches should be raked occasionally and sprinkled with slaked lime. This will keep the fungoid diseases in check and will help prevent the atmosphere from becoming foul during dark, damp spells, when the ventilators cannot be raised very much. A. F. J. B.

MEALY BUG ON FOLIAGE PLANTS.

What shall we do for mealy bugs on foliage plants? T. P. G.

The best remedy for mealy bug is undoubtedly force of water from the hose. A brass spray nozzle will clear it from any plant in short order. A variety of insecticides are used to combat it. Not knowing what foliage plants are affected, we are unable to recommend any particular one. Some of the nicotine solutions, given fairly strong, will kill the bug, but at the same time will injure tender leaved plants, especially those having woolly leaves. On smooth foliage plants like ficus, gardenias, crotons, ixoras, stephanotis and others with tough, smooth leaves, a wine glassful of kerosene in three gallons of water, if applied through a kero-water pump, will kill every bug.

No form of fumigation will really clean out this bug but hydrocyanic acid gas. This will do very trifling injury, even to tender plants like adiantum ferns, if applied when the houses are cool and as recommended frequently in the columns of the REVIEW. C. W.

BENTON HARBOR, MICH.—F. L. Tornquist has purchased the material for a new house, 16x50 feet.

LA SALLE, ILL.—Hans Larson, of the firm of Simmen & Larson, recently had a narrow escape from a watery grave. While he was crossing a bridge in an automobile, in company with his father and another gentleman, the bridge gave way and the car was precipitated into the stream. Mr. Larson was thrown from the car as it turned in the air and he was only slightly bruised. The other members of the party also escaped with slight injuries.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Watering.

When you have reduced the spraying somewhat and the soil is in good condition to work you should go over the benches and break up the crust which has formed on the surface of the soil. This will also destroy that crop of young weeds which is pushing through about that time. Break up all the lumps and level off nicely, so that in watering the water will not run to pools, but will saturate the soil evenly all over the bench.

Soon after this is done the bench should be watered, as evaporation will be quite rapid from the loose soil and it will cause the plants to wilt. From that time on keep the whole bench in a fairly moist state constantly, but not wet enough to cause the top to turn green. At the least sign of green on the surface, dust lightly with slaked lime and stir it into the soil. The first few weeks are the most critical time of the whole season and you must be ever on the watch.

Removal of Shade.

The next step will be the removal of the shade on the glass and in this again you must use good judgment. Do not remove it all at one time, but do it by degrees. Very often you can allow the rain to do it for you, but in the absence of rain you must not allow it to remain on the glass too long. Just as soon as the plants show that root action has been resumed the shade should be diminished and within three weeks from the time of planting the glass should be entirely clean.

Be prepared to spray a few times oftener for a day or two after you remove part of the shade. The plants will be inclined to wilt under the stronger light. While I am on the subject of shading I will say that our planting with very little lime shading worked splendidly. To use the words of one of the boys, "it was like getting money from home without writing for it." If the plants are in proper condition there is no reason why it should not work, and the wonder is how we ever got into the habit of shading so heavily. I believe that when this method is more generally followed there will be less complaint of stem-rot, and I am sure there will be less rust and leaf-spot.

CARNATION EARLY VIENNA.

I would like to inquire if the carnation, Early Double Vienna, would be desirable to grow for cut flowers for market. I understand it grows about two feet high, with large double flowers. Are these facts? I have had no experience with it. Is the hardy garden carnation good for market? D. W. L.

The variety in question, while a desirable plant for the garden borders, will

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Propagation of Geraniums.

The closing days of August are a reminder that we must take in hand the propagation of an ample stock of this most popular of all bedding plants. We hope a sufficient number of plants were retained at bedding-out time and these should now provide quantities of excellent cuttings. If these were not given very rich soil to grow in, it is all the better, as the wood will be harder and shorter jointed, being thus less liable to damping off. Cuttings produced on plants grown under glass propagate more readily than the stronger and more sappy ones from outdoors; still, with careful handling, the grower should not lose over ten per cent of his outdoor cuttings. Geraniums will root readily and with a smaller possibility of loss a month hence, but if large quantities are needed the present is none too early to start the work of propagation.

In making the cuttings the general practice is to cut below a leaf joint. This is not necessary, but such cuttings root more speedily. Trim off all but the very smallest leaves on top of the shoots. If they are soft and full of sap, let them lie a few hours before putting them in the pots or flats. A good many growers put their cuttings in the regular propagating bench, and often with disappointing results. Treatment which will suit coleus or alternantheras will soon ruin geraniums. The former root quickly in a warm, moist bed if kept shaded. The latter need one good watering after being put in and exposure to full sunlight. Two methods are open to growers. The one usually adopted is to place the cuttings in light, sandy soil in 2-inch pots and stand these pot to pot in a cool, sunny house or coldframe. The other, which can be followed where bench or frame space is more limited, is to plant moderately thickly in well drained flats of sharp sand three inches deep. The cuttings can be left in the latter until the mud pressure wanes and allows them bench space after potting off.

Whichever plan is adopted, it should be borne in mind that one good soaking is needed at the start and, following that, just enough water to prevent shriveling until the cuttings are rooted. Shade is not required. There will be less damping off if cuttings are given full sunshine all the time. In intensely hot weather, such as we not infrequently experience in September, a gentle spraying overhead about noon will be beneficial and a very light shade may be given them. Cuttings should not, however, be in damp condition at night. Admit air freely all the time. Do not propagate from sickly plants and be sure to keep your stock true to name. Discard varieties which are out of date. It will pay you to buy plants now of the best bedders. You can work up considerable stock from these ere another summer, perhaps not so speedily as some geranium experts claim to do, but fast enough to pay you handsomely.

If your stock is rather low in some special varieties, pot up the old plants after taking what cuttings you can get. You can secure abundant additional stock from these later in the season. Boxes or benches can be utilized for these plants. If you can spare the latter they will give you more cuttings, but as a rule these are needed for other crops.

Plants you may be growing for winter blooming should receive their final shift not later than the middle of September. Six-inch pots will grow fine geraniums for Christmas trade, for which purpose, of course, bright colors take the best. If these plants are being grown outdoors, get them under cover ere the heavy fall rains start. Much moisture will speedily cause spotting of the foliage, as will also too much animal manure in the soil. Ram the soil in the pots firmly and use bone and soot in preference to rotten manure. The latter induces rank growth; the former promotes floriferousness. It is easy to apply occasional liquid stimulants or chemical surface dressings, to put the necessary vigor in the plants. The choice French and English zonal geraniums need a little shade in the hot months and should have it later when flowering. If spider appears, use a fine spray nozzle under the foliage.

German Iris.

Early in September is a good time to divide and replant German iris. It is true they will grow and bloom for years undisturbed, but if taken up every other year they will give you far more satisfactory results. Ground which has been liberally manured and deeply shaded, with good drainage, will grow magnificent iris. The flowers of this popular perennial prove useful at Memorial day in early seasons and the plants can be sold in many cases by those doing a retail home trade. There are now some very beautiful forms of German iris in cultivation. A few especially desirable ones are Pallida Dalmatica, lavender, a tall grower, probably the best all-round sort in commerce; Florentina, white; flavescens, primrose yellow; aurea, golden yellow; Queen of May and Her Majesty, rose-pink; Albicans, snow-white; Mme. Chereau, white, edged and feathered azure blue; Mrs. H. Darwin, white, violet at base.

The gorgeous Japanese iris, Iris Kämpferi, is better replanted now. If moved thus early, the plants will get nicely established before freezing up weather and give a fair crop of flowers next season, which they will not do if moving is postponed until October. The Japanese iris prefers moister ground than the German section. It is a mistake, however, to think that it will grow in water. It needs to be in well drained land. With wet feet it will usually rot during the winter. It is very effective on the edge of streams and ponds, but must not be planted too near the water.

Peonies.

There is no apparent decrease in the popularity of this most gorgeous of all hardy herbaceous plants. Occasionally pessimists are found who predict an overproduction of them. Of the poor and undesirable shades this is and always will be true, but of the really good sorts, with taking colors, not a fraction are grown of what people would buy were they purchasable. Gradually weed out plants producing flowers which neither yourself nor your customers see any beauty in, and replace with others which are salable. There is no advantage in growing many varieties. Propagate all you can of really good sorts and you will have no great difficulty in disposing of the plants, even if you never sell a flower. There will be several times as many peonies grown a decade hence as there are today and he who works up a good stock now is going to do well, for peonies are the hardiest of perennials and the most satisfactory under all conditions.

In planting peonies, give them as good ground as you have and they will respond in a way which will surprise you. Early planting is desirable and if you propose to divide your plants or lay in other varieties, now is the time to do it. Thanks to the very excellent Peony Society, the nomenclature of this splendid plant is being steadily brought down to a practical basis and there are several American growers handling large quantities of plants who can be depended upon to supply them true to name.

Brief Reminders.

Keep the early freesias in frames well up to the light. If stood outdoors, drenching rains may hurt them. Start another batch of bulbs.

Stake or put string supports to late runners. Keep decaying foliage picked off, as well as all side shoots, and do not allow the surface soil to become baked.

Nights are getting cold and it will pay to use a little fire heat, especially on roses, or mildew will soon assert itself.

Give water sparingly to lilies until the pots are well filled with roots. Many failures are caused by too much water in the early stages of growth.

Keep runners removed from violets. Doubles should be housed, but it is much too early to plant single varieties.

Look over cannas and mark any not true to name; don't wait until the plants are frozen.

Get in a batch of cuttings of achyranthes, strobilanthes and any other colored-leaved bedders.

Keep cinerarias in a coldframe; transplant and pot on as needed. Lay some tobacco stems among them. Don't place these in a greenhouse for two months yet.

Stir the surface soil on cyclamens. Give any requiring it their final shift.

Do not overwater poinsettias. Make up the last pans of these. Don't shade them.

Prick out pansies on cloudy days and finish transplanting any other biennials or perennials.

Sometime before Christmas, however, the firm will probably close up the houses just purchased and will remove the stock to the enlarged greenhouses on Chicago street. The Kenosha Greenhouses will then be torn down and the land put on the market for other purposes.

A FLORISTS' WINDOW WASHER.

In the accompanying illustration, showing the use of a combined brush and hose in the washing of windows, the manner of handling the device is so clearly indicated that a description is hardly necessary. Some of the advantages in the use of the article are also apparent, such as the convenience of operation, the steady flow of clear water, etc. The handle is made of galvanized steel, reinforced by a hollow wooden handle. Each brush is equipped with a water-controlling cock and with a pair of $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch standard hose couplings, so that it can be readily attached to ordinary garden hose. This novelty is being put on the market by the Foley Manufacturing Co., Chicago.

HORTICULTURE IN COLLEGES.

By THEODORE WIRTH, MINNEAPOLIS.

[Read before the Society of American Florists in convention at Philadelphia, August 22, 1907.]

I have been asked to prepare a paper on "Horticultural Education at Agricultural Colleges," and I hardly know how to approach the subject, for, personally, I have no experience whatsoever as a student in such institutions of learning.

I attended school until I was 16 years old, and when I arrived at that—as I considered it—very ripe age, and barely graduated with figures which I do not besides. I don't know, now, whether at that time I earned my board, but I had a feeling that I did that and more too. However, I graduated with honors as a full-fledged gardener, and I distinctly remember the great celebration that took place at that memorable time, which clearly shows that my memory was good under the most trying circumstances.

Since then I have followed the noble profession of gardening in many of its branches and in different lands and climates, and have found pleasure, contentment and happiness in all I have approached and worked at, and if I could return to boyhood and had a chance to make my selection of a trade again, I would most certainly select the gardeners' profession.

But who has not passed through life, successful or otherwise as it may be, who would not omit some things he has done and do some things he left undone, if he were to live the same period of life over again? No one; and it is through this, our experience, that we must endeavor to teach those that follow us, to become wise where we were unwise.

I therefore appear before you, not as a student or graduate from any horticultural college, but as one who wishes he had made use of the opportunity to be such, at the time he had the chance.

Theory and Practice.

I have, in my professional life, come in institutions of learning, I feel convinced that a sincere interest and support given those institutions, by individual and combined efforts of our craft, would result in a much more progressive and beneficial treatment of horticultural subjects in general, and floricultural interests especially, than is at present the case.

I feel assured those institutions are sincere and anxious to help us with all available means and opportunities, and if we give them the glad hand of support, interest and appreciation, the combined efforts of both will be crowned with unbounded success, to the benefit of all the far-reaching interests concerned. And who is better adapted and able to give that support, and who is closer to that calling, than our S. A. F.?

I believe that our association should take into earnest consideration what could and should be done to further our interests in the horticultural education of the younger members of our craft.

Commercial Gardening in College.

Let us exchange ideas as to how it might be done. I, for one, wonder whether it might not be possible to select one of the many excellent state agricultural colleges, one as centrally located as possible, to make the study of horticulture, and especially floriculture, a special attraction along lines which would meet with our ideas of practical, commercial usefulness.

For instance, would it not be practical to have such a college equipped with an up-to-date commercial plant, for the culture of plants both under glass and outdoors? Would it not be possible to market the products of this college plant at fair, open prices, without creating an unfair competition with local trade in the vicinity of the institution? If so, would not this branch of such a college become more or less self-sustaining, and would not the very desire of making it so, and the need of successfully meeting such commercial competition, spur both teachers and pupils to achieve results far beyond the aim and the possibility of the ordinary college plant and experiment station?

If all this is possible, I think it is well worth our efforts to secure it, and I think it should be our aim. A forceful, earnest combination of our interests and practical experiences with those of the scientific and theoretically advanced researches of the teachers of our colleges, I believe would result in horticultural education along most remunerative lines.

Practical Gardeners as Teachers.

I should like to see some of our leading professional men connected with the governing board of such an institution, and I should want some of our successful practical gardeners on the staff of teachers. I should like to see the theoretical and scientific teachings of our professors of botany, entomology, chemistry, etc., brought into uninterrupted and closest contact with the practical experiments and demonstrations of our experienced leading practical gardeners, so that the teachings of both, supplementing each other, may tell the student why and how and when and where.

The merits of such an institution, I think, would be clearly apparent, and it seems to me would be universally recognized at an early date of its existence. Its beneficial and educational influence would not be limited to the building up of a young generation of well educated, practical craftsmen, but it would also care to remember, I was of the opinion that additional wisdom, to be gained from professors and books, was superfluous technical theory, which would be of little help in practical work. I thought it was a kind of polish that would wear off soon and most likely spoil the leather, and that it would be better to grease the boots to begin with and go to work, and so I did.

I served one of those good old country apprenticeships, where I had to work three years, not only for nothing, but my "governor" had to pay my board contact with young men of practical schooling only, men of theoretical schooling only, and men of both, and I have often had occasion to envy the latter. I have observed, however, that among the former two, the first has by far the advantage, but I am convinced that a happy combination, in which the practical schooling is predominant, is the ideal course for horticultural education.

From prospectuses that I have read of different agricultural colleges, and through conversations which I have had with some of the leading teachers at such become the central station of horticultural and floricultural interests in general, a place we all would want to visit, a trial and experimental station open to all introductions and products of our ever advancing skill and progress.

Its seal of merit and excellence should be the coveted prize of professional advancement, achievement and ambition.

Horticultural Schools of Europe.

Every year a number of our successful and leading fellow craftsmen go to Europe on a combined pleasure and business trip, and we all know that traveling with open eyes means to learn and profit. If a few such travelers would act as a committee and together visit some of the horticultural schools of Germany, France and Switzerland, I believe some of the things they would see there would be helpful towards the realization of my dream herein outlined.

True, conditions and requirements here and there differ greatly, but in a general way our aims are the same. There and here we must have and do have at heart the advancement of our noble calling, the profession of a gardener, of which I pride myself to be a member, and anything that can be done to further such advancement through combined and individual effort should receive our hearty and active support.

HARDY SHRUBS.

By S. C. MOON, OF MORRISVILLE, PA.

[Read before the Society of American Florists in convention at Philadelphia, August 21, 1907.]

I will assume that we all understand by the term "hardy shrubs" the class of perennials, hardy plants, deciduous and evergreen, though largely deciduous, which are used for ornamenting lawns and gardens. Though mostly of moderate size when planted, some of them eventually attain the proportions of small trees. The term "hardy" will vary with the location of the planting, but will not materially affect the suggestions here presented. How to plant them will be considered in a two-fold light: First, the distribution and arrangement of the plants on the lawn, and second, the method of setting the roots in the ground.

Arrangement of the Plants.

As a general rule, the most effective way to plant shrubbery is in masses, with not too much variety in one group. Prof. Bailey says: "The shrubbery masses should be placed on the boundaries, for it is a fundamental concept of landscape gardening that the center of a place shall be open. In most places the mass or border planting should be the rule and the isolated specimens the exception; but unfortunately the rule is usually reversed." It is easy to see conspicuous evidences of the truth of the above statements in almost any suburban neighborhood, in examples of good and of poor arrangements.

Many planters seem to think it desirable to have a well developed plant of as many varieties as can find accommodation on the lawn, in order that they may enjoy each plant individually as it passes through its varying changes of foliage, flowering, fruitage and leaflessness throughout the year. Such an arrangement may be appropriate for an arboretum or trial grounds, and there are special charms in such a collection of shrubs as each successively comes into bloom. But as the blooming period of most shrubs is only from two to four weeks, the beauty of foliage hues both in the greenness of summer and in autumn colorings is an important consideration in arrangement of shrubs in groups. The introduction of bright colored foliage, such as golden elder and philadelphus, variegated weigelia, purple-leaf plum and barberry, etc., is occasionally done very effectively, but more frequently the result is a conspicuous blotch amid the verdure. The handling of bright colors always requires a high degree of artistic skill, or the result will be displeasing to the most refined tastes, affording valuable object lessons to the student and gardener, but it is not the way to produce the most effective results in lawn adornment.

To quote again from Prof. Bailey's essay on shrubbery: "Plants scattered over a lawn destroy all appearances of unity and purpose in the place. Every part of the place is equally accented. The area has no meaning or individuality. The plants are in the way. They spoil the lawn. The place is random."

In large grounds the shrubbery border should be composed of successive masses of several plants of one species together, followed by another harmonious group of another sort—the border of the two groups interlacing with each other, making a natural and easy transition from one variety to the other. Let the transition from one variety to another be gradual and not too sudden, and let the groups be not too large or too exclusive. An odd plant taller or different from the others may occasionally stand out or above its companions very effectively. Of course, tall growers should be at the back, with smaller and low-branching species in the foreground. It is not advisable to mix evergreen and deciduous shrubs in the same group. A few shrubs seem to be admirably adapted for filling in plants. Tamarix is one of these, which may often be used to relieve a too monotonous sky line or to relieve formality or to add variety in foliage effect, it being a tall, neat, inoffensive plant which will harmonize with almost any other. For low, drooping shrubs, to be used for carrying foliage from the grass lawn up to taller plants, few are more effective than Spiraea-Thunbergii, stephanandra, rhodotypos and Berberis Thunbergii.

The outlines of shrubberies should not be too straight nor too formal, but irregular and natural. A skilled florist or gardener should almost conceive these ideas without instruction, but definite knowledge of the habits of the different shrubs to be employed is essential to enable one to make a planting which will develop consistently as they increase in age and size. That such information can only be obtained successfully by observation and experience is evidenced by the very large number of inharmonious combinations that are seen in shrubberies all about the country.

Use of Rhododendrons.

Probably rhododendrons are treated injudiciously and are a source of disappointment and of waste of money more than any other shrub, largely through misunderstanding. Rhododendrons are sociable individuals, liking the companionship and protection of other plants. Their fine, fibrous roots delight in cool, moist soil, but do not want to go very deep in earth to find these conditions and are particularly sensitive to excessive heat or drought in midsummer. A situation where the shadows of large trees or buildings will shield from the midday sun in summer and winter, and from severe winds, is an ideal position. A perpetual mulch of leaves, renewed each autumn, and with a light coat of stable manure on top of the leaves to keep them from blowing away, is most congenial to them. Mulching and shelter from wind are the most essential conditions.

One of my most satisfactory plantings of rhododendrons was a small bed at the south corner of a residence. They were wanted in this position, but the owner had been told that they would not succeed in southern exposure. Recognizing the fact that a large pear tree southeast of this bed would afford midday shade and groups of large forest trees and neighboring buildings not far away would afford shelter from wind, the location was considered eligible. The natural soil was quite sandy, but by generous excavation two feet deep and filling with muck and vegetable mold, taken from open ditches on a near-by farm, and a few barrels of Jersey peat, a soil was prepared which proved suitable. The rhododendrons were planted four to five feet apart and all vacant spaces filled in with Mahonia Aquifolium, Mahonia Japonica and heath arbutus (Thuya ericoides) until the bed was a solid mass of foliage, effectually shading the stems of the plants and the ground around them. The ground was then covered with a mulch of leaves a foot deep, with instructions to keep the mulch there all the time, renewing it every autumn, and that as the rhododendrons grew and spread the nurse plants should be cut back or removed. This planting was made nine years ago and has been successful.

Shrubbery in Small Yards.

A most difficult problem in shrub arrangement, more frequently met with in the practical experience of florists and jobbing gardeners than in the laying out of large lawns where general rules of landscape gardening might be applied, is the requirement of owners of small yards, who want one dozen of their old favorites set in a bed or along a garden fence. Perhaps it will be a lilac, forsythia, snowball, cydonia, weigelia, spiraea, deutzia, chionanthus, dogwood, hydrangea, a purple filbert and other such incongruous neighbors. He who can arrange such a group as this tastefully and so that it will continue attractive throughout the year is a master in the art of shrub arrangement. Hopeless as this task may seem, there are plants which we may always look to for help in such emergencies. The slender sprays of feathery foliage of the tamarix, the gracefully drooping branches of Spiraea Thunbergii, Stephanandra flexuosa, the single flowered kerrias, including the white form known as Rhodotypos kerrioides with its crinkled foliage, are all gentle, inoffensive subjects who are willing to help fill up a gap and hide from public gaze the awkwardness of their fellows wherever such service is needed. By adding a few plants of these slender species the stiffness of a group may be much relieved and some of its awkwardness softened.

One of my most valuable lessons about planting was learned in walking through a lawn with an old gardener who remarked, "The man who planted this place understood his business. See—every tree is set on a little hill or mound." The next time you have an opportunity, compare the difference in appearance of a lawn where trees and shrubs stand in mounds slightly above the level of the surrounding lawn and other plantings where the lawn level is carried up to the roots of the plants, or, as is sometimes seen, where plants stand in a depression. See which you like best and then judge of the wisdom of the above suggestion. A bed or border for shrubbery should be heavily manured and dug or plowed deeply, and prepared as carefully as for corn or potatoes or any other crop which is wanted to grow well. If I tell you not to ram the roots into a little hole in the ground, but to set them on a little mound, you will think I am joking, but that is pretty nearly what I mean.

Care in Planting.

It would seem as though every gardener should be tired of hearing the trite advice to dig big holes for shrubs and trees, but the innumerable evidences of violations of the rule show that many planters have not yet learned this lesson. Some shrubs, as forsythia, spiræas, deutzias, etc., may flourish if stuck in the ground any way, but many others need the best of care to insure success, and carelessness in setting often discredits good material and a job which in other respects may be all right. Dig holes larger and deeper than the roots require and larger in diameter at bottom mulching and pruning. After planting apply a good mulch of manure to conserve moisture, furnish nourishment and to suppress weeds. An annual mulching of leaves, with coarse manure to prevent their blowing away, is beneficial to almost every class of plants, and mulched or fallow ground is better than grass around the stems.

Pruning.

Most deciduous shrubs should be pruned severely when planted. Rhododendrons, azaleas, andromedas, etc., are usually transplanted with balls of earth and do not need much pruning, but where it is needful it will not hurt them. The annual pruning is a most important part of the care of shrubbery and the point most difficult to give instruction on by written directions. It is an art which must be learned by practice and observation. The general rule, to trim early bloomers as soon as they are through flowering and midsummer or late bloomers in winter, contains a suggestion, but the indiscriminate cutting back of every shrub every year is a great than at top, then fill in some of the best soil obtainable, making a little cone or mound in the center of the hole. Then spread out the roots of plants around this mound of earth, so that all roots tend downwards rather than horizontally or upwards. Fill in the richest soil first, tramping firmly as the filling proceeds. Remember Peter Henderson's chapter on the "Use of the Foot in Planting," also bear in mind that it is results that count, and five minutes spent in care of planting may mean one or two years saved in attaining the desired end.

Under the heading "How to Treat Shrubs" I will allude to manuring, mistake. When a shrub seems weak and needs strengthening, cut out declining shoots and apply manure around it. When one is too vigorous and rampant, remove or shorten superfluous shoots and reduce to symmetry with as little mutilation as possible. When one has become overgrown and dilapidated in appearance, cut back a part or perhaps all of its unsightly stems severely, probably at the ground, and allow new shoots to restore the beauty and vigor of youth. The only way to learn the art of trimming shrubbery is by observation and practice and the exercise of gumption. A safe general rule is that whenever you see a twig or branch which needs removing, cut it off on sight, regardless of time of year or other conditions, and when you don't see anything that needs removal, don't prune it, regardless of rule or custom. And take this as a negative rule: "Never shear a shrub with a hedge shears." The shearing of lawn shrubs into bald pates, suggestive of convicts or sheared sheep, displays ignorance of plants and depravity of taste. To the last general rule I make exception for topiary gardening, but the creation and care of topiary gardens and of formal specimens is a special art, for which all of the above suggestions would have to be modified.

If my feeble sentences may be suggestive of useful after-thoughts in your minds and in mine, they will have accomplished all that I can hope for them.

HORTICULTURAL EDUCATION.

BY JOHN K. L. M. FARQUHAR, OF BOSTON, MASS.

[Read before the Society of American Florists, in convention at Philadelphia, August 22, 1907.]

It is undoubtedly true that all American horticultural societies and clubs have have explored, it seems all the more regrettable that our efforts have not been more distributed.

The keen watchfulness, zealous application and enterprise of the American florist have given him, in a single generation, first rank in the world in the production of roses, carnations, chrysanthemums, violets, sweet peas, asparagus and other plants in which he has specialized, and his intimate knowledge of the requirements of his subjects, gained by the close personal observation to which his accomplishments are chiefly due, has rarely been equaled by his fellow craftsmen abroad. This aptitude and past success make it quite obvious that he can achieve similar progress in new lines.

The florists have not hesitated to impart freely through talks and essays at horticultural meetings the knowledge they have gained of their specialties. The nurserymen, too, have occasionally given valuable information on trees and shrubs and how to use them. Likewise the fruit and vegetable growers have most freely imparted the knowledge they have acquired. Again, the members of etc., grown for winter cutting as successfully as roses and carnations.

We force a few perennial plants, like dielytra and spiraea, but how seldom do we hear of the campanulas, foxgloves, sweet williams, trolius, Daphne Cneorum, the Christmas rose and many other suitable biennials and perennials being forced, notwithstanding an existing and growing demand for greater variety and novelty in winter flowers!

I have alluded to talks on fruits and vegetables and their culture. Who has ever suggested the prolific and delicious lichee of southern China or the delicate naseberry of the West Indies as subjects for culture under glass, like the peach and nectarine? Or, which of our vegetable experts has taken pains to advance our knowledge of salad plants or of herbs for seasoning, in both of which subjects we know much less than did the Romans when they occupied the northern shores of the Mediterranean 2,000 years ago?

This is the day of progress, and horticulture must and will advance in many heretofore neglected lines.

The Achievement of Gardeners.

Generally speaking, it can best be advanced through the instrumentality of the all-round trained gardener. How many of our foremost florists have risen from the ranks of the private gardeners! Peter Fisher, of carnation fame; M. H. Walsh and Alexander Montgomery, whose names are garlanded with roses, are notable examples, and there are others too numerous to be referred to individually now. I am satisfied that this is the day to stir the gardener to new activities. His opportunities for advancing both himself and his profession were never so good. Besides, he must look to his position; a certain kind of landscape architect seeks to outstrip him and wrest from him the laurels and emoluments of his art. That which the gardener, from his long practice and intimate acquaintance with his material, knows almost intuitively, this kind of landscape architect gathers a superficial, talking knowledge of from his books, and immediately begins to practice theoretically. His clients and the gardeners are usually the sufferers. Never has there been such an effort on the part of these impractical, book-made, self-styled experts to subordinate the practical gardener as at the present time.

We have many progressive, trained gardeners, who are much more competent to lay out and plant a place than the mere graduate of a college landscape school. The gardener may not be able to make so attractive a plan, or to talk so fluently of harmony of color, contrast of form, of light and shadow, as the college man, but he knows how the grade should be, how to prepare the soil, how to plant the trees and shrubs, and he has genius to plant a picture of such beauty, of such harmony, of such strength, so exactly the complement of its setting, that beside it the labored composition of the college stripling is a helpless misfit. Do not imagine, however, that I underestimate the value and advantage of the horticultural school course, provided it is a practical one and supplemented by actual garden work, but I would rather trust with the arranging of a garden a man who has been taught to use the spade properly, and who has a natural love of nature, than the horticultural school graduate who has learned to pot plants with gloves on.

South Side of the Main Hall of the Philadelphia Trades Display.

endeavored to promote interest in, and knowledge of, horticulture. It is also true that the efforts of these organizations have resulted in great advancement along the lines in which they have worked. If, for the sake of illustration, we regard the field of horticulture as a complete circle, we find well defined lines running from its center to the circumference in many directions, but, unfortunately, we also find too many of the 360 degrees of its circumference to which as yet there appear no lines, vast fields of horticultural science which have hardly been trodden upon in this country. Considering the phenomenal successes we have developed along the lines which we every horticultural society in the land have listened to predictions of despoliation by blight and insect until, in dread of calamity, their faces have become white and their lips blue, like the trees and crops whitened with arsenate of lead or blued with copper sulphate in the efforts to escape the devastation.

Untrodden Fields.

But you will ask me, "What about the untrodden fields?" In the flower line there are many things yet untried which may and will be used, both in commercial and private establishments. We have seen larkspurs, lupines, scabious, cornflowers, schizanthus, leptosyne,

The Boston Landscape Class.

It was with the view of bringing the best young gardeners to the front, encouraging them to take their places as leaders in horticulture, and showing them and qualifying them for the opportunities open to them, that, about a year ago, the Boston Landscape Class was organized. The class numbered about sixty members, mostly working gardeners—many of them head men, filling positions of responsibility, others assistants. It met twice a week, with an average attendance of about forty.

The subjects taken up the first year included geometry, topographical drawing, projection, perspective, grades, harmony of color, landscape composition and the use of the level. The instruction was supplemented by field days for outdoor demonstration.

It is intended to extend the course over three years, in which time the members should become thoroughly acquainted with the practice and theory of general landscape gardening.

The better class of landscape gardeners or architects will find the members of the Boston Landscape Class in no way opposed to them, but by their study better able to understand each other and coöperate to the mutual advantage of both when their work brings them together. At the same time, the gardener who has thus become familiar with both the practice and the theory of landscape work will never give place to the book-made adventurer of the average superficial and impractical, two or sometimes three-year landscape college course of the present time.

THE COST OF PRODUCTION.

By WM. GAMMAGE, OF LONDON, ONT.

[Read before the Canadian Horticultural Association, in convention at London, Ont., August 29, 1907.]

The subject, "What Is the Best Way to Get at the Cost of Production of Greenhouse Stock?" or the "cost price," is one that, probably, ought more properly to have been assigned to an accountant.

First we may ask, "What is cost price?" It is an important business detail. What is business? Business is a warfare. It is a hard, constant fight to the finish. The moment a contestant enters the field of commerce, no matter what the line, he is challenged by a host of competitors. All his movements are watched and opposed by those already in possession of the field. He must fight to live. He must conquer to succeed. Business is a game which men play, revel in, live for, without rest or feeling of monotony for decades. It is a game which develops men and builds up industries and nations as a by-product of the playing. It is the spirit of rivalry which sharpens a man's intellect and spurs on his energy, and unless a man is possessed of this energy, of this desire to overcome, to surpass, to stand first in his line, he can never hope to carry the day. He will never succeed in the fight.

Know Your Business.

Too many work without plans—they never see the vision. Their business structures are poor and shapeless and never enduring. If the plans are crude and small, so will be the results. The great thing, therefore, is to plan big and broad and high and secure. Keep the plans ever before your eyes, work close to the specifications and keep building your business system steadily and securely, bit by bit, until your enterprise rises to its full height and glory. You must know your business, know it thoroughly, know its strong points, know its weak ones, know where to take advantage of opportunities, know where to stop leaks. And this is where you will find the leaks in your business, when you know your cost price, when you know if certain lines are costing more to produce them than you are selling at.

How to Obtain the Data.

Cost finding is a unit of an accounting system, and it is to the bookkeeper, or accountant, that we must look for final and accurate information. But first it is necessary to supply him with the data from which to tabulate and conclude a system. From the foreman, or manager, he must receive an accurately kept account of the time each workman occupies with each house, or portion of house, the amount of space occupied, the length of time the house, or portion of house, is occupied with each size or variety of plant. To the grower's time, and the length of time the house is occupied with a crop, must be added an accurately estimated cost of heating, based on the number of feet of radiating surface in the house, the size and value of pot, the value of seed, cuttings or plants. This is best done by a card system, keeping a separate daily record of each man's operations, each sub-foreman, or grower, filling in his card, accounting for the time, number of plants handled, new stock added, stock taken out, etc. From this card entries can be made to a properly ruled sheet or card. These sheets also act as a perpetual inventory, and on large places are indispensable to the sales manager. In turn these are tabulated, and to the stock and operating expense are added the fixed expenses, such as interest, taxes, insurance and other general non-productive expense, which are easily arrived at. By dividing the total by the number of feet of bench room we arrive at the average fixed expense per foot.

A Debit and Credit Account.

In houses where several varieties of plants are grown and are continually being either added to or taken from, the cost can be arrived at by keeping a debit and credit account of stock and averaging weekly or monthly expenses. To find the cost of growing roses, carnations, violets, etc., is easier than that of pot plants, inasmuch as it is usually on a large scale and more time is occupied with each operation, such as the preparation of soil, emptying, refilling and planting the houses, after which it is principally routine work, with but little variation. However, it is necessary to take all the expenses for a whole year, to find the actual cost. The total number of blooms divided by the total expense will give the cost per bloom, but as in most places both cuttings and plants are sold, then it will become necessary to keep a record of the time and space occupied by these, and by deducting this from the total expense and dividing the balance you can arrive at the cost per bloom.

To do all of this may seem like a great deal of work, but it is only one portion of the general operation of your business, and is just as necessary in this as in any other line. He who would know what part of his business is paying must work for the information.

CACTUS DAHLIAS FOR CUTTING.

I wish to get some information concerning the cutting of cactus dahlias so that they will last after cutting. I cannot keep them fresh; they go to sleep the day after cutting. F. T. S.

Cactus dahlias, as a rule, are not good keepers as cut flowers. They should not be grown too closely and, where they grow too densely, should have the foliage underneath cut away, but, above all, select good young buds and remove all side shoots from the stem. This will give a flower of much better color and substance, consequently of larger size, and it will keep much better. Varieties of the Kriemhilde and Jealousy type, with disbudded stems, will keep as long as the best show varieties.

If the flowers are cut in the early morning and placed in water at once, they should keep at least three days.

Too rich a soil—too much water or too much nitrogen—will also tend to make the flowers soft, but as the plants harden if the blooms are grown on disbudded stems, they will keep much better.

WAS THIS ELMER D.?

A local paper at Adrian, Mich., prints the following as original:

An Adrian florist was making the rounds of his properties when he was approached by a young man, who applied to him for work. "I am sorry," said the florist, "but have all the help I need. I have nothing for you to do." "Sir," said the young man, with a polite bow, "if you only knew how very little work it would take to occupy me."

PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY sent by the REVIEW for 25 cents.

Results bring advertising. The REVIEW brings results.

THE call for choice varieties of peonies will not slacken.

AND next week will be September, with all it means in the way of increasing business.

DON'T lose sight of the fact that the best profit always is to be had through the producing of a good article.

HAVE you the carnations housed? In days of old this date would not have been considered late, but now—well, better get busy!

SEND your latest catalogue to the REVIEW and see that it is on your regular mailing list. All catalogues are filed for reference.

Is your boiler ready for an early fire? Most rose growers will be needing a little night heat from now on, or are likely to need it badly any night.

THE executive committee of the American Association of Farmers' Institute Workers has announced that the next meeting of the association will be held at Washington, D. C., October 23 to 25, 1907.

THERE are instances where a florist has obtained credit on no other showing than the business-like appearance of his stationery, but there still are those who handicap themselves by sending out inquiries and orders without a printed letterhead.

THE apple-pie order of every one of the Philadelphia cut flower and plant-growing establishments, a cleanliness and order it was easy to see is habitual and not put on for the occasion, was one of the most valuable lessons of the S. A. F. convention.

KILLARNEY, which has been described as "the Irish beauty," will be queen of the American cut flower markets if all the rose growers who have planted it this season have the same measure of success with it that a few growers had last season.

WITH their pumping and power plants many of the big growers now require steam every day in the year, and the constant availability of a little heat to dry out the rose houses on cool summer nights is reflected in the quality of the rose stock, particularly in the absence of mildew.

WHEN you receive a telegram from a florist who instructs you to "deliver ten-dollar wreath to funeral of Mr. So-and-so, card John Smith," the florist expects you to send a wreath you charge the public $10 for, and he expects you to allow him a commission of 20 per cent. Insert a card on one of the REVIEW's pages for leading retail florists and you will receive many such orders.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

[How to Lay Out Suburban Home Grounds, by Herbert J. Kellaway, 112 pages, profusely illustrated. John Wiley & Sons, New York, publishers, price $2.]

The retail florist who does a general trade in a residence community has innumerable calls from people who wish advice as to embellishing their home grounds. To answer these questions fully and satisfactorily a florist would need a training in the landscape art. No great number possess this, and to those who do not Mr. Kellaway's volume will be of special interest and value. It is written, not for the trade, but for those with moderate incomes wishing to secure beautiful surroundings for their homes. The drawings and suggestions are not intended to deal with the treatment of large estates, nor to explain in complex language the many principles of landscape architecture, but only to give an idea as to what is good taste in the treatment of home grounds. The florist will profit, not only by the reading of this book, but he can refer his inquirers to it and save himself much time. Doubtless many florists will find it worth while to keep copies on hand for sale to their customers. The price is $2, at which the REVIEW will supply the volume post-paid.

THE DEATH ROLL.

James Shackell.

James Shackell died at Bayside, N. Y., August 13, at the age of 68. He was born at Bath, England, came to America about forty-seven years ago and was employed as foreman in different Long Island greenhouses. He spent the last fifteen years of his life as head gardener on private estates. He is survived by his wife and also leaves two daughters, one of whom is the wife of Joseph Millang, manager of the New York Cut Flower Co.

Thomas J. Johnston.

Thomas J. Johnston died at his home, 145 Cypress street, Providence, R. I., August 15, from an attack of appendicitis which culminated suddenly and unexpectedly in heart trouble. Though he had not been entirely well since last fall, when he was seriously afflicted with rheumatism, yet he had attended to business until a day or two before he died, and on the day preceding his death he was confidently believed to be recovering.

Mr. Johnston was one of the most prominent florists of his city and was a member of a family which had been connected with the trade for generations. He was the seventh son of Robert Johnston, who conducted a greenhouse on Blackstone boulevard, near Swan Point cemetery, was 42 years old and had conducted a store on Weybosset street for some years. His brothers are all in the same business in different parts of the city and his grandfather and uncles were all florists. He was a charter member of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club and had served as its president. In addition to this, he was actively interested in practically every horticultural exhibit which was held anywhere in his part of the United States and had taken many prizes. He married about twenty years ago and is survived by his widow and two sons.

Benjamin M. Bacon.

Benjamin M. Bacon, who for many years conducted a nursery and greenhouse at Danville, Ill., died at the Soldiers' Home hospital in that place, August 9. He was 65 years old.

Martin Neukert.

Martin Neukert died August 18, at his home at Crescent and Etna streets, Brooklyn, N. Y. For more than fifty years he had been engaged in the florists' business, with his greenhouses at Cypress Hills. He was born in Germany, February 20, 1832. He leaves two daughters, Sophie and Mrs. Elizabeth Leslie, and three sons, Joseph, Lewis and Martin.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The spell of the dog days has not yet been broken. August is making a good record for some houses, but others have found the business less than it was a year ago. Probably the fact is that the demand has been about as usual during the month and the results with any individual house have varied in accordance with the way its supplies have compared with those of last year. The houses which have had better stuff, or more of it, than a year ago have increased their sales in proportion, and vice versa.

Although September is but three days away, there is little change in the demand, and wholesalers do not look for anything special until cool weather comes. There is a steady improvement in the quality of roses cut from young plants, but the quantity received shows no great increase, nor is there need for it, and growers are wise who are building a foundation for future crops. Kaiserin continues in good demand and of good quality. Mrs. Field also is improving, and so is Killarney. Kate Moulton is lengthening in stem, and the growers thus far have avoided the weak neck which is the principal objection to this variety.

There has been some improvement in the supplies of carnations. A number of growers are sending blooms from the field and a few are cutting small quantities from young plants under glass. Of course they are short in stem and small in flower, but still they are carnations, something this market has been decidedly short on for a month. The quality of the stock, however, precludes any fancy prices. Asters continue in tremendous supply, and some of them are especially good. A number of the growers have worked up special strains which are giving splendid results. For the finest stock 3 cents, and occasionally 4 cents, is paid, but the bulk of the receipts are sold in job lots at buyers' prices. There are too many growers who have no idea of quality and who strive only for quantity. Such stuff is merely an incumbrance in the market.

Gladioli are a leading factor. There are a few dahlias coming in, but this market does not take this flower readily. Rudbeckia Golden Glow is now received in quantity. Of lilies and other items of stock no change is to be reported. Green goods also continue abundant.

The Price of Ferns.

The price of hardy cut ferns in Massachusetts has this summer been 10 cents per thousand higher than a year ago. Chicago wholesalers have handled more or less Michigan stock, which laid down in Chicago cost less than the Massachusetts product, but these do not suffice for the needs of the market, and Massachusetts ferns no longer can be sold in Chicago at a profit for as little as $1 per thousand, which formerly was the summer price. This year a number of the wholesalers have held their price at $1.50, which leaves a fair margin, and one at which they can afford to give the buyer good stock.

On behalf of the Massachusetts shipper it must be said that the cost of ferns to him has increased in the last year or two fully as much as he has increased his prices.

Replanted.

The growers all have practically finished replanting and have things under headway for the new season now at hand. The larger growers have added little to their glass this summer, but nearly every one has done considerable rebuilding, and the condition of the establishments, as far as buildings and facilities go, is probably better than at any previous time. The result will be increased production and improved quality. Many of the smaller growers have added a house or two, so that a good growing season will mean quite a little increase in the market's supply.

Greek Stores.

In the days when the Greeks stood at the curbstone the retail florists were not satisfied with the competition of the sidewalk salesmen and the street dealers in all kinds of wares were eventually barred from doing business more than three feet from the building line in the downtown district. Since then the Greeks have steadily been locating themselves in stores, where they make a showing as good as that of the average of those who consider themselves as the only really legitimate florists. The result is that competition for the retailers is greatly increased, because people who would never have thought of buying of a basket dealer will buy of the same man in his store, which is practically all window display.

The latest of the Greeks to establish themselves in good locations and attract-

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Convention week in Philadelphia was a peaceful one in wholesale cut flowerdom in New York. No wonder, with nearly all the principals at the great floricultural reunion in the Quaker City. It was a week of rest and preparation for the strenuous season close at hand.

There was no change in values last week in the street, and the shipments grow in volume and in quality daily. Roses especially are rapidly improving and some fine new stock is already appealing to the first-class retail trade.

The supply of gladioli shows no diminution. Asters have improved wonderfully in quality and some grand stock is now arriving. Prices of everything are on rock bottom. There is only one way left for them. The tide is turning.

New York wholesaledom is proud of the honor which the S. A. F. has conferred on one of its favorite sons. That he will be one of the most active, practical and devoted presidents the society has ever chosen will be demonstrated to the satisfaction of his loyal supporters and to the equally loyal membership that voted for his popular competitor.

Various Notes.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club, at its new rooms, on Monday evening, September 9, will be one of congratulation and reminiscences. Not only will this be an experience meeting, but in the fine rooms, at Thirty-fourth street and Third avenue, double space for the exhibitors will make the club rooms popular with growers and a large display of novelties is anticipated. Exhibits will be welcomed from everywhere and may be sent to John Young, secretary, at 51 West Twenty-eighth street, who will attend to the staging, etc. Remember the date and do not fail to come.

James H. Beatty has been appointed superintendent of parks in Manhattan and Richmond boroughs of New York. He has been connected with the park department in various capacities for twenty years. He is a veteran of the Spanish-American war. Many applications for the position came from practical gardeners and it was generally expected the selection would be made from their ranks. The salary is $3,000 a year and 1,000 men are employed under Mr. Beatty's supervision.

Messrs. Hopkins and Sheehan, of A. J. Guttman's force, have returned from their vacations.

The business heretofore conducted by Traendly & Austin will be continued in the name of Charles B. Austin.

W. H. Donohoe, 17 East Twenty-eighth street, had the large family funeral order for Marion Story, brother of Julius Story, the author. Twenty-seven pieces were used, including a handsome pall of lily of the valley.

Messrs. Craw, Connor, Tuthill and Gorman represented the Lord & Burnham Co. at the convention. This company distributed nearly 1,000 of its handsome letter scale.

Abraham Hanig, of Brooklyn, it is reported, was held up by a couple of sandbaggers last Saturday evening. Evidently the thievery gentry had heard of Abe's large Saturday trade, but did not know his wife had the boodle safely hidden, as is her custom. Abraham had just 32 cents in his clothes. The disgusted robbers refused to accept it.

Convention Echoes.

New York is justly proud of its loyalty to the S. A. F. in having brought on its special to the convention one-tenth of the entire attendance and it is loud in its praise and appreciation of the grand welcome it received in the well-named City of Brotherly Love. Such a genuine open-handed and open-armed reception can never be excelled and such a pace has been set for liberality and entertainment that no city may ever hope to go beyond it. Philadelphia has spoiled us with its open houses and the wealth of its generosity.

Ex-Mayor Cutler, of Niagara Falls, won all hearts by his delightful personality. He did not have to promise any "angels' feet" to secure the convention, and his success in winning may be attributed to his good-natured and patient persistence. We may well anticipate a record crowd and a glorious convention in 1908. May there be no vacant chairs. Everybody missed the popular veteran William Scott, of Buffalo, and hope for his recovery.

No happier man than Wm. Kasting heard the unanimous vote for the Falls. It gives him an opportunity to work and he is tireless. Each year finds him growing in the esteem and affection of his co-laborers.

Never were so many spreads in evidence at a convention. Messrs. Bayersdorfer and Rice kept open house all the week; the Dreer outing was a banquet; the Willow Grove function, an elaborate luncheon; the bowling centers, veritable restaurants; the lunch and dinner at the park and mansion equal to the Waldorf, and so through every moment of the week was Philadelphia prodigality on tap until the great multitude were surfeited with kindness.

Never were arrangements for display and meeting place so perfect. The decorations were chaste and beautiful, the acoustic enjoyment of the theater a relief always, the exhibits splendidly staged, with room for all. No confusion and complete satisfaction to the enterprising exhibitors. "Take it for all in all (perhaps) we ne'er shall look upon its like again." But with popular excursion rates from every part of the country, we will excel it in numbers in 1908.

The educational papers on "School Gardens," by Messrs. Hallock and Du Rie, were among the most interesting of the week and far-reaching in value and importance.

The New York Florists' Club entertained its 130 guests on the special royally and made the short trip a solid two hours of comfort and good cheer. Hundreds of conventionists from all over the country visited New York on Saturday and Sunday.

J. K. Allen trolleyed from Atlantic City to the convention and is now back at headquarters after his long rest, ready for the 6 o'clock every morning record of a quarter century.

Charles D. Ball never was more deservedly elated than with his management of the outing of the Ladies' Auxiliary. They unanimously voted him the handsomest man in the Quaker City.

New York was glad to have one of its bowlers, Wm. Duckham, capture the silver cup, and one of its base-ballists, Phil Kessler, on the winning team, but it is not proud of its team record in the bowling competition and with alleys close to its new club rooms will prepare this winter to take its old place at the head of the procession. It would not have been courteous, anyway, to beat the Philadelphians this year.

The importance of the legitimate sporting provision for the convention was never so much in evidence. The most enjoyable day of the week was the last one, at Fairmount park, where the sports engaged the enthusiastic attention of over 1,000 members of the society. Never was such liberality displayed in the aggregate of prizes. There seemed to be no limit to Philadelphia's bigheartedness. With a fund of over $5,000 behind them, it is no wonder we were overwhelmed. There were enough pleasant memories furnished to last a lifetime, and they will.

Sergeant-at-Arms Bunyard proved to be the right man in the right place, and in all the trying hours of the week never once lost his winning smile. The auxiliary, especially, held up his hands and cheered him in his arduous task.

The Detroit park superintendent could have had the convention if he had persisted, but he generously handed it over to the genial mayor, whose victory made him almost too full for utterance.

The Canadian visitors were heartily welcomed. One came all the way from Winnipeg. Next year we shall expect several hundred Canucks at the Falls. The delegates suggested a joint convention—a happy thought and one likely to be consummated.

Park life in Detroit must be very fattening. Dilger will be in the three hundred class at the present rate of progress in 1908.

John Donaldson, one of the star bowlers of the New York team, was shelved by the heat on Thursday, or perhaps New York would have lifted the cup.

Madison had its history-making quartette, Totty, Herrington, Duckham, Schultz. Can you beat them?

Everyone was glad to see Phil Foley well and thinner. It would be a lonesome convention without Phil, and his side partner, Colonel Green, of Texas! Everybody liked him for himself, with his six feet two inches and three hundred pounds of too solid flesh, and not because he is the son of the richest woman in the world.

Between electioneering and expressions of good will to everybody, F. H. Kramer, the "Beatrice" man, only slept four hours in the four days and came up smiling on Saturday morning, as usual.

For the first time in his career Leuly failed to bicycle to the convention. If it had met in Denver, Leuly would have wheeled it sure.

Patrick O'Mara presented the numerous prizes after the Friday banquet in his inimitable way, having something choice to say to every winner, especially to the ladies, with whom he is such a favorite that he cannot concentrate his affections on any one of them.

Everyone missed Harry Altick, of Dayton.

John Scott came back from Europe just in time for registration and when votes counted.

William Scott, of Buffalo, was well represented by his handsome daughter Nellie, whom everybody loves, and his home-run son Robert, whose batting and catching ability helped so much to achieve victory for the cosmopolitans.

The evergreen display of Bobbink & Atkins was much admired. Pierson's new fern was one of the greatest novelties in a convention which will always be remembered for its surprises.

If everybody goes to Vincent's Harvest Home Festival and Fair, at Cowentown, on September 17, whom he invited, there will be another convention. Two hundred thousand square feet of glass and 200,000 dahlias in over 200 varieties, covering forty acres, are no small attraction.

Winterson's kicking and coaching; at the ball game, kept the big crowd hilarious. Away out in center field Ed's bald head shone effulgently, but his batting was "ausgespielt."

The Wilson boys make a strong trio; John with his new concrete bench invention, Andrew with his famous plant oil, which everybody uses, and Robert with the bon-ton store and greenhouses in Brooklyn. All of them were at Philadelphia. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The turbulent waves of the convention sea have rolled back from this city, leaving a calmness typical of the last days of summer. There is a noticeable improvement in the quality of the asters coming into town, the proportion of really fine stock being larger than at any time since they began arriving. The demand for good flowers is excellent, a few bringing higher prices than at any time during the season. The poor flowers continue to drag. The fact that high prices can be obtained for really choice stock is instanced in the case of Gladiolus America, which is today bringing double the money that even good flowers of other light varieties demand. Dark colored varieties can be had at buyers' prices. Carnations are still scarce, with no immediate prospect of an increase in the shipments. American Beauty roses are coming in quite freely. Their quality is vastly improved by the cool nights and bright sunny weather, and the demand for them is excellent.

Other roses have not as yet improved materially, but few being cut from this season's stock. Greens are in fair demand. There is quite a lot of valley coming in. Much of it is better than usual at this season. Hydrangeas have made their appearance. Hardy phlox is also in the market.

Convention Echoes.

Most of our guests have departed, either for their homes or for the sea-

THE Florists' Supply House of America

We are receiving hundreds of letters, expressing appreciation of the courtesy shown our guests. It was a pleasure to us to entertain the florists who visited this city last week and we are glad to find that they enjoyed being with us, as the following letters prove. They are taken at random from among hundreds we have received:

Washington, D. C., Aug. 24, 1907.
I take pleasure in thanking you for the nice manner in which you entertained our Washington boys. Yours truly, F. H. KRAMER.

New London, Conn., Aug. 24, 1907.
I wish to extend to you my hearty thanks for the very nice entertainment received at your hands on Thursday, the 22nd inst., during the Convention of the S. A. F. & O. H., held at your beautiful city.

I shall never forget all the courtesies received by me as a member from the florists and allied trades of Philadelphia. Yours very respectfully, W. E. PENDLETON.

shore, and the city is no longer in festive garb. Reviewing the convention briefly, it may be said that the attendance was fully equal to that of any previous convention, over 900 names being registered on Thursday, while it is estimated that at least 300 visitors did not register. Of this total number, 1,200, probably one-half came from within a radius of twenty miles of the city, returning to their homes at night, leaving about 600 visitors from a distance. The trade exhibition, which completely filled Horticultural hall, was of high quality and most comprehensive, embracing all the allied industries. The exhibitors state that they did more business than at any previous convention, most of their exhibits being sold entire. The meetings in Broad Street theater, while not always as well attended as they should have been, were most interesting, and were pushed through with businesslike dispatch by President Stewart. Regarding the entertainments, we did our best; whether successfully or not our guests must judge. We only regret that the storm on Wednesday prevented a thorough inspection of the beautiful trial grounds at Riverton. An important factor in the success of any convention lies in meeting kindred spirits, and in this respect last week's convention was eminently successful.

A New Device.

The patent office at Washington, D. C., has just granted a patent to Louis Berger, of this city, for a new machine for "wiring artificial stems in flowers." This machine, which is worked either by a pedal or big electric motor, is designed to wrap the wire around toothpick and flower stem and cut the wire as fast as the flower stems can be placed in position. With its aid Mr. Berger says that he can stem more flowers than any three men can do with their hands in the same time. Such a labor-saving device should prove invaluable to the retailer.

Various Notes.

Samuel S. Pennock sailed for England last Saturday morning. He will join his family in Wales, returning early in October.

I regret to chronicle the departure from this city of W. H. Taplin, for nearly twenty-four years manager for Charles D. Ball, at Holmesburg, Pa. Mr. Taplin leaves on Saturday to accept a similar position with Eugene Daille-douze, a lifelong friend, at Flatbush, Long Island. Mr. Taplin has earned for himself an enviable position in the front rank of palm and fern growers, as well as horticultural writers. His kindly manner made him a great favorite with his fellow members at the Florists' Club. Mr. Taplin's church friends presented him with a silver service a few days before he left. He has the best wishes of all his friends in his new work.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., has some striking novelties in the shape of imitation ivy and grape vine designs for decorative effects; also exquisite little mistletoe and wild roses in bloom in tiny little china pots. Carnations of muslin are most natural, and might be easily mistaken for the real thing at a distance.

Joseph G. Neidinger, who recently increased his wax flower and florists' supply factory by moving to larger quarters, has a very pretty specialty in the shape of cowbells of immortelles, which are meeting with ready sale. Another pretty thing is imitation holly, the leaves and fruit being perfect in form and color. A great improvement has been made in wax flowers, and it is hoped that they will soon be made so durable that the sun cannot affect them. Besides these specialties, the factory force is busily engaged making wicker and willow baskets.

John Hobson, for fifteen years with the William Graham Co., and now in charge at Olney, has resigned his position to accept a position as manager with Charles D. Ball.

The Florex Gardens sent their first Beauties to Eugene Bernheimer last Wednesday. They were sold to Pennock Bros. These flowers were cut from old plants brought over from Edgely. Manager George Samtman is not yet ready to cut from his young stock.

Unfortunately, two of our visitors have been detained here by illness. It is hoped that both will soon improve.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. will move to its new quarters, at 1517 Sansom street, before September 1.

George Hampton, formerly with the Henry F. Michell Co., is now with Joseph G. Neidinger.

John Westcott has fairly earned his three F's—the Finest Fellow in Philadelphia.

Charles E. Meehan will address the Florists' Club next Tuesday evening.

The strenuous efforts of David Rust, in his dual capacity as secretary of the Florists' Club and superintendent of the exhibition, have earned for him well merited praise.

The success of the Philadelphia bowling team, after a spirited contest, is most gratifying; also that of William Robertson, our highest individual score.

William F. Dreer came home from Takitezy, in Maine, and Herbert G. Tull from Waynesboro, N. C., on purpose to assist in receiving their guests at River-ton last week.

Joseph Heacock has returned from the northwest. His search for his son proved fruitless.

M. Rice & Co. made a hit with their novelty tree stump.

Lemuel Ball has an exceptionally well grown lot of kentias this season.

Dr. George Goebel's victory in the shooting tourney was a popular one.

The reunion of the ex-presidents and a few choice spirits, though not on the program, was one of the pleasantest features of the convention week.

R. M. Eisenhart, of Torresdale, reports the violet plants on his place in fine condition for next winter's work.

Our boys have been too busy watching the Athletics win to do themselves justice on the ball field.

Just think of it, the Michell and Whilldin bowling trophies are to remain here!

The Chicago men say that Philadelphia is not a slow town.

Walter P. Stokes has been enjoying his vacation at Mount Pocono.

Joseph Swearer, manager, Holland, Pa., is erecting one, not two houses, as stated last week. PHIL.

WHITE FLY ON MUMS.

We had a bench of cucumbers in our chrysanthemum house, which were covered with white fly. We took them out as carefully as possible, but several got on the chrysanthemum plants and now they are badly infested. You will understand the insect I mean; it is the one which, if you syringe under the leaves or shake the stems, will fly off but come back again. T. L. M.

The only thing that will kill the white fly is the cyanide fumigation. The REVIEW has often printed the formula for this, and here it is again: One pint water, one pine sulphuric acid, and two and one-half ounces cyanide of potash to each 1,500 cubic feet of air space.

Tobacco is useless on this pest unless used in proportion strong enough to injure the plant and used continuously. The insects simply drop to the ground, and, as there is always a current of air along the ground when a house is being fumigated, they suffer little injury. The cyanide is death to them, and to about everything else. C. H. T.

YELLOW SPOTS ON FOLIAGE.

I herewith send you some diseased leaves of Alice Byron mums, to see if you can throw any light on the cause of the disease. The mums were planted about July 4, in a yellow loam which was not very rich, but since planting we have given them a mulch of half rotted cow manure and have watered them twice with cow manure. We water and spray them as you advise in the REVIEW. Perhaps they need a change in manure. If so, what would you advise? The yellow spots appear on the young leaves after they are about a week old.

In the same house with the Alice Byron we are growing Monrovia, Robinson and Halliday, all of which are free from disease and are growing finely. C. S. B.

The most common cause of spots such as these are, on the foliage, is fumigation. When plants are fumigated rather strongly the younger foliage will assume the condition these leaves are in, but unless they are actually burned they come out all right before flowering time. Byron, like Beatrice May and Frank Hardy, spot on the foliage more or less in some soils, but it is not enough to injure the sale of the flowers, as it is hardly noticeable by the time the growth is finished. The manure mentioned, if it has not affected any of the other varieties, would not have any effect on Byron, either. However, if the plants had a nice mulch of half rotted cow manure, it was unnecessary to feed them with liquid so soon.

C. S. B. will know if he has been fumigating or not. If so, use less tobacco next time, and if not, don't give the plants too much water and join the "Don't Worry Club." They will come out all right. C. H. T.

EFFECT OF EXCESSIVE HEAT.

How hot should roses and carnations be kept, namely, Bride, Maid and Enchantress, Lawson, Bountiful, Estelle and Harlowarden? Does it injure carnations to run up to 62 and 68 degrees from 7 o'clock to 10 or later several times a week? If so, in what way? X. Y. Z.

The average night temperature for Bride and Bridesmaid is about 58 degrees, while the carnations should run about 50 to 52 degrees. Of course it will injure carnations to run up to 62 degrees and over during the night. It will cause split calyx, and if it happens too often it will cause a soft, weak growth and weak stems. Especially is this true if the ventilators are closed tight. An abundance of fresh air is one of the greatest tonics you can give a plant, and will counterbalance many abuses to which plants are subjected in the way of high or low temperatures and even in watering and feeding. A strong, robust growing plant will not become surfeited so quickly as one that has been coddled and weakened by a lack of fresh air. There will be times when your carnation houses will run up to 60 degrees and over, with a steam pipe running in each house to keep the atmosphere dry, and if the ventilators are open a few inches no harm will result. Such occasions, however, are not frequent. A. F. J. B.

WHITE MARSH, MD.—R. Vincent, Jr., & Son Co. will make a splendid showing of dahlias when the Ladies' Aid Society holds its harvest home festival at their place September 17 to 20. The Baltimore florists will attend in a body.

ORANGE, MASS.—L. M. Gage's gladioli are doing finely and he is cutting good quantity as well as quality. He says that the novelty gladiolus, Præcox, claimed by the originators to bloom from seed the first year, is a dismal failure with him.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Current Comment.

A slight dullness in social circles during a part of last week is entirely forgotten now, in the rush and excitement incident to what has turned out to be the busiest and most profitable week of the season. The first two or three days of the week were given over to tennis in the daytime and dinners without number in the evenings. The tennis tournaments are held in the Casino, in the vicinity of which are located the stores of such well-known florists as Wadley & Smythe, Siebrecht, Ziegler and Leikens. All of these benefit immensely by the sale of cut flowers during tennis week, as well as by the decorations always called for in greater numbers because of the presence temporarily in Newport of many players from other resorts.

On Tuesday evening Commodore Gerry entertained a large company at dinner. The decorations, which were elaborately and tastefully executed by Arthur Griffin, consisted mainly of allamandas, gloriosas and montbretias. The gloriosas, of which Mr. Griffin is an exceptionally good grower, were very effective.

On Wednesday Prince William, of Sweden, made his appearance, which was the signal for the beginning of a regular round of elaborate events. Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish set the ball rolling with a dinner at Crossways in honor of the royal visitor. The decorations were by Wadley & Smythe and were composed principally of Oncidium varicosum for the centerpieces on the dinner tables and blue hydrangeas and Killarney roses for house decorations. From the dinner given by Mrs. Fish, as well as from dinners given by many other hostesses that evening, the guests went to a ball given in honor of the prince by Mr. and Mrs. Berwind at The Elms. This was in many ways the most notable affair of this season. The decorations, which were elaborate and costly in the extreme, were done by Mr. Butterton, with the assistance of forty florists and gardeners. There were seventy small tables, each of which was adorned with a centerpiece of Killarney roses, which in the aggregate called for the purchase of upward of 6,000 blooms. The temporary structure where these tables were placed was also elaborately decorated with garlands of the same roses and with Asparagus Sprengeri. The table at which sat the prince and the hostess, Mrs. Berwind, was graced with a decoration which in choiceness of material far surpassed the others. It was made of Oncidium varicosum and Adiantum Farleyense. The ballroom, which is of extraordinary grandeur in decoration and furnishings, was simply but appropriately brightened with a few very large vases filled with American Beauty roses. The palm room, which is a grand feature of this palatial residence, had, in addition to beautiful specimen arecas and kentias, a small fountain filled with lotus. On Friday evening the prince was entertained at dinner by Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, where Wadley & Smythe had full swing again and with the usual satisfactory result.

On Thursday the Association of Cemetery Superintendents came to Newport, where the members, together with their lady friends, were entertained in a varied and pleasing manner. On landing, the visitors were escorted by Superintendent McMahon to the Island cemetery, where, after a tour of inspection, an address of welcome was made by Hon. R. S. Franklin, president of the Island Cemetery Association. This concluded, all repaired to Masonic hall, where a collation was well served to the visitors. Before emerging from Masonic hall Superintendent McMahon presented every member of the visiting delegations, as well as every one accompanying, with a collection of post cards of the views of Newport, from the Newport Horticultural Society, an organization that did much in the way of adding to the pleasure of the visitors. A drive through the cottage district and along the ocean drive completed the day's outing.

GEORGE GIBBS, of Clearbrook, Wash., is one of the pioneers in the growing of bulbs in America. Starting alone on a small experimental garden at Fort Belingham, thirteen years ago, he has demonstrated that bulb culture is a profitable industry for florists of the Puget Sound basin. He is one of those who have made it possible to have the choicest bulbs without importing them from Holland.

ALARM is felt over the aster seed crop in the vicinity of Rochester, N. Y., where probably a larger area is grown than anywhere else in America. James Vick's Sons are the principal growers. Charles H. Vick says the season has been excessively dry and that the crop of seed of the early varieties is sure to be materially reduced, but he says that with a few good rains it is yet possible that the late sorts may mature a fair crop of seeds.

CAPE VINCENT, N. Y.—The large warehouses of the Cleveland Seed Co., at the foot of Market street, have been purchased by the Adams & Duford Co., of Chaumont. On account of the farmers in this vicinity being unable to raise peas and beans for several years past, the Cleveland company was obliged to move its headquarters to Avon, N. Y. For this reason the buildings have not been used as extensively as they had been, about the only business done being making split peas.

THERE were two exhibits of Vick's new aster, Hohenzollern Rose, at the S. A. F. convention at Philadelphia last week that attracted much attention. One exhibit was by Vick, the other by the Altimo Culture Co., Canfield, O., and on each table the variety showed up in a fashion to attract the attention of every grower of asters who was present. It pleased the Vick people that the other exhibitor, a large grower of asters for cut flowers, should have only one variety in its display not originated by Vick's. This one was Carlson's purple.

DARWIN TULIPS.

This handsome race of tulips is now exceedingly popular for garden decoration and for cutting. The original stock was the life work of an amateur grower, and was purchased in 1885 by E. H. Krelage & Son, of Haarlem, Holland. It originally consisted of small quantities of many hundred varieties. Some of these were offered to the public in 1889.

Darwin tulips are rather taller and more robust-looking than any other type of tulip. They are really white ground breeder, or mother tulips, that is to say, they are in that stage of their existence which we may compare to the chrysalis state of a butterfly, if we consider the flamed and striped state which we get in the Rembrandts and English to be their ultimate perfection. They are selfs, with but few exceptions. Some catalogues include in their list of Darwin tulips such varieties as Jaune d'Œuf and Sensation, which are both more or less yellow. This is wrong, for there were no bizzarres among the original varieties, and it would be well to keep to this arrangement.

Darwin tulips are too tall, most of them, for bedding, unless the beds are large. They look best in ordinary gardens, according to an English gardeners' magazine, in clumps of from nine to a dozen in the mixed herbaceous border, where the surrounding greenery forms a delightful setting for their brilliant

CATALOGUE BUILDING.

"Of importance hardly inferior to the illustrations," said J. H. McFarland in his address before the Seed Trade Convention at New York, "are the descriptions in the catalogue of what the printer calls the 'copy.' It would not be difficult for me to show some extremely horrible examples of how 'copy' comes to the unfortunate printer, nor to give instances of the way in which the man whose next year's trade is at stake depends on luck and imagination. Most of the leaders, however, have a clear idea as to the preparation of copy. I am glad to see a growing tendency toward reduction of the descriptions and the elimination of flamboyant language. The ideal description covers in the briefest possible form every point that needs to be known about any particular vegetable or flower, fairly commending its merits and not omitting to frankly state its demerits. This ideal description has not yet appeared in any catalogue, although there are several approaches to it in current practice.

"To reduce the constantly expanding general collections to the fewest number of varieties by continually dropping duplications, and to get these items down to a terse and succinct descriptive form, tends not only toward general economy but toward providing more room for the description of specialties. It seems to me that every seedsman with individuality prefers to stand on a comparatively select list, the stocks to supply which he especially safeguards and the merits of which he fully believes in.

"I have before adverted to novelties. They form a fascinating country, of great possibilities and still greater impossibilities, and travel in this mysterious land of horticultural novelties is beset with many trials. Current American practice distinguishes the novelties by separation from the body of the catalogue, by colored paper, by various decorative adornments, by expanded illustrations and yet more expanded descriptions. I can hardly venture to have any concrete ideas as to the value of these differing methods, but I can safely say that the dollar test is the best test after one has applied the touchstone of truth to novelty statements."

Inferior grades bring very little. Carnations continue scarce. A few more are arriving of the new crops, but these cut little figure. Asters continue to be the dominant flower and are more than ample for all needs. In spite of extreme droughts, these are of very fine quality. Sweet peas are nearing the end. Those still coming in are very small and short-stemmed. Gladioli are abundant, but do not sell very well. Liliun speciosum is more plentiful than longiflorum, but enough of each are brought in for requirements. A few auratum are also seen. Candy-tuft, feverfew, cornflowers, scabious and

Various Notes.

The protracted drought has proved quite disastrous to the big truck growers in Belmont, Arlington, Watertown and other noted vegetable growing towns west of Boston. For six weeks no rain has fallen, except in light, scattered showers. In spite of irrigation, which is used by a number of growers, crops have suffered terribly. W. W. Rawson, who had a $15,000 crop of celery last year, says he will not have over a third of that this year. Corn and other vegetables have suffered in like ratio. Wyman Bros. and other large growers say their crops are away below the average and in some cases almost ruined.

Trees and shrubs have suffered as much as vegetables from the drought.
Many are already almost denuded of foliage. Forest fires have done a large amount of damage. Some rain on August 24 happily put out many fires.

Returning delegates from the Philadelphia convention speak in unstinted terms of the warm welcome accorded them in the Quaker City. The temperature was just right and the convention the best ever held. Niagara Falls should prove a popular rallying ground for New Englanders in 1908.

Indications are for a big attendance at the gardeners' and florists' field day at the Bay State Nurseries, North Abington, on August 31. The train will leave South station at 12:43. Dinner will be served on the arrival of the party at 1:30 p. m., after which the nurseries will be inspected.

ful variety for late summer and fall

BEST CUCUMBERS FOR FORCING.

Please state the best variety of cucumber to plant for greenhouse culture.

W. N. T.

There are three distinct types of forcing cucumbers, as the White Spine, the extra long, smooth English type and a half-breed cross of the common White
Spine on the so-called English varieties.
I do not know of any more reason for the name of English cucumber than the calling of our native potato the Irish potato, as there are many different strains of these long, eel-like cucumbers grown in almost all countries of the world. The English gardeners have better success with this type and also find a better market for them, so they are grown almost exclusively in that country and to the highest possible state of perfection. Many have tried to introduce them into the markets in this country, but the people do not take to them and they do not sell for nearly as much money as a nice grade of White Spine only one-half or one-third as large. Almost every grower who tries a house of them, even when the crop is excellent, is sorry for it. It is generally predicted that this type will never be popular in this country. When crossed on the White Spine variety an excellent strain is sometimes obtained, which has the strength of the English parent and a fruit almost exactly like the White Spine, but much larger. Many growers in this country now use some such strain of their own production. But for the majority of greenhouse men there is nothing any more profitable or satisfactory than the common White Spine forcing cucumber, many different strains of which are advertised in the REVIEW. It

Four Grand Novelty Cyclamen

Bridesmaid. New Cyclamen of the "Papilio" variety, with large, well formed flowers of a pure white with a red eye, while the beautifully fringed petals are broadly edged with bright red. Pkt., 50c.

Crimson King. The best of all crimson varieties and strikingly beautiful. Pkt., 50c.

Phoenix. Bright cherry-crimson flowers, freely produced, and rising well above the prettily marked foliage. Pkt., 50c.

Vulcan. The rich crimson color is very striking and contrasts admirably with the pure white of Butterfly. Pkt., 50c.

Springfield, Mass., December 17, 1906.
 In 1905 you sold me some Cyclamen seed that you recommended very highly. These plants are now in bloom, and are the finest Cyclamen I have ever had, and as good as any I have ever seen. The plants are fine and the colors and size of the flowers are great. MARK ATKEN.

used to be next to impossible to buy good seed, but of late years the seedsmen are more careful in their selection of seed for forcing crops where so much loss is possible by the use of poor seed, and any of the reliable seed firms can furnish good seed for greenhouse use.

I give below a brief opinion of the varieties which I have tried, but here I want to say that there are other varieties which I have not tried which may be equal to or better than those mentioned, and that others may not have the same experience with these varieties in different soils and under different conditions and treatment:

Rawson's Hot House Forcing, medium size, very fine and prolific.

Farquhar's Perfection, somewhat larger, perfect in shape and almost as early and prolific as some smaller varieties.

Vaughan's Boston Forcing, medium size, an excellent variety.

Vaughan's Twentieth Century, larger and very fine, but not quite so prolific.

Storrs & Harrison's Forcing, the most prolific of any variety we ever grew, but a trifle light colored and produces many curved fruits. A careful grower can prevent these faults from becoming serious.

Fordhook Famous, a vigorous grower, large size, poor shape and color, not good indoors.

Davis' Perfect, evidently a cross, a strong grower and long-lived variety, remarkably prolific for so large a fruit, but many fruits sport back to the stronger parent and look like the English. Requires more room than other varieties and, although the fruit was excellent and of immense size, I find it failed to produce as many dollars per house as shorter, more prolific ones.

Arlington Improved, very good, ranks among the best medium-sized varieties.

Early Cluster and all black spine varieties are not suitable for forcing.

BORÉALIS.

FORCING RHUBARB.

I wish to force rhubarb for early market, and I cannot afford to build a greenhouse. I want the cheapest possible pit or long, cellar-like structure, heated with stovepipe—overhead, I suppose. Please give directions for filling and planting. I have good, strong two-year-old plants on hand. G. G.

Rhubarb is one of the easiest subjects to force, providing the conditions are right. A greenhouse is not necessary, as it is best forced in darkness. A cellar is as good a place as any for the purpose, only it should be frost-proof if possible, as then the temperature is much easier kept at the proper figure. I doubt, however, if stovepipe would answer to do the heating, as it would be a hard matter to maintain an even temperature. Of course it might be done, if very close attention were paid to the fire, but I think a small hot water plant would more than pay for itself in the end if you intend to make anything like a permanent structure. The temperature required is about 55 degrees, and in a frost-proof structure this would not be hard to maintain.

If your ground is high and dry, so that you are sure your cellar will not flood with water, the best plan would be to make it mainly under ground. Have it well banked up around the sides above ground and the roof well covered with straw or some such material. Provision should also be made for ventilation, so that a little air can be admitted during the warmest part of the day, to sweeten the atmosphere. This is necessary, to prevent your product from having a musty taste.

I don't see that it is necessary to give dimensions here. All you need is head room, so that you can walk along, and your pit may be any size and width that you find it most convenient to construct.

Before commencing to force it is necessary that your roots get a touch of frost. This makes them respond much more quickly and strongly. The best plan is to throw them right out on the surface of the ground some night when there is apt to be about 10 degrees of frost. As a precaution, keep the roots pretty well together and, if the frost is likely to be too hard, throw some covering over them.

In lifting, however, it is well to take all the soil that you can along with your clumps, so that the roots will not be left entirely bare. Next morning the roots should be taken to the forcing quarters and set as closely together as they can be packed. The soil adhering to the roots will be all that is necessary to keep them covered. The most convenient plan is to form them into beds wide enough so that they can be conveniently reached from either side when the product is ready for picking. The beds should be formed over ground and a narrow pathway left between, just wide enough to walk on. Thus a pit seven feet wide would accommodate a 3-foot bed on either side, allowing one foot for a passageway in the center. One twelve feet wide would accommodate a 4-foot bed in the center, with a pathway on each side of it and a 3-foot bed along each of the sides.

As a copious supply of water is needed, it is well to sprinkle the beds every day, rather lightly at first, but more heavily as growth advances. Care should be taken, however, that they are not soaked too much. It is advantageous to use water at the same temperature as the atmosphere of the house. This avoids chilling and also prevents the lowering of the temperature, as would be the case should very cold water be applied.

RAWSON'S HOTHOUSE CUCUMBER

As a forcing Cucumber is one of the largest and most profitable crops of the Market Gardener, it is essential that the very best possible strain should be sown. With this idea in view we have made selections for the past few years from our Rawson's White Spine, which have resulted in a strain about two inches longer and a darker green in color, with a few light spines showing at blossom end. This new strain we confidently believe to be superior to any other on the market. The results we have had at our own greenhouses with the stock conclusively prove the above to be true. ½ oz., 35c; oz., 60c; 4 oz., $1.50; lb., $5.00.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The usual summer dullness prevails and, with the exception of funeral work, there is not much doing here. There are plenty of asters now in the market. These sell all the way from 15 cents to 50 cents per dozen, most of them selling at 35 cents per dozen. Sweet peas are still in bloom and bring the usual prices. Not many carnations are seen as yet.

A few of the growers here have commenced to house their plants. These are not quite so large as in other years, owing to the long drought, which still continues.

Mums are doing well and, judging from present indications, there will be a good supply of them in this section.

R. H. Woodhouse and family have returned from their two weeks' vacation. George N. Borden, Mr. Woodhouse's foreman, has left for a week's outing at Jolly Island, Lake Winnepisaukee.

The list for the flower show to be given by the New Bedford Horticultural Society in Old Home week, August 24 to 31, is out and contains many prizes, etc. The society held its annual clambake on Thursday, August 15, at Brooklawn casino. A goodly number of members sat down to an excellent bake, which was enjoyed by all. W. L.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.—Charles Lewis, Jr., the sixteen-year-old son of Charles Lewis, was recently crushed by some falling timbers in a lumber mill and received injuries which, the doctors say, will probably prove fatal.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. J. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 28d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

THE variegated yews are much hardier and suffer less in winter than those devoid of variegation.

GOOD specimens of blue spruce are worth so much, in consequence of the increased demand, that it seems a very desirable subject for attention.

DES. MOINES, IA.—The Grand View Nursery Co. will erect a commodious brick building for its office and warehouse at East Ninth and Hull streets.

IF balls of generous dimensions are obtainable, large evergreens may and perhaps should be moved in winter, in preference to the spring. Not so, however, with small evergreens.

CEDRUS ATLANTICA makes a beautiful lawn specimen when in a location where it can have room to develop. It seems a pity that this tree should be planted in groups, as it often is, and allowed to get crowded until all noble characteristics of the tree are destroyed.

THERE is not the least doubt that the autumn is the best time to begin moving large specimen deciduous trees and it will also be found good policy to continue work right through the winter, instead of waiting until spring. In winter tree movers have the advantage of frost to aid them in many ways.

TWO NEW ROSES.

Hugh Low & Co., of Enfield, England, report that they have two remarkably fine novelties in the way of roses which will be sent out from England during the coming fall. One of them, which is named J. Lowe, sported in England from Belle Siebrecht. The flower is of the same shape as this latter variety, and the habit of the plant is said to be as free flowering as that of its forerunner. The color of the flower, however, has been described in the Gardeners' Magazine as a glorified Chatenay. It possesses a good odor. It received the award of merit from the Royal Horticultural Society July 9. The other new rose, Baby Dorothy, is a dwarf, free-flowering polyantha, of the same type as Baby Rambler, but is, if anything, freer in habit. The color, that of Dorothy Perkins, will make it a popular bedding and forcing rose for pot work.

GERMAN NURSERYMEN.

About a year ago the project of the formation of a confederation of nurserymen was brought forward. Since that time the representatives of the nursery interests have not been allowed to rest, but it has been repeatedly referred to in the German horticultural press, with the result that the project has taken a definite shape, and at the Mannheim exhibition, where many members of the trade were present, it was decided to form an association with H. Muller, of Langsur, as president. The next meeting will take place at Eisenach in 1908. The matters that will be the first to be discussed are railway tariffs for the dispatch of nursery productions; means by which business expenditure, in view of the rise in wages, can best be reduced; tax on imports; unity in prices for certain plants, and their size and form, as for example roses, avenue trees, ornamental shrubs, etc.; and the existing stocks of these. The principle of the open door will also come under discussion, and on this point the views expressed in general are that there should be no hindrances as regards the trade in nursery stock as between one province and another in the Empire, but the foreigner should be taxed. Then there will be discussions concerning circuit, communal, provincial and school nurseries, and the injury to the trade which results from their competition. The subjects are so like those with which trade associations in the United States and other countries concern themselves that the matter will be of wide interest.

GOOSEBERRIES.

Gooseberries are easily propagated by layering and by cuttings. Layering is done early in summer and its consideration is therefore out of question now. Gooseberry cuttings of almost any length may be taken, but strong, firm wooded ones are the most satisfactory. If the cuttings are taken off close to the branch from which they have sprung, so much the better and the more likely they will be to make good plants. The points should be cut off so as to leave them as cuttings finished ten or twelve inches in length. The buds on the lower end should be cut out and care should be taken that the minute buds at the base are entirely eradicated. The disbudding ought to extend to the height of six inches from the base.

The soil for the cuttings should be moderately rich and fairly moist, otherwise watering will have to be resorted to. The cuttings should be planted in lines one foot apart and about six inches between each other in the row. Probably the best way of putting the cuttings in the soil is to dig a trench by the side of the line and place the cuttings along the side of the trench to a depth of about four inches, pressing the soil close to the base of the cutting. It may be noted that roots are emitted from any part of the cutting below ground; then it may be presumed that the deeper the cutting is inserted the more roots will be produced. This is true, but still it has been observed that roots produced along a great length of cutting are not so vigorous and effective as those produced near the leaves.

Layering gooseberries is a sure and safe method, although the plants so propagated are not so handsome as those propagated from cuttings. Propagation of gooseberries by suckers is sometimes adopted, but the method is objectionable because plants so raised are likely to produce suckers in turn, which is always objectionable in gooseberry plants.

NURSERYMEN OF TEXAS.

[Address of E. W. Kirkpatrick, president of the Texas Nurserymen's Association, at the recent meeting at College Station.]

In this, our eighth annual session of Texas nurserymen, we meet for mutual aid in the important part we perform in making Texas a most desirable abiding place.

Our relations and obligations to each other are numerous—our duty to the public is fraught with great responsibility. Much of the prosperity and happiness of Texas people depends upon the work of nurserymen. The character and value of our future orchards, vineyards, parks and other plantings will largely be influenced by the work of the nurserymen. This is a momentous responsibility, which should be discharged with utmost fidelity and discriminating judgment.

In these annual meetings we may take wise counsel with each other in discharge of our exalted duty. Our usefulness will be limited by the number of our actual membership. Every honorable and energetic nurseryman should be cordially invited to cast his lot with us. To join this association is a valuable privilege and urgent duty. In all our varied work the leading motive should be the serving of our patrons. If we take care of our friends then we may rest assured our interests will be subserved.

For many years it has been apparent that many varieties of fruit trees and plants have been declining in potency for developing both tree and fruit. The effect has a cause, and the nurserymen should seek it and provide the remedy. The importance of this subject appears to call for a standing committee whose duty it should be to investigate the cause of low vitality in trees and plants and to make reports at our annual meetings. It may be found that our methods of selecting seeds, scions and soils, also of planting, cultivating, digging and handling stock have gradually undermined the life and power of trees and plants until they have become degenerate.

Many other vital questions are constantly arising for our consideration. Our committees should have our cordial support. Legislation bearing upon the dissemination of insects and diseases demands wise and careful consideration. Transportation companies discriminate against Texas nurserymen as compared with nurserymen in other states, in making rates, and this abuse calls for an effort toward relief. The questions of grading stock, maintaining a reasonable scale of prices, both wholesale and retail, are of first importance. Unparalleled prosperity abounds in this favored country and the nurserymen merit a goodly share. In bonds of sympathy and harmony we may hope for the acme of usefulness and success.

HANGING BASKET DEMAND.

The demand for hanging baskets for room decorations has within the last few years been greatly reduced, so that at the present time there are but few of the mixtures that were so common a few years ago. A combination of ferns, begonias, coleus, geraniums, tradescantia and moss was the usual proposition, and these were indiscriminately planted in a painted soft wire receptacle, which at the best lasted usually only a few weeks, and afterward, when the rusty wire collapsed and the rotten moss fell out, they were distinctively not objects of beauty and were soon relegated to the rubbish heap. But in spite of this, if judgment is used in the preparation of hanging baskets, they can be made very attractive and lasting.

From time immemorial hanging baskets have been made of iron wire and dipped in green paint. The life of such an article is usually about four or five months, after which the wire rusts and the basket falls apart. Therefore, to begin with, if the basket be of wire see that it is galvanized. It costs but a trifle more and lasts for years. Next, use judgment in the selection of plants. If the article is intended for porch use or to hang in an exposed outside situation, it is ridiculous to mix ferns, begonias and other soft-wooded stock and expect any permanent results. Plant a dwarf growing palm in the center and around it some variegated ivies or hardy ivy geraniums and with these serviceable and pretty effects can be made that will last for years.

The Asparagus Sprengeri has come into great favor within the last few years and when planted in a basket there is nothing more serviceable, provided the situation is not too drafty and sufficient water is given to insure an even growth. This well-known plant is more successfully grown in the open usually than inside, as it abhors drafts and wants considerable sunlight. It will grow indefinitely, however, in a small receptacle and this is a great point in its favor. Asparagus plumosus makes a splendid basket plant as well, for inside growing.

In ferns the several kinds of nephrolepis are the most hardy. Nephrolepis Bostoniensis and Nephrolepis Piersoni are the most satisfactory up to date. They are both hardy with us if grown in a sheltered situation that is not drafty, and are easily the most graceful and long lived plants to use in the fern line.

A mistake is usually made in that hanging baskets are made too large and as a consequence they become too heavy when watered and are very unwieldy to handle. A 10-inch, 11-inch or at the most a 12-inch basket is the most satisfactory size to lift and is fully large enough to accommodate growing plants for several years, provided the watering is carefully looked after. Baskets should be dipped in a tub and let soak for a few minutes and not watered from the top, as it is almost impossible to give them sufficient moisture in this way.

Combinations of ferns, begonias and variegated ivies are the most satisfactory plants for inside growing where a mixture of plants is desired, and when judgment is used in the selection they Horticultural Society.

Last week our Horticultural Society held its sixth annual show and, much to our surprise, it proved the best to date. We have been suffering from a prolonged drought and did not expect such an exhibition. This show is mainly amateur and the trade exhibits do not call for much mention. The Landsdowne Floral Co. and Flewins' Gardens took first and second, respectively, for extensive displays of perennials.

Sweet peas and gladioli are always a strong feature. It would pay any sweet pea fancier to attend this show. In no place on this continent can such peas be seen, either for novelty or quality. Peas not yet in commerce were shown. Probably a few remarks on the newer varieties will be of use. To my mind Helen Lewis and George Herbert run first for size and gorgeous coloring. These were both shown with stems eighteen to twenty inches long, and strong in proportion. Both these are of the Countess Spencer type. In fact, this type so eclipsed the older forms that they must soon disappear. Frank Dolby takes the place of Radnor or Hamilton. Nora Unwin, a little bit thin, beats Dorothy Eckford, but Etta Dyke, a much crimped white Spencer, beats Nora Unwin. A local white Spencer was also promising. Phenomenal outclasses Maid of Honor and all that family. The pink forms of Spencer are now so numerous that it seems to me the very growers themselves could not distinguish between Mrs. Harcastle Sykes, Clive Bolton, Paradise, Mrs. A. Watkins and several more of the same ilk. Queen Alexandra is a fine scarlet and does not burn, but it will only produce three flowers to a stem, while King Edward usually has four. Henry Eckford is a lovely shade of orange, but burns very badly and needs protection from the sun's rays.

H. Bevan won the championship for sweet peas and the National Sweet Pea Society's (English) medal. F. B. Pemberton won the championship for gladioli. Mrs. Croft again exhibited her wonderful ferns and F. B. Pemberton

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business continues quiet, with some signs of awakening in the near future. There was quite a spurt of funeral work the first part of the week, but even trade in that line has dropped amazingly. There is no excess of inside stock of any kind. Fancy carnations are scarce and are eagerly bought up by the stores. All kinds of whites are in demand, as there has not been enough to fill the retailers' orders for several weeks. Lawson and Estelle are beginning to show the effects of thrips for the first time this season, but the new crop will soon be in season and there will be but little trouble.

Roses, especially whites, are very scarce and those that are shown are of poor quality. Quite a lot of Maids and Testout are being brought into town, but they are of inferior quality and do not net much for the growers. We have seen no good Beauties for many weeks and from appearances of the stock it will be quite a while before they will amount to much. Asters are a glut and the quality of them is good. The prices are low and they hardly pay the growers to handle them. A few early mums have appeared. Sweet peas are getting very short of stem and are of little use, except in funeral work. Gladioli and dahlias are a drug and there is almost no demand for any kind of outside stock.

Valley and Japanese lilies are plentiful. The former moves slowly, while the lilies are in better demand and fairly well bought up. They net the growers from $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen stems.

The Market.

Business is much the same as reported last week. There is very little doing and funeral work constitutes the main portion of that. Carnations continue scarce. Roses are fairly plentiful and selling well. American Beauties are in much heavier supply and there is a fair demand for them. Asters still are in heavy supply, but it looks as if the end of the oversupply is in sight and as if they would begin to bring something near what they are worth. Gladioli are a drug and it is pretty hard to move them, but the supply is also showing signs of a let-up and within a week they ought to be selling better. There is no demand for dahlias, though some very fine stock is seen. Something white is what is wanted and the dahlias are mostly colored. Smilax and asparagus are scarce. Sprengerii is equal to the demand, while ferns, galax and leucothoe sprays are in abundance.

DETROIT.

The Market.

This city is suffering from a severe dry spell, the bad effects of which are telling on the quality of all outdoor stock.

The last few weeks have been so dull that they will no doubt go down in history. About all that has been doing around the stores is fancy work and reading. This will hardly pay expenses, but better times are coming.

The condition of the stock remains about the same as last reported. Some good Brides and Maids have put in their appearance; they are still short-stem, but the flowers are of good quality. Carnations are entirely off the list at the present time. Some very good asters are on tap. Of course many are going to waste, owing to the dullness of the times. Cold storage lilies and Lilium lancifolium are quite plentiful. Smilax, asparagus, ferns, etc., are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The left-behinds at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange experienced considerable lonesomeness the last two weeks, with most of the regular visitors out of town.

B. Schroeter and his wife celebrated their thirtieth wedding anniversary August 22. B. Schroeter, Jr., has been visiting the Thousand Islands and taking a trip up the beautiful St. Lawrence river.

Mrs. G. H. Taepke is visiting friends in several cities in western Michigan.

Last year, at Dayton, the Detroit bowlers brought home a consolation prize, but, judging from the present report, it is doubtful if they have even as much as qualified for the booby prize at Philadelphia.

Alfred Roegner, of Troy, Mich., is planning to build a small house for violet culture. This will be but a starter, providing the venture proves profitable.

Many fine gladioli are on the market, but there seems to be but little demand for them this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Breitmeyer were amongst the first of the Detroit crowd to return home.

G. H. Taepke's new houses are rapidly nearing completion. The glass is already in place and it will be only a matter of a few days until all is finished.

Most of the Detroit delegates have returned from the convention city. The majority spent some time at the Jamestown exposition, returning home via New York. All are highly elated over the good time they had. H. S.

REVERSION OF PIERSONI FERNS.

What makes my ferns, bought for Piersoni, revert back to the old Boston type on a part of nearly every frond? Should the true Piersoni do this?

L. R. K.

Piersoni ferns, and in fact all of the newer varieties possessing the multiple pinnæ, are liable to revert to the original Nephrolepis Bostoniensis and no care in their culture seems to eradicate the tendency.

As soon as these reversion fronds appear, pinch them out. Give plenty of pot room and keep a low temperature—52 to 56 degrees.

RIBES.

BEST NATURAL FERTILIZERS.

Is not liquid cow manure equal to sheep manure if used properly, and much cheaper when cow manure can be had for $1.25 a two-horse load?

X. Y. Z.

If you can get cow manure at the price you mention, you can get nothing better to use for enriching your soil. Of course you use bone meal with it. Sheep manure is an excellent plant food, and when feeding is done regularly it is a good change for the plants, to use it about every fourth time. While it is a good thing to have on the place in limited quantity, yet it is not indispensable. Many successful growers do not use it at all when they can get plenty of cow manure. My advice would be to stick to the cow manure as closely as is found practical and use the sheep manure only as a change of diet.

If you so much money would make,
 That to pile it, you'd need a big rake;
 Then to Aschmann you'll scurry,
 And buy in a hurry
 All the plants your benches will take.

What do you think; when will you start in?
DO IT NOW. Waiting means suicide. I always act as quickly as I think, and have been successful; learn and do it likewise.

ARAUCARIAS our specialty. Watch us grow.

1907 is our 12th anniversary in a successful career in the importation, growing and shipping of those well-known and well admired evergreen decorative plants.

The Araucaria Excelsa, Robusta, Compacta and Excelsa Glauca. Our importation this spring, 1907, has swollen up to the enormous amount of 6,000. More are coming on with the azaleas, Sept. and Oct. By buying now your plants will grow into money 100 per cent in 2 or 3 months. Next in rank come our Nephrolepis or Ferns, of which we have only the best selling varieties. A big lot of Boston, Elegantisima, Whitmanii and Scottii. Have 3 large houses full in all salable sizes; all pot-grown, not bench grown. Our ferns are not forced or grown in shady houses, but were grown in sunny houses; ventilators open day and night. Such treatment makes hardy, stiff fronds and strong, stout plants. Can be shipped 5,000 miles without injury in transportation.

Now is the best time to ship; as you can ship safely by freight.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Trade for this time of the year is keeping up nicely. Funeral work is keeping up fairly well and a few wedding orders are booked. Roses are still arriving in good quantities. Carnations are getting rather short in supply and the stock is a little poor. Gladioli and asters can be had in large quantities. Phlox is plentiful, the white varieties being the most called for. Dahlias are still coming in very slowly and the quality is poor. Ferns are making their appearance. The supply of greens of all kinds is enough to meet the demand.

Various Notes.

Notices are now being sent out by the Ladies' Aid Society for the Harvest Home Festival and Fair to be held at Richard Vincent, Jr., & Son Co.'s, White Marsh, Md., September 17 to 20. Special trains will leave each day at 11:50 a. m. from Camden station, returning leaving Cowenton at 5:13 and 7:13 p. m. The special days will be Tuesday, September 17, Gardeners' Club day; Wednesday, visitors' day; Thursday, church day; Friday, school day. The attractions will include the largest greenhouse in the state, containing over 200,000 feet of glass, and the entire plant illuminated by electric lights at night; and 200,000 dahlias in over 200 distinct varieties. The fields cover over forty acres. The cut blooms will be shown in their large warehouse and packing department, covering over 3,000 feet of floor space, and will be especially arranged for effect, with more than 200 varieties arranged in their different classes.

F. Seidlich, of Woodlawn, Md., is installing a new water system. The tank holds 2,000 gallons and will be twenty-four feet high.

Leonard Lancaster, who has been conducting a florists' business at Irvington, has done away with the greenhouses, but his store is still open. He has taken a position with Lohr & Fritze, Irvington.

W. Teipe's greenhouses look like new. They have been overhauled and painted throughout. He has some mums coming on that look promising.

E. Holden, of Catonsville, Md., has been shipping some extra fine English cantaloupes to Newport, averaging seven to ten pounds, grown under glass.

Lohr & Fritze, of Irvington, have erected a new rose house, 35x150 feet. The Wolf Machine Co. furnished the ventilating apparatus and the other material was furnished by the Lord & Burnham Co. There are six solid beds. They will grow Maids, Gates, Ivory, Richmond and Bride. A seventy horse-power steam boiler will later be installed and will furnish their entire plant with heat.

J. L. T.

RACINE, WIS.—R. J. Mohr, who was formerly a florist here, has been given a discharge in bankruptcy by the United States court at Milwaukee.

Remember This

We have a right to request that you read this advertisement. During the months of August, September and October it is time to bench your carnation plants from the field. It follows that you must have a Carnation Support.

DESCRIPTION.

No. 1.—The rings can be immediately removed from the stakes by a simple twist of the wire ring. The stakes alone can be used, like the regular galvanized stakes. No. 2.—Rings attached and placed to fit any size plant. Open and closed. No. 3.—The Support as it appears when in use. H—A broad base that holds firmly to the soil—keeps the support standing always erect. E, F, G—Rings closed. C—Ring open.

Our Common Sense Carnation Support

takes nothing for granted, for in its use, the past two years in our establishment of 200,000 sq. feet of Modern Greenhouse Construction, and likewise in other greenhouses in this vicinity, it has shown that it will do the work it is intended to do. The illustration shows a construction that any grower can understand—a practical proof of Reliability in practice and economy in its utility. Completely adjustable to any size plant. The rings are removable at will, while the stake affords a broad base that firmly holds to the ground and keeps the Support erect.

Our Common Sense Carnation Support is in a Class by Itself

Buy a sample 100 two-ring Supports for $1.60 and compare it with others you have now in use.

Get away from the stringing method that takes time and money.

Greenhouse Heating.

HEAT FOR PROPAGATING HOUSE.

Kindly tell me how much pipe is required for a propagating house 12x90 feet. This propagating house is inclosed by other buildings on all four sides, and the only exposure is the roof. The house has a single-span roof and the height is five feet at the lowest point and eight feet at the highest point. There are two beds, one five feet in width and the other three feet in width. How much 4-inch pipe would be required to heat this with hot water in New York climate?

J. Y.

With a propagating house so thoroughly protected as the one described, it should be practicable to heat it sufficiently for roses and other high-temperature stock by the use of five lines of 4-inch pipe. If three of these can be placed under the wide bench and two under the narrow one, I think the service will prove satisfactory. If, for any reason, more intense bottom heat is desired in any portion of the benches, this can be secured by inclosing the bench for the space desired to be carried with increased bottom heat.

L. C. C.

PIPING IN MICHIGAN.

I wish to know how much radiation it will take to heat my house, 16x50 feet, with side walls four feet and a half high, and also how many runs of 2-inch pipe it will take. There are three benches, the center one six feet wide. I am going to put the boiler in my basement, which is seven feet and a half deep. The distance from the boiler to the greenhouse is about forty feet, twenty feet of that distance being in the basement. The chimney has an 8½-inch square opening and is forty feet high from the basement, which, I think, will give plenty of draft. I wish to get a boiler rated at 1,000—a Wilks boiler, I think.

F. L. T.

Your house, to maintain a temperature of 65 to 70 degrees, will require 350 square feet of radiation. To provide this in the house with 2-inch pipe, 560 lineal feet of pipe will be required. If eleven runs of 2-inch pipe are installed and arranged in two or three coils, one pipe in each coil serving as a flow and the others as returns, there will be no difficulty in heating the house with a boiler of the size suggested, provided the pipes are properly installed and graded.

HEAT FOR BEDDING STOCK.

I am about ready to pipe a greenhouse 20x50 feet. It measures twelve feet to the ridge, and the side walls, which are concrete, are three feet high. The house runs north and south. A shed 18x19 feet is attached to the south end; the north end is closed up. The house is fully exposed on all sides. Kindly give your advice as to how to arrange the heating system. The boiler has two 3-inch openings on top for flow pipes and four openings for return pipes. The boiler stands about five feet below the level of the house, which has a fall of six inches from north to south. The pipes will be under the benches at the east and west sides. I wish to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees, with an outside temperature that sometimes goes down to 20 degrees below zero. The house will be used mostly to grow bedding stock. C. G. A.

If you contemplate heating the house in question with hot water it will be well to install a boiler with a rated capacity of from 750 to 1,000 feet. The house, to carry a temperature of 60 degrees, should have 400 square feet of radiation. This can be installed by using thirteen lines of 2-inch pipe, which can be fed either from a single 2½-inch flow under the ridge or two 2-inch lines on the pur-lins. The expansion tank should be placed above the boiler, elevated as much as is practicable—from twelve to fifty feet—and connected to the main return near the entrance to the boiler. The expansion tank should be provided with an overflow pipe, but this cannot be connected with the heating system. If the tank is large and elevated there will be little need for the overflow with careful firing. The flow pipe or pipes should be carried to the far end of the house, and there branched to drop to and connect with the returns under the benches.

UNSATISFACTORY PIPING.

* I have three parallel greenhouses, located in central Kansas. My heating plant was installed about a year ago, by the city plumber, who declared it to be the latest and best hot water system and guaranteed it to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees with the outside temperature at zero. However, a season's trial has proved the system to be unsatisfactory. Had it not been for the mild winter, we should have been frozen out.

The houses extend north and south. There is a stone wall, three feet high, on the west side of the range. The wall on the east side consists of a foot and a half of stone and a foot and a half of glass. The three houses are separated by stone walls, three feet high. The floor level of the houses is two feet and a half below the level of the ground. The boiler, which is six feet below the ground level, is at the north end of the middle house. The west house is 12x100 feet, and seven feet to the ridge. It is piped with four 2-inch flows and one 2½-inch return. The middle house, which is intended for carnations, is 20x90 feet, and ten feet to the ridge. In this house a 4-inch main flow, running to the west, is reduced to a short piece of 3-inch pipe before reaching the header, which separates into three 2½-inch flows and one 3-inch flow, extending to the manifold at the south end of the house. From the manifold, three 3-inch pipes and one 2½-inch pipe run northward to the return at the north end of the house. The east house is 12x75 feet, and seven feet six inches to the ridge. It is piped on each side with three 2-inch flows and one 2½-inch return. These pipes are placed, one above the other, on the sides of the house. The lowest of the three flows never gets as hot as the others, and the returns are almost under ground, throwing out very little heat. R. M.

The west house, 12x100 feet, has about one-half as much 2-inch pipe as would be necessary to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees. It would make the plant more efficient if the flow pipe were carried to the far end of the house before entering the manifold. The system is a long one for hot water without a circulating pump, and with the present arrangement I should expect to get several degrees of difference in temperature in the two ends of the house.

The carnation house has sufficient pipe for a temperature of 60 degrees, but, making an indirect circulation, it is not more than one-half as efficient as it would be with an independent flow for each coil. The flow is carried to the far end of the house before entering the manifolds. The present arrangement puts all the cool water at one end of the house and makes one coil much cooler than the other, which is not necessary.

The east house, 12x75 feet, has sufficient pipe to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees, but the same criticism holds here as in the carnation house. If you are not getting enough heat from the radiation, it is possible that even the modifications I have suggested may not remedy the trouble. Possibly the boiler is too small or the expansion tank may not be sufficiently elevated and not connected in the most efficient manner. The boiler should have a rated capacity of at least 2,000 feet of radiation; the plant actually requires a little over 1,600, on a 60-degree basis. It is likely the plant can be very easily changed into an efficient one by increasing the piping in the west house and running the risers, as suggested, direct from the boiler to the far end of the house, to return by the manifolds already installed. L. C. C.

CITY PRESSURE FOR HOT WATER

I would like to know if I can keep my greenhouse warmer by using city pressure, thus raising the pressure to seventy-five pounds. I have an open tank, ten feet above the boiler, and force water with a pump. State what difference there would be, if any, in using seventy-five pounds of pressure instead of using the open tank. C. R.

While the increased pressure will make a few degrees of difference in the temperature of the water, I doubt the advisability of attempting to use city pressure when it runs up to seventy-five pounds. If you can use a reducing valve and bring it down to fifteen or twenty pounds, it will be safer and almost as efficient. Few hot water boilers are safe under seventy-five pounds of pressure. L. C. C.

PAINTING STEAM PIPES.

I am going to paint the steam pipes in my houses, and some time ago I saw something in the REVIEW as to what was best to paint with so that the plants would not be injured. I have gone through a number of the old issues of the REVIEW, but have been unable to find the article. I will be much obliged to you if you will inform me on this subject. G. G. W.

Unless it is absolutely necessary for some reason, I would not advise painting the pipes in a greenhouse. Rusty pipes are more efficient radiators than painted or galvanized ones. If it is necessary to paint them, give them a coat of asphaltum varnish sometime when the houses are empty, and heat them up so as to drive off all volatile matter before the houses are filled with tender plants. PITTSBURG.

The Market.

A general slump in business struck this community the last week and is still hanging on. That last week was the worst week of the season is the report of the retail dealers generally. The wholesalers, however, do not complain, except at the price at which gladioli are selling. It does not pay them to handle the stock, as the boxes for packing cost more than their commission on the sales. Asters are not much better.

Various Notes.

A few of the people who attended the convention are home with very favorable reports.

The old Gibb's greenhouses are now in possession of Patrick Maier, who is planting them with chrysanthemums and carnations. He also will force lilies, hyacinths, tulips and other flowers for the wholesale trade entirely.

Randolph & McClements have two baseball teams in the field; the store team, captained by John McClements, and the greenhouse team, captained by Mr. Winner. They are open to play any other florist team in the country. Address the captains.

The boys are pretty generally back at their posts and vacations are a thing of the past for another year.

Gladioli are being sold in this market as cheap as 50 cents per hundred. Lots of money in that.

Lloyd Swarthout again has taken hold of his greenhouses at Washington, Pa., and will grow vegetables. Joseph Seaman & Co., who had Mr. Swarthout's houses, having purchased the Washington Floral Co.'s plant, are now planting it with carnations and such other stock as they handle in their retail store.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is now receiving very good Kaiserin, Killarney and Chatenay roses from the Pittsburgh Rose & Carnation Co. Hoo-Hoo.

PANA, ILL.—R. O. Henderson, of Madison, Wis., has leased the Shaffer greenhouses and took possession of them August 1. Mr. Henderson's family arrived with him and they will live in the Shaffer residence, Mr. Shaffer removing to Peoria.
